CHICAGO HAS PROBLEM BIG AS WAR BABIES

LAW LIGHT ON FATHERS

BY HENRY M. HYDE.

The United Kingdom of Great Britain, Scotland, and Ireland is vastly excited over the question of "war babies." It is estimated that largely as the result of the war there will be more than 37,000 illegitimate babies born during the year ending with Aug. 1.

To see that these children, born under the "bar sinister," are properly taken care of and are given a fair start in life, a great movement has been started in England, with Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst at its head. The emergency is considered one of the most critical which the British empire has ever faced.

The United Kingdom has a total population of 45,000,000. The estimated number of illegitimate babies born during the year is one to each 1,216 people. And the United Kingdom is in the midst of the greatest war in history.

Situation in Chicago.

Chicago has a population of 2,500,000. Nobody knows how many illegitimate children are born in Chicago during a normal year. The most dependable estimate is that of the Juvenile Protective association, which, after a careful investigation, came to the conclusion that 3,000 illegitimate children were born each year in the registered hospitals of the city alone. That is one to every 830 people. How many are born outside can only be guessed at.

Take the lowest figure of 3,000 a year. If the percentage of illegitimacy was as great in England as it is in Chicago there should be 54,000 illegitimate children born in the United Kingdom instead of 37,000, which seems to be the highest and most alarming estimate.

In other words, according to these estimates, illegitimacy is nearly twice as common in Chicago under normal conditions as it is in Great Britain under the stress of war.

Chicago's Double Duty.

If there is good reason why the people of England should be rousing themselves to provide decent care for the "war babies," there is twice as much reason why Chicago should make proper provision for the care of its vastly greater percentage of illegitimates.

There are very few places in the world where the law makes as small provision for the child unfortunate enough to be born out of wedlock as in the great state of Illinois.

The best an unmarried mother can hope to get in Chicago by way of provision for her child is a total of $550. To get that she must go into open court and, facing the shame and humiliation of pitiless publicity, prove beyond reasonable doubt the paternity of her child.

$550 All She Can Get.

Provided she goes successfully through this ordeal, she may get an order from the court compelling the father to pay her at least $25 every three months for the first year and $12.50 every three months thereafter until the total of $550 is paid.

The law also provides that when the child reaches the ripe and mature age of 10 years the responsibility of the father for its support shall entirely cease. After that age, in the wisdom of the legislature of the state of Illinois, a child born out of wedlock is supposed to be capable of supporting itself. At any rate, its father need bother about it no longer.

On the basis of $550, to be paid within ten years—the legal maximum—it figures out at the merest trifle over $1 a week. How far that will go toward the support of a child during the first ten years of its life people may estimate for themselves.

Settled Outside of Court.

Most cases of bastardy are settled outside of the Court of Domestic Relations. Last year the total number tried was about 800, there being a decided increase within the last few months. The law provides that an unmarried mother may not accept less than $400 in a settlement out of court.

When the amount fixed by mutual consent is less than that the settlement must be ratified by the County court. Judge

Judicial Ticket Recommended to Voters at Monday's Election

The candidates before whose names a cross is placed in the list below are those indorsed by the Chicago Bar association.

"The Tribune" recommends these candidates to its readers as having the preference of the most authoritative professional judgment which the voter will be safe in following.

The names are given in the same order as they will appear on the ticket so that voters, if they so desire, may clip this list and take it into the voting booth as a convenient guide and prevent mistakes. The Socialist and Independent candidates are not given, as none was indorsed by the Bar association.

It is important to note that where one group of candidates runs against another similar group, as the groups above of twenty candidates each, the election law is that the twenty receiving the highest number of votes win.

It is permissible under the law in such case to vote for two candidates, one Republican and one Democrat, whose names are printed opposite each other on the same line.

It is permissible to vote for less than twenty, but if you vote for more than twenty the ballot is not counted for any of the persons voted for in such group.

MISS HELEN DICKSON JAMES WEDS PROF. FRAZER JUNE 9.

Bridegroom-to-Be Gave Up $4,000 Job Under Girl's Father at U. of I. to Make Her His Wife.

Miss Helen Dickson James, daughter of President Edmund J. James of the University of Illinois, will be married on June 9 to Prof. George Enfield Fraser, who gave up his position as controller of the university in order to make her his wife. Announcement of the date was made yesterday by President James.

When Prof. Fraser asked President James for his daughter's hand, the latter, who has decided views on nepotism, replied he would be very glad to have the pedagogue for a son-in-law, but that no relative could have a place on the faculty of which he was president. It was a case of choosing between his $4,000 job and Prof. Fraser chose the girl.

J. I. Zook, treasurer of Montgomery Ward & Co., read of the professor's dilemma, admired his attitude, and, although he had never met him, offered him a position with the company. Prof. Fraser accepted the job, which is said to pay more than the university post.

According to President James, the wedding will take place at his residence. It will be private owing to the recent death of the bride-to-be's mother.

BOTH PARTIES CLAIM BENCH POLLS VICTORY

National Issues Injected Into Ballot Contest of Tomorrow.

PREDICT A LIGHT VOTE.

The judicial campaign closed last night with both Republican and Democratic party managers claiming a sweeping victory tomorrow.

In neither camp, however, is the forecast of victory based on anything accurate in the way of figures because of the general apathy that has characterized the canvass right up to the last minute.

The small vote, comparatively, that will be polled tomorrow carries the big degree of uncertainty. The nonpartisan sentiment that has been encouraged in this campaign, and particularly the movement among all classes to support the sitting judges, both Republican and Democratic, has helped to confuse the situation for the party managers.

G. O. P. Sees Victory.

Despite all these aspects of the situation, the Republican managers are banking on the combined Republican and Progressive votes to put over the entire ticket.

From an organization standpoint the Republican chiefs claim much the better of the argument. The factional troubles, however, which have split the Democratic ranks also have been working some danger to the Republican household, it was admitted by the responsible spokesmen last night.

Just how far Mayor Thompson's influence will spread in the election on Monday is one of the unknown quantities. He has refused from the first to speak for the Republican ticket. He has given out formal statements that he could not speak for the Republican ticket, since he was committed to the nonpartisan proposition, and in any event would support the sitting Democratic judges as well as the Republicans.

Inject National Issues.

In the Cook county campaign both parties have injected national issues. The Republicans have said something about returning prosperity with the election of a president next year and have emphasized the moral effect of a straight party victory here Monday. They also have laid great stress on the reuniting of the Republicans and Progressives and the movement to present a solid front to the enemy next year.

The Democratic managers have injected the personality and record of President Wilson into the campaign. They have circulated campaign buttons across which is written the name of the president in large letters and the injunction: "Stand by Democracy."

Vote Throughout State.

Judicial elections will be held Monday throughout Illinois, at which the entire seventeen Circuit Court districts will elect three judges each and five of the seven Supreme Court districts will elect members to the high tribunal.

The only two districts in the Supreme division which do not elect are the Fourth and Fifth, in which Justice George A. Cooke of Aledo and Justice Charles Craig of Galesburg were elected two years ago.

In the First district, southern Illinois, Justice Albert Watson of Mt. Vernon, appointed by Gov. Dunne to fill the vacancy caused by the death of the late Justice Alonzo E. Vickers of East St. Louis, is the Democratic candidate. Warren W. Duncan af Marion is the Republican candidate.

In Second District.

In the Second district Justice William M. Farmer of Vandalia, Democrat, is opposed by Col. William F. Bundy of Centralia, and behind whom the Republicans are waging an especially hard fight.

In the Third district Frank K. Dunn, Republican, of Charleston, is having a hard fight with Louis Fitz Henry of Bloomington, who is being supported by the Democrats in a sort of reunited party throughout the district.

Here in the Seventh district Justice Carter, Republican, has no opposition.

City Hall Men to Scratch.

The injection of the state fight by the city hall forces in behalf of Col. Frank O. Lowden for governor also has served to split the Republican ranks in Cook county somewhat, it is admitted by the chiefs.

That the city hall forces will not vote

TWO BOYS DROWN ON FIRST SAIL

Third Occupant of a Capsized Boat Clings to the Craft and Is Rescued.

Two boys lost their lives in the lake off Diversey beach yesterday when a sail boat capsized less than 200 feet from the shore. Eighteen employés of the Lincoln park board, working on a breakwater near the beach, watched the battle against death. As far as could be learned not one of them made an effort to go to the boys' assistance.

Fifteen year old Harold Jacobson of 2127 Cleveland avenue, a companion of the victims, was saved by Harry Collins, a member of the Lincoln Park Yacht club, and William Stift of the Lincoln park police.

Those who lost their lives were Arthur Anderson, 17 years old, of 2110 Cleveland avenue, and John Adams, 18, of 2129 Cleveland avenue.

Their First Sail.

The boat belonged to the Anderson boy. He had just finished painting it and calking the sides with the aid of young Adams when they started out on their first sail. Adams had promised his mother before leaving home that he would not go out on the lake.

When the boat was about 200 feet from shore it sprung a leak. Adams, who was holding one end of the sail, became excited and let go of it. The sail swung around, bellied in the wind, and capsized the boat.

"We can swim," Anderson shouted to the Jacobson boy, "and you can't, so you hang on to the boat."

Two Go Under.

Young Jacobson did as he was told and clung to the side of the overturned craft while Anderson and Adams started swimming. Adams had gone but a few strokes when he was attacked with a cramp and went under.

Anderson, who was making for the shore by long strokes, turned and swam to where his companion had disappeared. He groped about the water for a moment or so, trying to locate Adams. The waves exhausted his strength apparently, for he sank before he could again get under way shoreward.

There was no sign of either when Collins and Stift, who had put out in a boat, reached the capsized boat and took the Jacobson boy off. Capt. Carland and his crew from the life saving station hurried to the scene in their motor boat and the police boat also went to Diversey beach and began dragging the lake for the bodies.

HIS WIFE AND SONS OUT IN A SAILBOAT

Capt. Charles Carland of the United States coast guard station began a search last night for the Freebooter, a twenty-eight foot sailboat which left the Lincoln park lagoon yesterday with Mrs. Albert Fuchs, 821 Sheridan road, and her two sons, Albert Jr. and Carl, the latter a graduate of a law school, on board.

The boat left the harbor at 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon, Mrs. Fuchs promising her husband to return by 6 o'clock. Mr. Fuchs, who owns the Chateau apartments on Sheridan road, at 11 o'clock when he failed to hear anything from his wife and two sons asked the aid of Capt. Carland.

"I told those boys many times before they would have to choose between me and that boat," said Mr. Fuchs. "I've spent many sleepless nights over them and if they get back this trip alive it will be the last time. They were picked up three times last summer by life savers on their way to Mackinac island. My wife had planned to be back at 6 o'clock and we were going to the May festival at the Bismarck garden. She wore only a white sweater and a white duck skirt and I'm sure they had no food on the boat."

King Signs New Constitution Which Grants Votes to All Adults of Both Sexes.

COPENHAGEN, June 5.—The Danish parliament today, on the anniversary of the signing of the first constitution by Frederick VII. in 1849, unanimously passed the new constitution which confers full suffrage on women and abolishes the special electoral privileges heretofore exercised by the wealthier classes.

The king signed the constitution this afternoon. It will go into effect in a year.

A large number of women, composed of all classes, marched to the palace, where King Christian received a deputation which, in behalf of the women of Denmark, thanked him for their political emancipation. A deputation of women also went to the parliament and thanked the government for conferring the franchise on women.

SOCIETY WOMEN A-SLEUTHING GO

"Sherlocking" on North Shore Recovers Part of Aldis Family Gems.

Mrs. Arthur T. Aldis received word by telephone from Mrs. James A. Benner of Lake Forest yesterday afternoon that 8 year old Helen Benner had found a jewel box near the Calvert station of the Milwaukee electric railroad, about three blocks from the Aldis home. Mrs. Aldis promptly identified the box by description as her own and the jewels contained therein as part of those stolen from the Aldis residence several days ago. Included were a brooch of valuable Mexican stones and several other pieces of jewelry of less value.

They Go A-Sleuthing.

Mrs. Aldis told her guest of the afternoon, Mrs. Roy McWilliams of 190 Lake Shore drive, Chicago, of the find. The two women then decided to start out on the trail of the robber, to the identity of whom the police had been unable to secure a single clew. They were joined by Mr. Aldis, and all went toward the Calvert station, where the jewel box was found, keenly examining the roadside.

The results were rather discouraging for an hour or more, until finally Mrs. Aldis spied the box of family letters, highly valued as an heirloom, reposing at one side of the highway not more than half a block from the place where the jewel box was picked up.

Although further search for the balance of the missing jewels brought no results, the party was sufficiently encouraged to try to pick up the trail of the robber himself.

Get on Suspect's Trail.

After an exciting inquiry about the neighborhood they learned that a stranger had worked for one day for David P. Jones across the way from the Aldis residence. This man finally was identified as the same who had stayed over night at the Lake Forest police station about that day, and it was clear that he had spent considerable unnecessary time about town.

Then word was received from Waukegan that a stranger there had sold for $35 a jeweled scarf pin worth at least $75. The description of the Waukegan stranger was similar in some points to that of the Lake Forest suspect, but no trace of him could be found up to a late hour.

"The description of the scarf pin is somewhat indefinite," said Mrs. Aldis. "The letters were written by my parents, many of them being dated before the civil war, and I am most glad to regain them."

HOPE BERLIN WILL ACCEPT ALL DEMANDS

President Delays Dispatch of Note Which Will Restate Stand.

ENVOY MAY GIVE AID.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., June 5.—[Special.]—"There will be no war between the United States and Germany."

This was the statement made today by a distinguished member of the cabinet. The utterance represents his understanding of the crisis in the relations of the two nations derived from discussion of the situation in the cabinet meeting yesterday. This is also the understanding, it transpires, of other members of the cabinet.

Although the president's advisers are guarded in discussing the latest phase of the controversy between Washington and Berlin, it may be stated authoritatively that this optimistic view is based upon the conference between President Wilson and Count von Bernstorff, the German ambassador, last Wednesday.

Expect Berlin to Yield.

The impression cabinet members have gained of this conference is that it has furnished a real basis for a satisfactory adjustment of the differences between the United States and Germany.

This does not mean that there is to be any modification of the insistence of the United States upon the observance by Germany of the immunities of Americans, and American ships and cargoes in the submarine war zone. It does mean that there is an exceptionally well founded reason for believing that the German government, when apprised of the determination of the American people to defend their rights, will yield assurances of future conduct satisfactory to the administration.

This was the understanding of cabinet members when they discussed the rejoinder which President Wilson submitted at the meeting yesterday.

The president's new note did not go forward to Berlin today, and there is little expectation that it will go before Monday, if then. It was pointed out that the German government is seeking delay, and it is suggested that the United States, desiring to avoid a break with Germany, might think it wise to let matters proceed as slowly as Germany desires.

Reach Basis of Agreement.

Although Ambassador von Bernstorff scrupulously refrains from disclosing anything pertaining to his conversation with the president the comment in official German quarters supports the impression of cabinet members that the basis for an agreement was the result of the conference of the representatives of the two nations on Wednesday.

It is intimated by persons in close touch with the German embassy that Berlin, although declining to abandon its submarine warfare entirely, will give assurances that Americans and American ships shall not be harmed in the future. In addition Germany is likely to say that it expects the United States to take steps to prevent Americans from traveling on armed merchant vessels and upon ships carrying arms and ammunition to the allies.

Whether such assurances would be satisfactory to the American people is a matter of speculation. The position of the administration was stated somewhat indefinitely in the president's note of May 13.

President Drew a Line.

In his note the president expressed the opinion that the submarine cannot be used against merchant vessels at all without violating the laws of justice and humanity. When he came down to stating his precise demands he appeared to take into consideration only the observance of immunities for Americans and American property, as distinguished from the subjects and interests of other nationalities.

It is regarded as significant that German officials here have been saying since Wednesday that the United States would not be warranted in asking immunity for any except Americans and American ships.

Germans are frank in discussing this matter. They say that the United States has no right to demand immunity for British noncombatants because the British are trying to kill all the Germans they can and the Germans are seeking to kill as many British as possible.

The president's rejoinder will be in the hands of the German foreign office early next week. A reply by Berlin, however, cannot be expected within a couple of weeks.

FLEETS CLASH IN BALTIC SEA NEAR THE GULF OF RIGA

Russia Says Shots Have Been Exchanged; Germans Continue Drive in Galicia.

BULLETIN.

PETROGRAD, via London, June 6, 3 a. m.—An official statement issued by the war office says:

"A stronger fleet has appeared in the middle Baltic and exchanged shots with the Russian fleet near the Gulf of Riga."

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

LONDON, June 5.—Fighting appears general, except in a few sectors along the eastern battle front from the Baltic to Bukowina, and in the flood of conflicting dispatches received little definite news can be established.

In the Shavli region north of the Niemen engagements are continuous. The Germans have resumed the bombardment of Ossowez originally begun in the drive on Warsaw.

There are artillery battles in the Bzura region and in the district of the Pilitza. The San river from the Vistula south is a turmoil of action.

There are battles north and south of Stry and down along the River Pruth.

Russia is fighting and fighting desperately. Lacking ammunition for its heavy field guns, and even rifles for its men in some instances, it is endeavoring to oppose artillery with infantry.

Confusion Along the San.

The situation in the San river region is in great confusion. On the lower San it is fairly well established that the Russian offensive is driving west after successes west of Rudnik.

Farther south it is also apparent that the armies of Gen. Von Mackensen, Germans and Austrians, are driving east towards Lemberg.

As was stated in dispatches sent last night they have reached the neighborhood of Moseiska, fifteen miles east of Przemysl and within fifty miles of Lemberg, the immediate objective.

Farther south and to the east the armies of Gen. Von Linsingen are hurling themselves upon the Russians in the Dniester region no more than twenty-five miles from Lemberg. They face a general engagement in the lake region.

Still farther to the south in the neighborhood of Kalusz still another Austro-German army is striking north, as if to effect a junction with the forces to the north, and a similar condition exists in Bukowina.

Germans Are Well Armed.

Before every Russian force in Galicia and Bukowina today there is a perfectly supplied army of the allied Teutons with superior guns and sufficient ammunition to sweep Galicia entirely clear.

The confusion in northern Galicia is due to the lack of knowledge of the Russian movement. They are striking westward, as has been said, and that may be for the purpose of turning the German left wing and cutting its communications to the rear.

At the same time this force itself is in some danger, because the German drive to the east may do the same thing for them. It is the unusual spectacle of two parallel columns moving in opposite directions, and one of them must suffer greatly.

Russians in Full Retreat.

VIENNA, June 5.—Dispatches to the war office tonight said that the Russians, retreating eastward from Przemysl, moved through Medyka without attempting to make a stand and passed on in the direction of Lemberg.

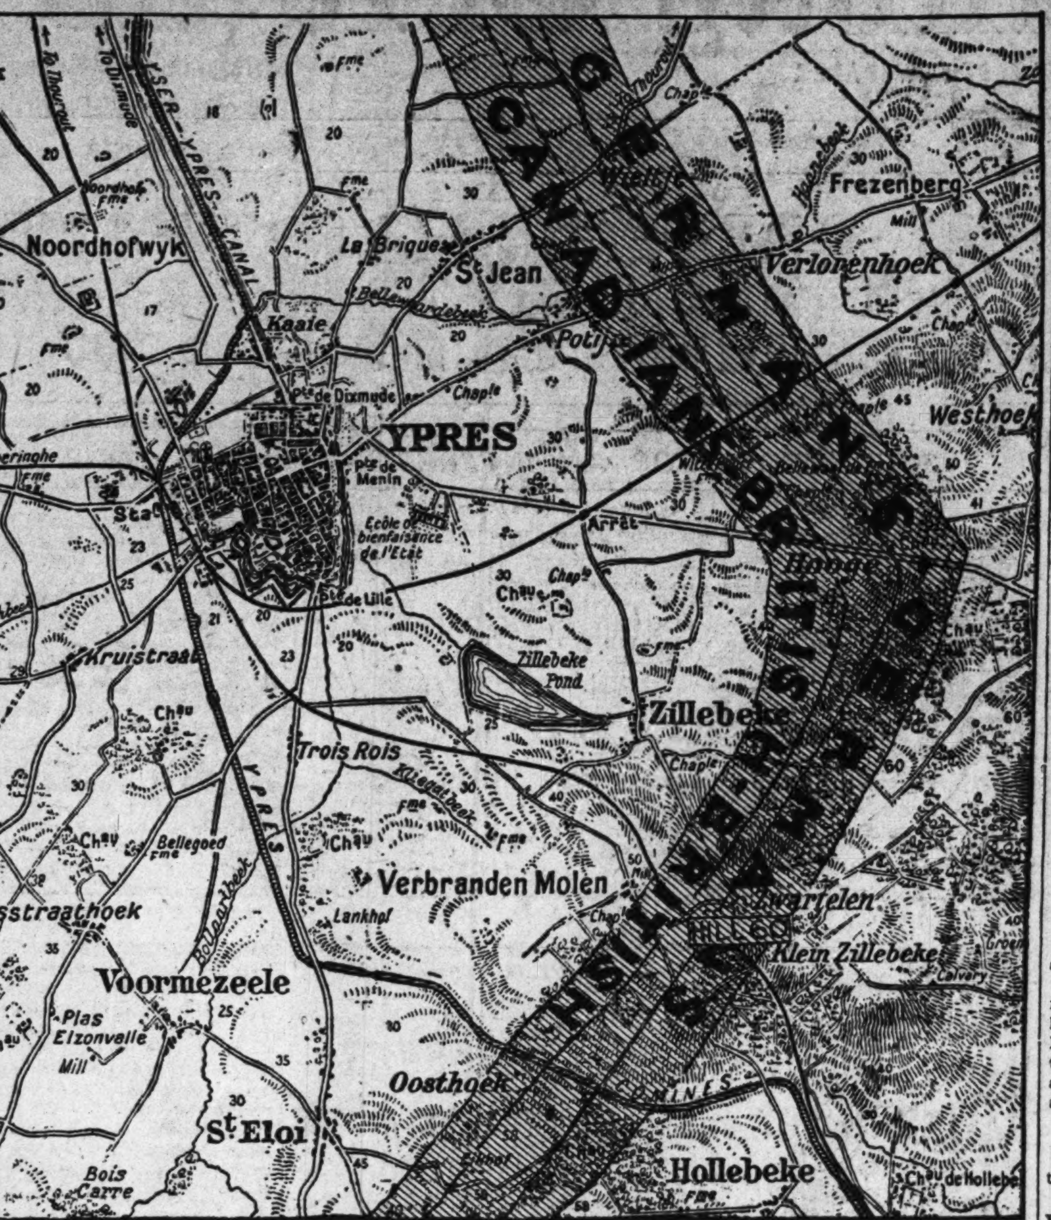
British and Germans in Death Struggle for Ypres.



Germany's determination to take Ypres shows no weakening after months of desperate fighting, and the terrific pressure maintained at this point continues. Berlin reports the capture of the village and château of Hooge, directly east of Ypres, after a bloody battle lasting several days. This claim is denied by Gen. French, according to London reports. He admitted heavy fighting at Hooge and the loss of some of the buildings around the château, but claimed they were recaptured.

The importance of Ypres as the key to the German advance on the channel ports has been recognized by the British since last fall. Here the army of Gen. French for nearly eight months has been blocking the carrying out of the kaiser's historic order, "Take Ypres or die." The fact that the chief British force is concentrated around Ypres adds to the zeal of the Germans in their unceasing smashes at this point.

Hooge is only about two miles east of Ypres, and its occupation by the Germans would make the British line less secure than any time since last October, when a comparatively small force of English under Sir Douglass Haig, won a smashing victory and checked the kaiser's drive to Calais. If the British are driven out of Ypres they will be forced to retire back of the Réninghelst river, five miles west of their present line.

KAISER AT HEADQUARTERS OF ARCHDUKE FREDERICK.

Emperor Praises Efforts of Allied Armies While Addressing Commanders on Eastern Battle Front.

BERLIN, via The Hague, June 5.—Kaiser Wilhelm today arrived at the Galician headquarters of the Austrian Archduke Frederick and was given a tremendous ovation by the Austro-German armies.

The kaiser had planned the trip by motor to celebrate the birthday of the Austrian archduke. His arrival on the heels of the Austro-German victory at Przemysl aroused the greatest enthusiasm.

At a luncheon attended by many Austrians and German officers, the kaiser proposed a toast to the success of the combined armies.

"With right on our side we are sweeping on to victory," he declared amid cheers.

SURE GERMANY WILL WIN.

Von Hindenburg Says Entry of Italy Into War Will Only Delay Final Result.

HANOVER, June 6, 2 a. m.—Field Marshal von Hindenburg, writing to a friend in Hanover, where the field marshal resided before the war, expressed a longing to walk among the trees of the city, adding:

"But the treacherous intervention of Italy has postponed the time for such recreation. The hours of the campaign will thereby be prolonged, but nothing can change the final result. I am firmly convinced of this."

NORTHCLIFFE WINS POINT IN FIGHT WITH CENSORS

Times Freed of Charges Which Were Made Under Defense of Realm Act.

LONDON, June 5.—The Northcliffe newspapers today won a victory in their fight against stringent press censorship since the beginning of the war. The government's charges against the London Times, under the defense of the realm act, were dismissed by a presiding judge at the mansion house.

An article contributed by a military writer to the Times declared that though France has called out her last reserves, England has failed to send her full quota of men to the front.

The Times' defense was that the substance of the article had been printed before, and with the official sanction of the French government.

BUBONIC PLAGUE IN GREECE.

SALONIKI, Greece, May 14.—The bubonic plague has broken out in this port. The utmost secrecy is being maintained by the Greek authorities, but at least twelve cases are known to exist. Several consul generals of leading powers stationed here have reported to their governments that at least twenty persons are afflicted with the dread disease.

FRENCH VICTORS IN GREAT FIGHT WITH BAYONETS

Mill of Souchez Carried Despite Week of Desperate Defenses by Germans.

PARIS, June 5.—Cellars choked with German bodies were found by the French when they stormed and occupied the big stone sugar mill at Souchez after a week of furious fighting.

The official "eye witness" describing the battle around this point today said that in the three weeks' fighting north of Arras the French have buried 3,000 Germans and have taken 3,000 prisoners. "Our losses during that period have been only a quarter of those suffered by the enemy," the official statement added.

Protected by artillery fire, the French first made their way to buildings on the outskirts of the Souchez sugar factory, crawling through shell wrecked German trenches. These buildings they found filled with German dead and wounded. The terrific fire from the French guns night and day had prevented the enemy from carrying off the soldiers who had fallen in the first French attacks.

Fighting Hand to Hand.

From the outbuildings, the French swept forward in a grand assault upon the sugar mill itself. The Germans defended with a machine gun fire from behind the stone ruins. The foremost French columns hurled grenades behind the enemy ramparts with terrible effect and then charged with the bayonet. After a three hour fight the Germans withdrew.

Other Gains by French.

An official communication issued by the war office tonight said:

"In the sector to the north of Arras we have made important progress. Within Neuville we are holding at present more than half of the northern section and all the eastern part, that is to say, more than two-thirds of the village.

"We have likewise gained 450 yards in the northern part of the 'labyrinth,' and made slight progress in the center of that work, where the struggle continues without cessation."

Germans Admit Loss.

BERLIN, June 5.—The war office admitted this afternoon that French troops have "temporarily occupied" the ruins of the Souchez sugar mill, around which desperate fighting has been proceeding for several days.

'NOTHING DAUNTS BELGIANS'; SING MANGLED TIPPERARY.

Cheerful Soldiers of King Albert Praised by Relief Worker in Northern France.

Cheerful Belgian soldiers singing "Tipperary" in broken English as they leave to take their places in the trenches were pictured on Friday by Thomas A. Scully, who stopped off in Chicago Friday on his way back to northern France, where until two months ago he was engaged in relief work at the Belgian hospital base in Calais.

"While the British and French troops sometimes become discouraged because of the monotonous wearing trench warfare, the Belgians are always cheerful," said Mr. Scully. "Nothing daunts them."

Mr. Scully is the son of the late William Scully, popularly known as "Lord" Scully, who at one time owned 250,000 acres of land in the middle west. He has an automobile in the Belgian ambulance corps, and now plans to return to northern France to aid in relief work for the Belgians.

Berchtold Volunteers as Chauffeur.

VIENNA, Austria, June 5.—Count Leopold von Berchtold, formerly Austro-Hungarian foreign minister, has offered his services in the Italian campaign as a volunteer automobilist. In the hope that he will be able to accompany his son to the front the count is learning to be a chauffeur.

EUROPE SPENDS BILLION IN U. S.

Enormous Increase of U. S. Exports in Nine Months Since War Began.

MORE COMING LATER.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., June 5.—[Special.]—Warring Europe's purchase of food supplies and munitions of war in the United States during the first nine months of the conflict have totaled nearly $1,000,000,000. An idea of the stupendous size of these purchases can be gathered from the fact that they represent an increase of $635,000,000 over the normal exports of the same months of the previous year.

Figures furnished THE TRIBUNE correspondent today by the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce show that the exportation of munitions of war and articles that go into their manufacture from the United States totaled at the end of April the sum of $331,504,000, an increase of $138,025,000 over the corresponding period of last year.

Food Exports Leap.

The exportation of foodstuffs has reached $657,402,000, an increase of $396,416,000.

These figures represent only the actual exportations. Other large purchases have been made which have not yet been delivered. Officials at the department of commerce declared they believe exports of war materials and food supplies will increase rather than diminish with the entrance of Italy into the struggle, and on account of the difficulty the allies have in manufacturing war munitions.

The value of the horses exported has jumped from $2,918,000 to $47,784,000, and mules from $614,965 to $7,478,000. The exports of explosives have advanced from $5,471,000 to $21,163,000 while harness and saddles have jumped from $1,571,000 to $10,769,772. The total exports of leather goods have increased from $17,787,000 to $44,129,875.

Vast Gain in Zinc.

An enormous gain in zinc foreign sales has also been made. Last year these totaled $327,702, but since the war began they have reached $15,799,867. Last year no pig lead was exported at all, but this year the exports have reached $6,153,474. Barbed wire has advanced from $3,424,721 to $5,187,898.

The exports of wearing apparel, knit goods, cotton cloths and yarns also have increased enormously. The total wearing apparel exports, representing clothing, has jumped from $8,790,000 to $24,953,000, while knit goods have increased from $2,136,147 to $10,476,864, yarn from $583,120 to $1,233,882, and yarn manufactured products from $4,790,772 to $8,359,589.

Commercial automobiles are also in enormous demand. Last year the exports of these machines totaled $934,330, while this year they have jumped to $23,977,968. Only $194,000 in aeroplanes and parts of aeroplanes were exported last year, but this year the value of these exports has reached $874,773.

Brass Sales Double.

Brass scraps, bars and plates have been doubled, this year's exports being $12,154,254. The exportation of cars, wagons, and carriages has increased $10,000,000, the value so far this fiscal year being $52,644,000. Firearms have jumped from $3,012,237 to $7,459,078, cartriges from $3,023,315 to $12218,744, gunpowder from $236,738 to $908,386, and all other explosives from $795,800 to $7,395,399. Horseshoes have jumped from $86,862 to $1,404,275.

One of the curious features of the comparative exports is the decrease in dynamite, which has fallen from $1,415,000 to $740,000.

KAISER AIRMEN FOILED IN AIR RAID ON LONDON

BULLETIN.

PARIS, June 5.—A dispatch to the Havas agency from Calais states that today a Taube aeroplane flew over the city and dropped several bombs. One person was killed. The property damage was small.

LONDON, June 5.—German Zeppelins attempted a second raid on London early this morning, but were driven off by aerial guns and aviators who took to their machines and patrolled the air over the capital when the kaiser's craft were reported on the way.

An official statement from the admiralty admitted the enemy's sky dreadnaughts bombarded towns and villages on the east and southeast coast, inflicting "a few casualties." It is reported they were driven out to sea before they could approach London.

Coupled with news of the coast raid came reports from a number of American residents that they were warned by mysterious telephone messages last night of the Zeppelins' coming. M. K. Shaler of the American relief commission said his telephone rang at about 9 p. m., and a strange voice told him to remain indoors for the remainder of the night.

"Get some water and be ready to fight a fire," was the message sent to other Americans over the telephone.

Prepared for Attack.

The admiralty thus far has not confirmed the report that the Zeppelins were met and attacked.

It is known, however, that the admiralty anticipated another attack from the skies as a part of the sudden display of activity by the land, sea and air forces of the kaiser, and that adequate preparations were made to meet the dirigibles.

The first announcement by the admiralty did not specify what towns were attacked.

"Bombs were dropped at various places," said the official statement, "with little material damage."

Official announcement was made tonight that in the Zeppelin raid last Monday night six persons were killed. An official statement on the day following the raid gave the number of deaths as four. Today's statement follows:

"It is now possible to state definitely the number of fatalities caused by the hostile aircraft which visited the neighborhood of London on May 31. The number is six—one man, one woman, and four children.

"This number does not include the case of an elderly woman whose death was attributed to shock caused by the raid."

German Air Raid Near Nancy.

BERLIN, via wireless to London, June 5.—German aviators have bombarded a French air station at Dommartemont, near Nancy, it was officially announced today.

A few soldiers were killed, but no officers injured in the French air raid on the headquarters of the crown prince early Thursday morning. The aeroplanes were shelled and fled, scattering their bombs over a wide area.

TAKE WARNING SERIOUSLY.

New York, June 5.—[Special.]—Dispatches telling of warnings telephoned to Americans in London to protect themselves against another Zeppelin raid were received in New York today with much seriousness. The lesson of the Lusitania is responsible for the attention paid to what ordinarily might be a joke of a morbid person.

It will be recalled that the Lusitania left New York on Saturday, May 1, and that morning the newspapers of the country carried advertisements over the signature of the German embassy at Washington warning Americans to stay off the ships of their enemies. Not only was that the case, but a few hours before the sailing a number of well known passengers, many of whom afterwards lost their lives, received messages by telephone and telegraph telling them to take some other ship.

Messages to Notable Passengers.

Charles Frohman received such a message, and so did Charles Klein, the playwright, according to reports. Alfred G. Vanderbilt received a telegram at the pier giving him a warning. Although the Cunard line afterwards denied the message, it was declared to have been sent to his friends.

Mysterious men, it is said, were about the pier until the vessel sailed handing out the warnings.

The mysterious phone messages in London are taken to be along a similar line and to indicate that Germany is to undertake a wholesale air bombardment.

FRENCH NAVY REFORMER DIES

Senator Pelletan Tried to Replace Discipline with Brotherly Relations in Ranks.

PARIS, June 5.—Senator Camille Pelletan, the man who tried to "democratize" the French navy, died here today of heart trouble.

As minister of marine Pelletan attracted world-wide attention several years ago by his radical ideas on the navy's affairs.

He sought to replace rigid discipline by brotherly relations between officers and crew and advocated revolutionary ideas of building.

PRINCE KILLED IN BATTLE.

PETROGRAD, June 5.—Prince Bagration-Mouchransky, son-in-law of the Grand Duke Constantine, was killed in the battle that preceded the fall of Przemysl, according to dispatches received here today. The prince was in command of a cavalry squadron.

3,113 More British Fall.

LONDON, June 5.—Today's official casualty list added 3,113 names to the list of killed, wounded, or missing since the war began. This is the longest single list issued by the government during the war.

CHURCHILL SEES FALL OF TURKS

DUNDEE, Scotland, June 5.—"The allied forces at the Dardanelles are within a few miles of a victory such as this war has not yet seen. When it comes it will make amends for all our reverses."

Winston Churchill, former first lord of the admiralty, made this declaration here this afternoon in his first public address since the shakeup in the British cabinet that placed him in a minor office. He told a big audience that the danger that confronted England at the beginning of the war has passed, and that he did not believe it would be necessary to resort to conscription.

"If it is impossible to win the war without compulsory enlistment, then I'll support it," said Churchill. "But I do not believe it will ever be necessary for England to obtain soldiers in that way. What we do need is more effort at home. Such is the character of the English people that while we never lack volunteers to fight in the bloody trenches of France and Flanders, we sometimes fall short in other directions.

Face Relentless Foe.

"We are confronted with a foe who would extirpate every man, woman, and child by any method open to him, with as little scruple as a gardener would have in smoking out a wasp's nest. The whole nation must be organized and mobilized to secure a victory which will bring lasting peace.

"The express duty was laid upon me by the prime minister to put the fleet into a state of instant and constant readiness for war in case England was attacked by Germany," he said. "I fulfilled that duty to the best of my ability.

"The seas have been swept clear. The submarine menace has been fixed within certain limits. The personal ascendency of our men and the superior quality of our ships on the high seas have been established beyond doubt or question."

Pushing Turks Back.

ATHENS, June 5.—Supported by a raking fire from the warships, the allied expeditionary forces on Gallipoli peninsula are attacking the Turkish positions all along the shore.

The Turkish losses in one day's fighting on the Dardanelles are placed at 10,000. The Australians buried 8,000 Turkish corpses.

French Admiral Displaced.

PARIS, June 5.—The command of the French fleet at the Dardanelles has been given to Admiral Nicol. He supersedes Admiral Guepratte, who has been made second in command. No official cause is assigned.

JAPANESE-BRITISH FLEET USES TURTLE BAY AS BASE.

Travelers Arriving at Long Beach, Cal., Report Seeing Seven Warships There.

Los Angeles, Cal., June 5.—[Special.]—Despite official and semi-official denials, the fact that seven Japanese and English warships were still making Turtle bay headquarters as late as last Monday is disclosed by Arthur C. Blackman of the Magdalena Bay company and Drs. Frederich Erstrich and P. O. Hartman, Swiss scientists, who have just arrived at Long Beach on board the gasoline schooner Freda.

Mr. Blackman says he and his companions were at Turtle bay last Monday and saw the Asama, now floating and apparently in good condition, with six other warships and colliers.

One battleship, flying the Japanese flag from its stern, though the name was indiscernible, was lying across the entrance to the bay. The only ships recognized by Mr. Blackman and his companions were the Asama and the Canadian cruiser Rainbow.

TEUTON PEACE DELEGATE TURNS AGAINST KAISER?

Mrs. Schaedler of Chicago German-American Club Reported to Have Changed Over to Allies.

According to a story from The Hague printed in the Paris Petit Journal, Mrs. Anna Schaedler, president of the German-American Independent Woman's Club of Chicago, has turned her sympathies to the allies.

Mrs. Schaedler has returned to The Hague after a trip into Germany, following the woman's peace congress. She said, according to the Paris dispatch, the staff of the American embassy at Berlin has its trunks packed and is ready to leave at a moment's notice. Since the sinking of the Lusitania, she declared, Americans in Berlin do not know what to expect.

According to the message, she complained she had been badly treated in Germany and was convinced the alleged atrocities committed by the Germans have been worse than reported. She said her sympathies had previously been with the kaiser.

Pope Resists Austrian Pleas.

MILAN, June 5.—The Milan newspaper, Secolo, asserted today that Pope Benedict "is firmly resisting all Austro-German attempts to induce him to leave Italy."

SUBSEA CRAFT SINK 11 MORE OF FOES' SHIPS

Germans Permit One Trawler to Carry Crews of Others Sunk to Port.

LONDON, June 5.—Eleven vessels sent to the bottom is the sum total of activity of German submarines operating in the English channel and off the coasts within the last twenty-four hours. Of these all were British craft with one exception, a French steamship, which was torpedoed in the channel. The other victims of submersibles were either trawlers or fishing craft of some sort.

So far no reports of casualties have been received. In one case, where a submarine encountered a group of three trawlers, the crews of the vessels were ordered aboard the third, which was allowed to proceed to port, and the other sunk.

The ships destroyed were:

Penfield, French steamship, in English channel.

Dunnet Head, English steamship, off English coast.

Kathleen, British trawler, off Scotch coast.

Evening Star, British trawler, off Scotch coast.

Ena May, English fishing vessel, in channel.

Strathbran, British trawler, in channel.

Horace, English trawler, in North sea.

Economy, English trawler, in North sea.

Cortes, British trawler, off Scotch coast.

Ebenezer, British trawler, in North sea.

Crews Reach Ports.

Apparently the largest vessels disposed of were the French steamship Penfield and the Dunnet Head. The former foundered in the channel after being torpedoed. The crew, which was given time to get into the boats, it is said, reached Brest in safety. The crew of the Dunnet Head, sunk off the east coast, landed at Serwick, according to a dispatch from Leith, Scotland.

The trawler Little Boy arrived at Lowestoft with the crews of the Horace and Economy.

A submarine stopped the three trawlers in the North sea and gave the crews of the Horace and the Economy five minutes to board the Little Boy. After the transfer had been made the fishermen were sunk by bombs placed on board by the crew of the submarine.

The crews of the steam fishing vessels Kathleen of Peterhead and Evening Star and Cortes of Aberdeen, which were sunk off the north coast, landed at Kirkwall, Orkney islands.

All of Crew Perish.

TURIN, June 5.—While rounding Cape Salvor, west of Pirano, in order to enter the Gulf of Trieste, the Greek steamer Virginia was blown out of the water through contact with a floating mine. All of its crew perished, it appears. The Austrian mine field, as indicated by the location of the disaster, now extends right across to Grado.

The Ebenezer was sunk by shell fire after the crew had taken to the boats.

ITALIAN KING DAILY BRAVES DEATH ALONG BATTLE FRONT

ROME, June 5.—Heedless of all danger, King Victor Emanuel is passing half his time daily on horseback, inspecting the Italian troops at the front.

The king's itinerary is being kept secret for obvious reasons. But it is known that he already has traversed nearly 100 miles of the Italian battle front, greeted by enthusiastic cheers from his troops. Dispatches reaching here tonight said the king made a short speech to several thousands infantrymen, who gave him a great reception yesterday.

"When I see you brave fellows here fighting for your country it almost makes me wish I were one of you and could shout, 'Long live the king!'" he exclaimed.

SECOND OPERATION ON GREEK KING "SUCCESSFUL"

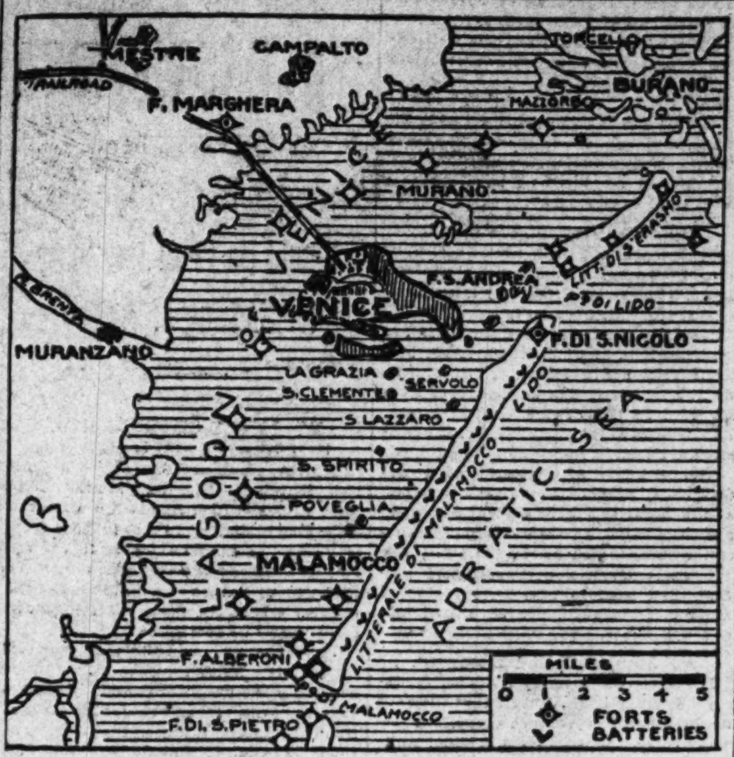
Berlin Physician Removes Part of Tenth Rib After Constantine Has Relapse.

ATHENS, June 5.—A second operation was performed on King Constantine this afternoon by Prof. Eiselberg, the German specialist. A part of the king's tenth rib was removed. An official bulletin issued immediately afterward said the operation was "highly successful."

No quick recovery can be hoped for, said the physicians. The king probably will be confined to his bed for several weeks.

Prof. Eiselberg was preparing to leave for Berlin when the king, who is suffering from pleurisy and complications, had a relapse. This caused some alarm.

Defenses of Venice Against Attack by Austrian Fleet.



Venice as a fortified town is open to legitimate attack, it being one of Italy's three largest naval bases—Spezia and Taranto being the others.

Venice is in danger of attack from the air and from the sea. A night raid from the Austrian naval base of Pola, but a little more than 100 miles away, would have only the batteries on the outlying sand dunes or Lidi to deal with, for it would require from eight to ten hours for help to reach her from Ancona, the nearest safe habor for the Italian navy.

The city has an arsenal, extensive naval shipyards, an aviation station, and a powder factory. There also have been gathered in the city great stores of war materials, of arms and ammunition.

ASKS AMERICA'S AID FOR POLAND

Emilia Napieralski Wants to See Ancient Nation Free Again.

Another plea that public opinion in the United States exert its influence to obtain the freedom of Poland as a nation was made last night by speakers at a dinner given at the City club in honor of Miss Emilia Napieralski, who as delegate to the International Peace Congress of Women at The Hague, pleaded for the people whose territory now is suffering the ravages of war in eastern Europe.

"If justice is done at the close of this terrible war," said Miss Napieralski, "Poland will be made a free nation. From the ruins in Galicia and Russian Poland will rise a great country to take its place among the world powers as did the Poland of centuries ago.

Says Time Has Come.

"The time has come for the conscience of the world to be awakened; and it is the United States which must do the awakening. When the people of this country realize the great wrongs which Poland has suffered they will feel that these wrongs can be righted only by giving Poland independence; and public opinion in this country is bound to exert much influence when peace is finally made between the warring nations."

John F. Smulski reviewed the history of Poland in a short address before the meeting, and expressed the belief that the end of the European conflict would see Poland an independent nation.

Other Delegates There.

Besides Miss Napieralski, four other delegates to the congress at The Hague spoke. These were Mrs. W. O. Thomas, Mrs. Julius Loeb, Miss Florence Holbrook, and Miss Grace Abbott.

Other speakers were Mrs. Anna Neuman, president of the Women's Polish alliance; Judge John P. McGoorty, Miss Harriet Vittum, Mrs. N. Osuch of the Polish Women's Catholic union, the Rev. Frederick Seidenberg of Loyola university, former Judge M. F. Girten, and Mrs. M. Obarska of the Polish National alliance.

Anthony Czarnecki was toastmaster.

ITALIAN QUEEN WON OVER KING

BY ALICE ROHE.

[UNITED PRESS STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

ROME, May 21.—Behind the diplomatic plots and counterplots which have placed Italy in the most precarious position of its recent history a struggle has been going on which was not chronicled in the nation's Green Book. It was the struggle between a man and a woman.

The man was Giolitti, former prime minister, who threw his power toward neutrality for Italy. The woman was Queen Helena—the queen of Italy, the princess of Montenegro, who used all her influence over the king to counteract the efforts of Giolitti.

Adored by King.

The world knows that to the king of Italy the dearest thing in all the world is this beautiful Montenegrin princess, the daughter of the indomitable King Nicholas. This same queen, from the first hour of the nation's indecision, longed and prayed for the moment when Italy would join forces with the allies. For her country by marriage to take up arms against her father's country, fighting shoulder to shoulder with Serbia, has been a tragedy hanging over the head of the queen.

To just what extent the pleadings of Queen Helena have influenced Victor Emmanuel in the hours when the German-Austro-Italian accord seemed imminent no one knows.

Pitted Against Diplomats.

While diplomats were working for the fall, or the reforming of the cabinet, according to their desires, the woman's direct influence was at work in the Villa Savoia. Never tiring of giving her moral support to the king in the dark hours, the queen sounded her one demand:

"For the love of humanity, of the patria, of national justice, let Italy enter the war against Germany."

The queen's sentiments, known to the Italian people, have endeared to them more than ever this princess whom Victor Emmanuel married for love.

GERMANS FORGE U. S. PASSPORTS?

CAUGHT IN ENGLAND.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

LONDON, June 5.—Capt. von Prieger of the German admiralty office, who is head of the German spy system at Berlin, has a perfect equipment for manufacturing fraudulent American passports, according to a confession made today by Robert Rosenthal, now under arrest.

Rosenthal's confession, made to the military authorities in London, was the first definite confirmation of a suspicion long held here that fraudulent American passports had been issued by some one acting under the authority of the German government.

The information has been communicated to the American embassy.

Lody Had Similar Paper?

There is little doubt that Hans Lody (the spy who was shot in the Tower) had a passport obtained from Capt. von Prieger's agency. Rosenthal himself was equipped with an emergency passport issued in Berlin. He pretended that he was an American citizen traveling in Europe, even mentioning as evidence in support of this assertion his activities in Berlin in assisting the American relief committees.

His story seemed to be supported by his familiarity with American cities and personalities. But the English military authorities had intercepted a letter sent by Rosenthal from Copenhagen to Capt. von Prieger under a name which the authorities knew Von Prieger had been using for years. After the letter had been produced with other details which it is not permitted to tell, Rosenthal rose to his feet, gave a military salute, and said that the game was up.

"I confess," said he, "that I am a German sent here by Capt. von Prieger."

Saw the Forged Dies?

"I was doubtful," said Rosenthal, about coming to England again, but Capt. von Prieger offered me another passport. He then opened a safe in his office and took out a bundle of American passport blanks, printed in the proper form on the correct parchment. He showed me forged dies with which the seal of the United States could be reproduced. 'I can fit you out with a passport in any name you wish,' he said—'a passport that will pass inspection.'"

After the confession Rosenthal broke down and made an attempt to commit suicide by strangling himself with bedclothing.

ROVEREDO FALLS, ROME REPORTS AS TROOPS CLOSE IN

BULLETIN.

ROME, via London, June 6, 1 a. m.—The Austrians are reported to have evacuated Roveredo after practically destroying the city.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

LONDON, June 5.—According to dispatches from Rome, two Italian columns are advancing to lay siege to Reveredo, the importent strategic position of the Austrians in southern Tyrol. This town, fifteen miles by railroad from Trent, is defended by powerful batteries on the surrounding heights and two lines of forts on the southern side of the town.

Italian Alpines and Bersaglieri are moving to the attack from the south, along the Adige valley and from the southwest on the road from Storo, which the Italians captured several days ago.

Elsewhere on the front the operations are limited to artillery duels. The heavy weather and the swollen streams prevent infantry movements.

Cattle Open Gap for Italians.

A dispatch to the Corriere d'Italia tells of the storming of an Austrian barbed wire entanglement by a herd of cattle sent by the Italians against the position.

The Italians gathered the herd in front of their lines and exploded nearby many bombs.

The beasts, frightened by the noise, dashed against the entanglements, and in fifteen minutes had swept away the obstacle, enabling the Italians to advance with the bayonet and seize the ground.

Official announcement was made tonight that the government has confiscated fifty-seven Austrian and German steamers in Italian ports of a total tonnage of 216,770. The value of the confiscated steamers is said to be more than $20,000,000.

Austrian War Report.

VIENNA, June 5.—The Austrian official report covering operations against the Italian army says:

"In the Tyrolean and Sarinthian frontier district nothing of importance occurred yesterday. An enemy battalion, which appeared in the district of the Stiflis ridge, was driven away. ridge, was driven away.

"In the district of the Estch valley, at Folgaria, on the Lavaronne plateau, and at several points on the Carinthian frontier, artillery combats are proceeding."

FRENCH ARMY'S RESERVE PLAN WAS SUCCESS

System Enabled Mobilization of 4,500,000 Men Since Beginning of War.

BY HENRY J. REILLY.
[War Correspondent of The Tribune.]
[Copyright: 1915: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, May 19.—When the war broke out France had in her metropolitan army—that is, the army which served in France, Algeria, and Tunis—about 660,000 men, of whom 30,000 were natives of North Africa.

She had in her colonial army—the army which serves in all her colonies except North Africa—about 90,000 men, of whom 40,000 were natives. Of the white colonial troops 30,000 men were stationed in France.

With some exceptions among the colonial troops and a considerable number of voluntarily reëngaged men all these men were conscripts.

The year in which a Frenchman is 20 years old he commences three years' service, unless he is found to be physically unfit. The men found unfit are called "réformés."

After three years' service in the active army the men pass into the reserve of the active army, where for eleven years they are liable to be called to the colors in case of war. During this time they have several short periods of service. The next seven years they belong to the territorial army, which is mobilized only when war has been declared and is intended primarily for home defense.

7 Years in Territorial Reserve.

The next seven years they belong to the reserve of the territorial army, which is intended primarily to make good any losses sustained by the territorial army should it be mobilized.

When war was declared, in accordance with the prearranged plan of mobilization by which nothing was left to chance and nothing to be done at the last moment, the French reserves of the active army were called out and the territorial army was mobilized.

A large number of the active reserves were taken to fill the regular army to its war strength. A large number were used to organize new army corps, there being a reserve army corps for every active army corps. The rest of the reserves were kept in the depots to make good losses as they might occur. The territorials were organized into battalions.

In other words, when war broke out, France immediately raised her regular army, composed mostly of men from 20 to 22 years of age inclusive, to its war strength by adding to it men of from 23 to 33, every one of whom had previously served at least two years in the regular army.

Then, for every regular army corps, she organized a reserve army corps made up of men from 23 to 33 inclusive, every one of whom had done at least two years' service in the army.

Nevertheless, she still had left a large number of men between 30 and 33 inclusive, every one of whom had done at least two years' service in the army, who remained in regimental depots undergoing additional training until they should be needed to replace casualties amongst the troops at the front.

In addition, she organized many territorial battalions made up of men from 34 to 40, every one of whom had done at least two years' service in the army.

Back of these, she still had a considerable number of men of the territorial reserve of from 41 to 48 years of age inclusive, every one of whom had done at least three years' service in the army.

Not only did France have this immense number of trained soldiers to draw on, but, what is more important, she had trained officers to lead them. In the first place, in the regular army, in time of peace, France not only has enough trained officers and noncommissioned officers for the regular army at its war strength, but also a considerable number of additional officers.

New Corps Well Officered.

Consequently, all the new army corps organized of the active reserve were officered from the top down, including most of the chiefs of battalions, by officers in the active service. None of the rest of the officers were green men; but all officers of the reserve; that is, in peace time they had either been officers of the regular service who had resigned from that service and passed into the reserve service, or else they were men who had taken special courses to become reserve second lieutenants.

These reserve second lieutenants became reserve first lieutenants only after four years, provided they had done two periods of service with a regular regiment during that time. In a similar manner, first lieutenants could be promoted captains of reserve only after six years and having done at least three periods of service with a regular regiment.

Only captains who had actually served as officers in the regular service could be promoted to be majors of reserve and this only after six years as captains and having done at least three periods of service with a regular regiment. These periods of service were for twenty-nine days each.

"Noncoms" Formerly Regulars.

The noncommissioned officers of the reserve are men who have been noncommissioned officers in the active army.

The officers of the territorial army are men who have spent certain periods as officers of reserve and have then passed into the territorial army.

In the lower grades they are frequently men who have, as noncommissioned officers in the regular army, received certificates of proficiency to command a section.

The noncommissioned officers of the territorial are men who have finished their service in the active reserve.

In making their plans for mobilization the general staff figured that due to death, being absent from the country, and desertion, at least 16 per cent of the reservists would fail to report. Instead of which only 2 per cent failed to report. This was the reason why in the first few days there was a considerable number of men who could not be immediately equipped.

The average American or Britisher thinks a conscript is unwilling. The French conscripts were not only not unwilling but hurried to report by the thousands days ahead of the time they were ordered to report.

"Must Have War," Is Feeling.

During the mobilization there was a rumor that there would be no war, as matters had been arranged. Not in one case, or only in one place, but all over France, men who had been called said:

"It makes no difference whether Germany is willing to arrange matters or not, this time we must have war and settle that business once for all."

In addition, thousands of Frenchmen came from all over the earth to report for military service. Many of them were exempt from service, but came nevertheless at their own expense.

Since the war commenced the classes of 1914, 1915, and 1916 have been called to the colors, and now the class of 1917 is being called. Not including the class of 1917, France has mobilized up to date something over 4,500,000 men.

700,000 French Wounded.

The French wounded since the beginning of the war have numbered something under 700,000. Of these very large numbers are again fit for service.

In addition, at these depots, there are the remnants of units which havee suffered very heavy losses. For instance, when a company has been reduced from 250 men to twenty-five or thirty men, this balance is frequently sent to the regimental depot.

After the men of a new class have undergone a number of months' training at the depot the more vigorous of them are picked out. These, with the remnants of the units which have suffered heavily and the officers, noncommissioned officers, and soldiers who have recovered from their wounds, are organized into new regiments.

No Longer Called Reserves.

The army corps made up of active reservists have done so well that they are no longer called reserve corps, but — army corps, the word reserve being omitted in the title.

Many officers consider as the result of their experience in this war that instead of having all the men of the same unit come from the same district of the country, it would be better to have men from all parts of the country serve together in the same unit.

However, these are comparatively minor details, and on the whole it can be said that this war has demonstrated the wisdom the French showed after 1870, when they copied the German system of preparing in peace time an army made up of the manhood of the nation, all trained to military service, and led by trained officers and noncommissioned officers.

Not only has this system enabled them to put an immense trained army in the field at the beginning of the war and keep it filled to its maximum with trained men, but to do so at a cost which is small, indeed, alongside of what Great Britain or the United States would have to pay to put the same number of men in the field, and those mostly green and led by untrained officers.

SAYS EUROPE WANTS PEACE.

Louis P. Lochner Asserts France and German People Are Tired of War.

Louis P. Lochner, secretary of the Chicago Peace society, yesterday was the guest of honor at a luncheon at the Hotel Sherman, given on account of his return from Europe.

"The rank and file of the people of Germany and France," he said, "do not desire the war. They would be happy if an end of it were made tomorrow. The position of Holland in the war is one of tremendous responsibility. If Holland sided with Germany it would be cut off from its extensive territorial possessions. If she cast her lot with the allies she would be made a battle ground."

Mrs. W. I. Thomas and Prof. Ernst Freund of the University of Chicago, both of whom have just returned from Europe, also spoke.

GERMANS AT BAY; HOLD OFF ENEMY IN EAST AFRICA

"Tribune" Writer Says Colony Would Be Prize Now Only for Shifting of Troops.

BY JAMES SUTHERLAND.
[War Correspondent of The Tribune.]

ZAMBA, Nyassaland, British East Africa, March 28.—The rains are now on in East Africa, which makes it a matter of exceeding difficulty to move troops from one place to another, owing to the numerous swollen and unfordable rivers and the swampy nature of a large part of the country where the main operations will of necessity be carried out.

Unfortunately, owing to the upheaeval in Turkey, British troops which were originally intended for German East Africa, were dispatched to Egypt in connection with the operations in that vicinity of the Suez canal, or the colony in all probability would have fallen before now.

There have been a few skirmishes since the year set in on the German and East African protectorate border, but nothing of moment. Towards the end of January a company of British troops defeated a German force at Shwari hill, near the border.

We also had some scrapping on Mafia island, where we captured several Germans, a considerable number of their Askari surrendering with their arms and ammunition.

Germans Surround British Force.

On Jan. 18 one of our advance posts, consisting of three companies of Indian troops in charge of two British officers, was surrounded by an overwhelming force of Germans, numbering fully 2,000, with six field and sixteen maxim guns, near Jasin, a short distance from our border in German territory.

Our main force in this district was greatly reduced from its original strength owing to several relief columns being dispatched to other parts, and the troops sent to succor the garrison found it impossible to break through the enemy's lines.

Eventually, after all their ammunition was expended, they were obliged to surrender, but they previously took the precaution to make their rifles and guns useless. We lost about forty killed and wounded. During the action a party of forty Indian troops guarding an adjacent factory broke out and cut their way through the enemy, losing half their number in doing so.

The Germans lost fifty-seven whites killed and wounded and a large number of native troops and had three maxim guns smashed by direct hits from our mountain guns. After the surrender the German commander congratulated the two British officers on their gallant defense, returned them their swords, and released them on parole.

The British government has conducted a blockade on the coast of German East Africa since Feb. 27, although practically all the colony has been cut off from the outside world since the beginning of the war.

Away down in German Southwest Africa things are beginning to move. Gen. Botha, who is in supreme command of the operations there, but who was unfortunately delayed in the Transvaal owing to the recent rebellion, arrived early in February, and was received with tremendous enthusiasm by the troops, who had been awaiting his arrival for months. A forward move has now begun, and we hear they have already had a few breaks with the enemy.

U. S. HEALTH SERVICE OPENS SAFETY FOURTH CAMPAIGN.

Warns Public of Tetanus Danger Resulting from Blank Cartridge Wounds Neglected as Trivial.

Washington, D. C., June 5.—[Special.]—The United States public health service today initiated its 1915 campaign to prevent Fourth of July accidents.

"The blank cartridge wound is the great cause of Fourth of July tetanus," it says in a warning issued to the people. "Parents should realize that it is easy to prevent, but extremely difficult to cure. No blank cartridge wound is too trivial to receive careful medical attention. However slight the injury may appear, summon a physician and at once adopt energetic measures. Reliance upon home treatment may prove disastrous and result in the sacrifice of life."

The health service points out that in 1903, before the public was awakened to the dangers of Fourth of July accidents, one case of tetanus developed to every four blank cartridge wounds. In 1914 there was only one case to every forty such injuries.

"This is the measure of the success of the preventive treatment," the warning says. "In 1903 there were 417 Fourth of July victims of that dread malady; in 1909 the number had been reduced to 130, while from last season's celebration there were only three."

LOTTERY NET TAKES 2 MORE

Indianapolis Man Said to Have Employed Girls to Make Tickets in His Home.

Indianapolis, Ind., June 5.—Two more arrests were made today in the police campaign to stop the sale of baseball pools. Robert Hamilton was charged with manufacturing a lottery and Charles E. McGinnis with operating a lottery. The police allege that Hamilton employed ten girls to make out the lottery slips at his home, in a fashionable residence section.

OUR OWN "WAR BABY" PROBLEM

FATHER GETS OFF EASY

Scully has ruled that he will not permit, under any circumstances, the acceptance of less than $250, though under previous administrations as little as $50 has sometimes been received.

The investigation of the Juvenile Protective association, admittedly not complete, shows that out of the minimum of 3,000 children born out of wedlock annually at least 1,000 disappear during the first year of their lives.

Where Do They Go?

The question is, where are these children who are known to be born and of whom no further record can be found? The natural assumption is that many of them have died, although they are not included in the regular report of deaths.

Such facts as this are responsible for sinister suspicions, which investigation of the so-called "maternity homes" goes far towards justifying.

In an effort to make some civilized and decent provision for the unfortunate children born out of wedlock, Judge Charles N. Goodnow of the Municipal court has drafted a bill, which has been introduced into the lower house of the present legislature. It was referred to the committee on judiciary, which at one time reported it out with the recommendation that it be passed. On objection of certain members it was sent back to the committee and referred to a subcommittee, which is understood to be hostile. The probability is that the bill will be smothered there.

Judge Goodnow's Bill.

Judge Goodnow's bill provides that a man proved to be the father of a child born out of wedlock may be compelled to pay a fine of not more than $3,000 or to obligate himself to provide for the support of the child, according to his means, until it becomes 18 years old, unless it earlier becomes self-supporting.

Under the present law bastardy is merely a civil action and a guilty man cannot be extradited once he steps outside the state. Judge Goodnow's bill makes bastardy a misdemeanor, so that a runaway offender can be extradited and brought back to the jurisdiction of the court.

But unless great pressure is brought to bear on the members of the present legislature Illinois is likely to remain for at least two years more among those communities which pay vastly more attention to the welfare of infant hogs than to that of human babies whose parents happen not to have married.

The Eight Cylinder Cadillac Gives You

Unequaled Flexibility and Pick Up

Any car geared low enough will run slowly on direct drive. But it takes the constant power and torque of the Cadillac V-type Eight motor to give quick pick up with moderate gearing. The smoothness and speed of Cadillac "get-a-way" are mighty satisfying.

The Easiest and Safest Car to Drive

Anybody who can steer a car can drive a Cadillac Eight with confidence. Its control is so sure, so simple. You can practically stop the car to be careful going around corners, and then dash ahead without bothering with gears. A slight pressure of the foot controls the car.

A Velvety Smoothness of Motion

"Utter unconsciousness of the source of power"—is the way many describe the sensation of riding in the Cadillac "Eight." You are literally and figuratively carried away by a car which seems to have life and spirit of its own—which seems to carry its own good road with it.

Power Beyond Any Possible Requirements

On dynamometer tests at the factory the Cadillac V-type Eight Cylinder motors show 80 horse power. The car weighs less than 50 lbs. per horse power. It is alive with power. Hills seem to flatten out before it.

The Leading Car of the World

Not a year yet since the Cadillac Eight was announced—and nearly a dozen other makers have already discarded the work of years—have scrapped probably a million dollars' worth of equipment—to follow the Cadillac lead and build V-type motors. Following the leader is easier than pioneering—but it always lacks the sound foundation of experience. The result is a little short of being "the real thing." You are safe when you buy a Cadillac—the 10,000 Eight Cylinder Cadillacs in use have proved their dependability.

CAR LINE HEADS WORK ON SCALE TO PRESENT MEN

Willingness of Both Sides to Deviate from First Stand Is Hopeful Sign.

The making of a new wage scale which will be satisfactory to the employés and the company will be tackled at the conference of the Surface Lines officials and the committee representing the employés tomorrow.

Officials of the surface lines worked all day yesterday on a scale which is believed to represent the best that the company can afford to pay the men at this time. What that scale is will not be revealed until the conference with employés starts tomorrow morning.

The tentative wage scale as worked out by the officials covers a three year period. Officials of the union also labored during the day over a scale which is said to be slightly under the demands, but which is said to represent the lowest mark to which the union will go in the negotiations.

Taken as Hopeful Sign.

Whether the two tentative scales as worked out by the officials of the company and the officials of the union is close enough together to enable an agreement to be reached immediately is the question that will arise at the meeting. The fact that both sides have shown a willingness to deviate somewhat from their stand before the strike vote was taken gives hope that a stripe and a tieup of the traction lines may be avoided.

Officials of the surface lines will be guided in talking the wage scale with the men by the conditions which prevail in a score or more of other large cities in the United States where the street car men have unions.

In twenty-six cities of more than 200,000 east of the Rocky mountains, the scale in Chicago is equaled by only three cities, and in those cities the working conditions are said to be more severe on the men than in Chicago.

Surface Lines' Wage Scale.

In Chicago the present scale is 23 cents for the first three months of employment with the company, 25 cents for the second three months, 26 cents for the next six months, 27 cents for the first six months of the second year, 28 cents for the last six months, 29 cents for the third year, 30 cents for the fourth year, and 31 cents for the fifth year, reaching the maximum of 32 cents in the sixth year.

In New York the minimum for conductors is 24 cents, for motormen 25 cents, and the maximum for conductors is 27 cents and motormen 28½ cents, paid from the beginning of the fifth year. The maximum in Brooklyn is 28 cents an hour gained after ten years of service. The Buffalo company pays its men the maximum of 30 cents an hour after they have been with the company steadily for ten years.

Three Cities Equal Chicago.

Philadelphia pays its street car employés a maximum of 30 cents after the sixth year and Cincinnati employés receive the maximum of 27 cents an hour in the ninth year. Boston, Cleveland, and Detroit are the only cities that equal the Chicago scale. It is estimated that if the Chicago scale were applied to Detroit conditions the hourly wage in this city would equal 34 cents an hour.

With these statistics before them the company officials will insist that their position against granting any increase in wages is correct, and in a time of business depression the best that can be done.

Contention of Employes.

On the other hand, the officials of the unions will contend that Chicago conditions are unlike those of any other city in the United States and it is on these conditions alone that the question of wages paid here should be determined. Living costs, flat rentals, and other conditions remove the wages paid in other cities from consideration, they contend.

With the working conditions decided on the surface lines officials and the union officials believe that the wage question will be settled this week. Either an agreement will be reached or a break will result within a few days, it is predicted.

Conditions on "L" Lines.

The officials of the elevated lines and the officials of the elevated men's union will start tomorrow on a consideration of working conditions. These conditions are said to be much worse on the elevated lines than on the surface lines.

"There are ninety-eight clauses in the working conditions agreement which must be changed," President John J. Bruce of the elevated employés' organization said. "The frequent suspensions of the men for alleged violations of innumerable rules must be done away with. The weekly wages of the men are reduced to a small amount by the suspensions which result from petty infractions which might be done away with by the right kind of hearings.

"The morale of the men is reduced by these suspensions and all the employés feel that the service given the lines might be materially improved if it were not for the constant fear of the suspensions for alleged rule infractions.

"I am confident that we can convince Mr. Budd that these changes are necessary for the good of the service on the elevated lines."

Dances to Support Family While Brothers Are at War.

MISS ALLISON MAC BAIN.

One of the cases where the support of a whole family has fallen upon a woman because the war has taken the men is that of Miss Allison MacBain, a Scotch girl from Montreal, Quebec, who has made her debut at New York. Miss MacBain's two brothers went with the Canadian contingent to France, and, there being nobody else to support her invalid father, she decided to come to the metropolis and show the city folk what a Scotch girl can do in the line of dancing.

WEXLER DETAILS PAY TO POLICE

Prices for Burglar's Freedom Fixed in Maxwell Station, He Says.

Isadore Wexler, one of the chiefs of "the million dollar burglar trust," occupied the limelight throughout yesterday's police graft trial.

He was guarded by a dozen extra deputy sheriffs, owing to fears of a possible attack motived by revenge for his "squealing." He confided his fear to Judge Dever that he would be killed. He said he recognized a dozen "gun men" in the court room. Deputy sheriffs stationed at the entrance scrutinized every person seeking admission.

Wexler still was on the stand when court adjourned until Tuesday.

Tells of Arrests.

Wexler told about the members of the "trust" being arrested.

"Did you have a conversation about that time with Detective Michael Weisbaum?" Prosecutor Malato asked.

"Yes," Wexler answered. "It was in Bennett's saloon. Nathan Steinberg, head of the gang, was with me. I asked Mike (Weisbaum) if there was some way we could fix things up. He said he didn't know, but would see the captain (Storen) about it. We had a couple of drinks and then Weisbaum went out. He came back a little later. He said the captain wanted $3,000 to throw us all out.

"Nathan said that was too much because there were a lot of charges against him in the other stations and he'd go to the penitentiary anyway. I asked Weisbaum if he couldn't do something for me alone and he said he would see what he could do about it."

Agrees to Pay $500.

"Did you have another conversation with Weisbaum?"

"Yes, in the Maxwell street station. Dressler asked him if he couldn't fix him up at least, but Mike said the captain wanted all or nothing. Then Dressler asked Mike if he couldn't go over to Bennett's place and see if Bennett wouldn't go and see the captain. He agreed.

"When we left the station Mike told us to walk a hundred feet behind him. We went to the saloon. Mike and Bennett walked to one side at first. Then Bennett came up and shook hands with Dressler and myself. He told Dressler he would go after and see the captain for him. He saw the captain and came back and said the captain would take $500 for my case. I said: 'I'll pay that, but I won't give up before I'm out. I'll put up the money, though.'"

"Do you remember the day the cases were called in the Maxwell street court?"

"Yes. I didn't see my bondsman in court, and being afraid that I was going to be held to the grand jury and had no bond, I left and went to Jake Snyder's place in Sangamon street, one of my partners. I was to meet Dressler there.

"I asked him if he had been fixed up all right and he said: 'Fine. The captain and Mike Weisbaum stood behind me. They said that I was a fine man, working, and had never been in trouble before, so the judge discharged me.'"

Admits Criminal Career.

Attorney Charles E. Erbstein for the defense forced an admission that the witness committed several burglaries in Detroit before he came to Chicago. The witness was then taken over a period of several years in his life while he followed a criminal career. Wexler admitted them all.

"At the time that you were tried in the Criminal court did you tell the judge about paying money to any policemen?" Erbstein asked.

"No, sir, but I told it to you."

Wexler was questioned about a number of occasions when he accompanied attaches of the state's attorney's office in search of evidence against the defendants.

Music and Dinner.

On one occasion he said they stopped at the Bismarck hotel and had dinner.

"And you heard the music on that balmy evening?"

"Yes."

"That was better treatment than you got in the penitentiary?"

"Yes."

"You never had music with your meals there?"

"No, sir."

STRIKE WILL END BY ARBITRATION; FACTIONS AGREE

Carpenters and Contractors Promise Mayor to Submit Dispute to Umpires.

The settlement of the strike of 16,000 carpenters will be left to an arbiter.

In response to Mayor Thompson's letter of a few days ago the executive committee of the Carpenter Contractors' association notified him yesterday that that organization is willing to leave the dispute to a committee of arbitration, each side to select one member of a committee and the two members to select a third member.

President L. A. Ashbeck of the Carpenter Contractors' association took the letter to Mayor Thompson's office in the afternoon and notified the mayor that the feeling of the contractors is in favor of ending the strike, and that they are willing to accept any fair method which he might suggest.

Carpenters Favor Arbitration.

President John A. Metz and other officials of the Carpenters' District council announced that they were in favor of leaving the points in dispute—the wage scale, the expiration of agreement, and the question of the importation of material—to an arbitration committee.

"Our organization always has stood for arbitration," President Metz said.

"We are willing at this time to submit the question to arbitration.

"There is no disposition on the part of the Carpenter Contractors' association to tie up the building of the city," President Ashbeck said. "We have been trying earnestly to get the dispute settled, but we do not intend to grant all demands of the carpenters. And we stand ready to fight if they do not agree to submit the question to arbitration. The Carpenters' District council decided to notify Mayor Thompson that we are willing to arbitrate on Chicago conditions."

Early Peace Looked For.

Mayor Thompson was pleased with the decision of the contractors to submit the question to arbitration and said that he hoped that an early settlement could be effected.

"The city has suffered enormously now by the strike," Mayor Thompson said, "but if it can be settled within the next few days, there is a possibility of getting some big slices of prosperity yet. The settlement of the strike will mean much to the workmen who if they were out of work all summer unquestionably would suffer during the winter."

It is expected that the carpenters will decide on a member of the arbitration committee within a few days and the contractors will be ready to announce their choice tomorrow, it was reported yesterday.

At the gathering were representatives of Swift & Co., Armour & Co., Morris & Co., H. H. Garver, foreign trade commissioner of the Chicago Association of Commerce; Otto C. Ericson of Jevne & Co., John A. Ouse of the Swedish Produce company, and officials of a number of other importing and exporting firms.

'INVADE' MEXICO; SET BOYS FREE

Ten Cowboys Force Colonel and 150 Troops to Release Youths.

WEST TO DECIDE PLAN.

Nogales, Ariz., June 5.—A posse of ten American cowboys and miners rode eight miles across the border into Santa Cruz, Sonora, today and, leveling their guns at the colonel commanding the garrison, while 150 Mexican soldiers looked on, obtained the immediate release of two American boys kidnaped early today by three of the soldiers on the Arizona side of the border.

The colonel gave up his two 17 year old prisoners, George Vaughn, son of the storekeeper at Duquesne, and Henry Chang, son of a Chinese-American citizen of Washington Camp, Ariz., without demur, and the posse rode triumphantly back to the United States.

West to Decide Issue.

Washington, D. C., June 5.—[Special.]—President Wilson has decided to associate Du Val West with himself in working out the details for the relief of Mexico.

This became known here today after the departure of Mr. West for Texas, where he will remain for three weeks. Mr. West's trip makes decisive action in the Mexican situation impossible within the next three weeks. On his return to Washington, however, if the Mexican factions have not gotten together, the president will be ready to start his program of reconstruction. Mr. West will be in charge of it.

Might Have Hurried Issue.

President Wilson believes that he has obtained his first real insight into the Mexican situation through Mr. West. It is possible that, had he sent West to Mexico at the time he sent John Lind, or even immediately after Lind's return, he would not have been so long in reaching the conclusion that the time had come to help Mexico save itself.

Reports from Mexico today were more distressing than those received before. Bread lines are increasing in number in every city, and, despite the protestations of Carranza and other leaders as to their ability to handle the situation, it is apparent that they are not.

The Red Cross is continuing its campaign for funds and will rush the relief work as fast as these funds become available.

ABSTINENCE UNION TO MEET.

Rev. P. P. Rhode will officiate. The afternoon program will include addresses by the Rev. P. J. O'Callaghan and Bishop A. J. McGavick and music by the Paulist choristers.

100 FACE OUSTER AT ANNAPOLIS FOR 'CRIBBING'

Washington, D. C., June 5.—The "honor system" at the Annapolis Naval academy is on trial. Three midshipmen's expulsion and an inquiry into alleged misconduct in examinations of more than 100 others, including members of the graduating class, were ordered today by President Wilson and Secretary of the Navy Daniels.

The annual examination "cribbing scandal" was declared this afternoon by Secretary Daniels to be the most widespread in the history of the academy. Members of all classes are involved.

The annual practice cruise of the midshipmen, which was to have begun next week, has been indefinitely postponed in order that students at the academy may testify before the court of inquiry.

Many Cadets May Be Dismissed.

On Monday a special board of inquiry will begin an investigation which may cause wholesale dismissal of cadets. A preliminary inquiry was held yesterday at Annapolis by Secretary Daniels. Today he placed the whole matter personally before the president, who ordered a special board of inquiry.

Names of the three "middies" dismissed were withheld. The Annapolis board's recommendation for dismissal of seven others has been suspended pending the general inquiry next week.

Of the three dismissed today, one tried to bribe a mechanic to obtain examination papers; two broke into a mathematics professor's room to learn their marks in examinations already taken. It is charged that dozens of cadets had complete or partial copies of examination questions to be asked.

Three Midshipmen Dismissed.

Annapolis, Md., June 5.—The three midshipmen who were dismissed from the naval academy today were Charles C. Gill, second class, from Tennessee; Ralph R. Byers of Indiana, and John G. Grogan of California, both third class students.

OUSTED CITY EMPLOYES WILL FIGHT FOR POSTS.

Jeremiah McCarty and John F. O'Brien Willing to Take Case Before Merit Board.

Jeremiah McCarty, deputy city collector, who was suspended yesterday by Collector Forsberg, will make a fight before the civil service trial board to retain his position. In the contest with the new city collector he will be joined by John F. O'Brien, who was suspended from the position of cashier.

MRS. ROWE OUSTS FIVE MORE AIDS

WOMAN GOING IN WEEK.

Mrs. Louise Osborne Rowe, commissioner of public welfare, dispensed yesterday with the services of five more civil service employés in her department. When the information became known more protests against the dismissals were made by a group of women who have fought the dismissal of C. D. Blachly from the office of the public welfare commissioner.

The ax was dropped on William T. Conley, an investigator, who passed the examination third on the list and who had five years' experience in the health department, and on Harry Jackson, Sam Dornbaser, George Kennedy, chief statistical clerk, and Philip McGrath. Effie D. Signer is scheduled for dismissal next Saturday, it is said.

Conley was on a six months' probation term. Five minutes before the term was up he received notice of his dismissal.

"I don't know about the qualifications of these particular employés," said Mrs. W. H. Hess, one of the women who protested against the dismissal of Mr. Blachly. "But I did know about the others, and they were doing excellent work. The work of the public welfare department never has been anything to brag about because there never has been a trained sociologist at the head of it.

"Mrs. Rowe is quite frank in stating she wants to be surrounded with her friends. If the civil service means anything, the spirit as well as the letter should be obeyed."

"It seems to me," said Miss Grace Nicholes, "that if civil service employés are to be dismissed, charges ought to be brought against them. If the public welfare department is going to be efficient, some of the experienced employés ought to be retained."

THOMPSON MEN LAUNCH LOWDEN GOVERNOR CLUB

Circulation of Petitions Begins and the Mayor Admits Backing Move.

The city hall administration burned all bridges yesterday in the state Republican fight and came out in the open as the organizers of the Frank O. Lowden Cook County club.

Harry B. Miller, recently appointed city attorney by Mayor Thompson, has been named secretary of the Lowden club of Cook county, and over his signature the first of the Lowden primary petitions were placed in circulation.

The blank petitions in printed form were sent out to ward leaders affiliated with the new city hall administration. Each petition carried the notice to return when filled to City Attorney Miller, who will have his political office in the Lowden fight at the Hotel Sherman in connection with Fred Lundin's headquarters.

Mayor Admits Support.

Mayor Thompson admitted he and his friends are going to support Lowden.

"I believe Mr. Lowden will be a candidate," the mayor said, "and that his formal announcement will come soon. I believe THE TRIBUNE guessed it about right some days ago when it stated Lowden will make his announcement soon after the legislature adjourns.

"What we are doing now is to sound out the sentiment of the Republican voters of Chicago to see how Lowden stands. That, as I understand it, is the purpose of starting the Lowden petitions at this time. If the signing of these petitions is general it will be an indication that Lowden is considered a strong candidate. And I think he would make a good governor."

Deneen Men to Fight.

The Deneen leaders, as soon as the petitions were placed in circulation, accepted the move as an official announcement by the city administration that Lowden is its candidate and that Deneen and his friends have got to fight for self-preservation or get off the political map.

Mr. Deneen and his Chicago aids conferred and decided to accept the gauge of battle not only in Chicago but in every district in Illinois. Regardless of what the legislature does with respect to fixing the date for the state primary next year the Deneen chiefs said the circulating of the Lowden petitions by the city hall meant a fight at once and that the state campaign would be on full tilt through Illinois immediately.

Confer at Lowden Farm?

A report reached the local political chiefs last night that members of the legislature had gone to Col. Lowden's farm home in Ogle county to talk over with him the question of fixing the primary dates for next year.

Fred Lundin, speaking for the city hall forces, said:

"We don't care when they hold their primaries. They can fix them for April or September, just as they see fit. It makes no difference with us. We are simply headed toward the goal, and, whether it is April or September or some other month, we will be there when the flag drops."

DEMAND FRANK DIE ON GALLOWS

Atlanta Massmeeting Protests "Outside Influences."

Atlanta, Ga., June 5.—[Special.]—Resolutions protesting against the commutation of the death sentence imposed on Leo M. Frank for the murder of Mary Phagan were adopted at a big mass meeting held tonight on the grounds of the Georgia state capitol. The resolutions also denounced "outside influences" for what is termed an attempt to break down trial by jury in Georgia and to make a "joke of Georgia courts and justice."

The meeting had been well advertised and there were 4,000 or more persons representing all walks of life.

Militia Ready, but Not Needed.

Gov. Slaton, fearing that trouble might follow as a result of the excitement aroused by the meeting, had the Atlanta military under arms at the armory, but there was no need for the troops.

The Rev. A. Hendley, pastor of an Atlanta Baptist church, was the only speaker. Dr. Hendley knew Mary Phagan and he has taken a deep interest in the case. Dr. Hendley in his address charged that "outside influences" are attempting to dictate to Georgians how they shall administer justice and urged that the attempt be rebuked.

Minister Rebukes "Outsiders."

"Georgia cannot afford," he said, "to allow outsiders to tell it that it must not carry out the sentences imposed by its courts. Leo M. Frank was fairly tried and convicted and the United States Supreme court—the highest tribunal in the land—has affirmed the findings of the Georgia courts.

"If Frank is allowed to escape, we might as well abolish trial by jury in Georgia. To commute Frank's sentence would be an invitation to mob law."

Mr. Hendley also attacked certain Atlanta ministers who have asked clemency for Frank. The minister's address was loudly cheered.

DINNER FOR DR. ROBERTSON.

Dr. John Dill Robertson, commissioner of health of Chicago, was guest of honor at a dinner in the roof garden of the Hotel La Salle last night given by more than 900 citizens of Chicago in honor of his appointment as head of the health department of the city. George F. Mulligan presented Dr. Robertson with a diamond studded gold watch, chain, and charm which was announced to be "from your Masonic and Knights of Columbus friends, regardless of creed or politics."

Republicans Rely on Moose Support to Put Over Their Ticket.

a straight ticket this time, but will support several of the Democratic candidates, is conceded by the chiefs in all camps, but no one seemed to know yesterday just how far this defection will reach.

Some of the Republican leaders insist that Mayor Thompson has not sought to impress his views on his friends, and that the ward organizations will line up almost solidly behind the straight Republican ticket.

Democratic Feud On.

Over in the Democratic household the old Sullivan-Harrison feud is on, and here again is an unknown quantity that the watchers in the conning towers have been unable to estimate with any degree of accuracy. Some predicted a sort of Harrison-Thompson lineup in some of the wards, with the Sullivan forces lining up behind the Republican ticket with a few exceptions.

With the advent of summer weather the chiefs have increased slightly previous estimates of the total vote. Both Chief Clerk Egan of the election board and Congressman Sabath, chairman of the Democratic managing committee, estimated the total vote, men, in the county at 225,000, out of approximately 500,000 eligible to vote.

Other forecasters who have been working on the inside of the campaign look for 100,000 votes to elect, which would make the total less than 200,000.

"Defeat for Democracy."

Acting Chairman Cannon of the Republican managing committee issued the following forecast:

"Decisive defeat for Democracy tells in four words what will happen at the election on Monday. The Republicans will repeat their victory of April 6. The plurality will not be so large, of course, as it was at the city election because the total vote will be much smaller, but it will be enough to prove to the satisfaction of all that the sentiment of the people rapidly is turning toward the Republican party.

"The same forces which made possible the record breaking Republican victory in April are working to bring about a second victory on Monday. Republicans and Progressives are pulling together for success. They will be rewarded by the election of every candidate on their joint ticket. It is a Republican year."

Democrats Claim 125,000.

Congressman Sabath, in estimating the total vote at 225,000, said that the Democratic candidates would receive from 100,000 to 125,000.

"One of our strongest points with the voters this time is our earnest attempt to aid the nonpartisan idea in judicial elections," said he. "We nominated no one against Justice Carter and no one against Judge Brentano. In addition to that we left one place vacant on the ticket, giving an actual demonstration of the nonpartisan idea.

"Had the Republicans cared at all for an independent and nonpartisan bench they would have met us half way, but after the city election they saw a chance to hog the whole ticket, or thought they did, and that is why only the Democratic ticket shows the nonpartisan spirit of the city. And because of that and many other good reasons the Democratic ticket will be elected from top to bottom Monday."

Hottest Contest in Years.

The election Monday will be the end of the hottest judicial contest in Cook county in years. The largest number of judicial aspirants in the history of the local bench also will be elected.

For the Circuit court alone twenty men will be elected, six more than heretofore, owing to the emergency law passed by the present legislature to increase the number of judges in Cook county.

Justice Carter of the Supreme bench has no opposition on the Democratic ticket, being opposed only by the Socialist, Frank L. Wood.

Judge Theodore Brentano for the Superior bench has no Democratic opposition. His only opponent is the Socialist, Louis J. Delson.

For the short term of the Superior court there are three candidates—John W. Beckwith, Democrat; Robert E. Turney, Republican, and Henry E. Murphy, Socialist.

Under Nonpartisan Flag.

Three Socialists are running for the Circuit bench, and five independents, under the nonpartisan banner, are running for the Circuit court. They are Timothy D. Hurley, Daniel J. McMahon, Edward Maher, John D. Farrell and McKenzie Cleland.

With exception of the fight being made by some of the civic organizations against the proposed $2,500,000 bond issue for the new county jail and criminal court building, all the other propositions on the little ballot aroused no serious opposition.

The other proposals include a $1,000,000 bond issue for extensions at the county poor farm, $1,000,000 bonds for extensions to the West park system, $200,000 bonds to equip the ninth and tenth floors of the county building, so that the Appellate court divisions, for which the county now pays rent in private buildings, can be installed in the building.

$35,000 for Improvements.

There is also a proposed bond issue of $35,000 for extensions and improvements to the Ridge avenue park district, but only the people in that district vote on these.

In the closing hours of the campaign attention was also called to the proposed annexation to Chicago of a part of the town of Stickney. Both men and women in all Chicago vote on this proposition as well as the residents of that section of Stickney sought to be annexed.

The women vote on all the little ballot proposals but only the men vote for the judicial candidates.

Rosenthal for Nonpartisanship.

Lessing Rosenthal issued an appeal for voters to disregard the party label:

"Disregard the party label in the judicial election to be held on Monday," said he. "The ideal judge knows neither party nor faction and holds himself aloof from politics, in the sense that that term is commonly understood.

"Ability, industry, knowledge of the law, hard sense, fairness, integrity, and judicial temperament are the qualifications of a good judge. Naturally in arriving at his judgment he should give preference to a previous judicial experience.

"Jackson, a Democrat, was appointed by President Harrison, a Republican, to the Supreme court of the United States. Lamar and Lurton, both Democrats, were given places by President Taft, a Republican, on the Supreme bench. White, a Democrat, was selected by Taft as chief justice.

"President Harrison, like Taft, was a lawyer of conspicuous ability. Their action should serve as an excellent example to the voters."

Indorses Johnston.

Officers of the Nonpartisan League of Cook County received the following indorsement yesterday from the Rev. Johnston Myers, pastor of the Immanuel Baptist church, in which the Rev. Mr. Myers urges the united support of the league in electing Frank Johnston Jr. to the Circuit court bench:

"I have known Mr. Johnston, who is a candidate for judge of the Circuit court bench on the Democratic ticket, for many years. I have had occasion to investigate his ability as a lawyer and his integrity. I believe he would make one of the very best judges who has ever been elected to that office."

Eight Hour League Indorses.

The Eight Hour league indorsed Frank L. Wood, Socialist, for judge of the Supreme court. For Circuit court judges it indorsed:

Charles M. Walker, Dem.; George Kersten, Dem.; John P. McGoorty, Dem.; Elijah N. Zoline, Dem.; Kickham Scanlan, Rep.; Merritt W. Pinckney, Rep.; Victor P. Arnold, Rep.; David M. Brothers, Rep.; Charles M. Thomson, Rep.; Donald R. Richberg, Rep.; Thomas Taylor, Jr., Rep.; Oscar M. Torrison, Rep.; Walter M. Baird, Soc.; Walter Lanfersiek, Soc.; Samuel Block, Soc.; Timothy D. Hurley, Non-Par.; Daniel J. McMahon, Non-Par.; Edward Maher, Non-Par.; John D. Farrell, Non-Par.; McKenzie Cleland, Non-Par.

For Superior court judge Louis J. Delson, Socialist, was indorsed for the full term; Henry E. Murphy, Socialist, for the vacancy.

Democratic Candidates Address Meeting of Good Government Council.

Democratic judicial candidates were guests of the Woman's Democratic Council for Good Government yesterday at a luncheon in the Congress hotel. Most of them deplored the "astounding apathy" on the part of the public in the judicial elections and urged the women to try to create interest in the election. Judge Thomas Windes was one of the speakers. He said that he had been married for forty-three years, but that he had never before attended a woman's meeting. Other speakers were Samuel Alschuler, Judge Lockwood Honoré, Judge Frank Baker, Judge Edward O. Brown, Frank Johnston Jr., John W. Beckwith, and Judge John P. McGoorty.

District Attorney Charles F. Quick trials were determined on in an attempt to stamp out Mafia activities in Chicago.

A. Bruce Bielaski, chief of the bureau of investigation of the department of justice, has left Washington for a visit to the San Francisco fair on his vacation. This gave rise to a rumor that he was on his way to Chicago to take charge of a federal investigation of Italian blackmailers and Mafia letter writers. Mr. Bielaski will visit the Chicago bureau on his way west some time this week. Federal officials said there is no special significance in his visit here.

MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE STOPS UNION HOME FOR POOR

Charles N. Haskins and his wife, Mrs. Hilda Johnson-Haskins, were still on the street wandering among their household goods last night. Since they were evicted from the rambling house at 2932 Groveland avenue they have slept in Morris chairs on the street. On the street were dozens of tin pails, sewing machines, and the like—all dreams for the Universal Coöperative Union home which the pair had hoped to form for the poor. But John Slapak of 2437 Oakley avenue, the landlord, foreclosed the mortgage and sent them into the street.

EMOTION ROCKED CROWD WATCHES BIRTH OF NATION

Film Fought by Censors Shown to Public After Court Stops Interference.

RULING PLEASES REEL MEN.

BY KITTY KELLY.

Last night for the first time at the Illinois theater the much contended over photoplay, "The Birth of a Nation," officially unreeled its story to an audience made up of some hundreds of white people and one negro. In spite of the fact that it had emerged from court only yesterday forenoon, when Judge William Fenimore Cooper granted the injunction restraining the city from prohibiting its performance, the house was well filled with people who looked intently, who applauded roundly, frequently and spontaneously, and wept in almost the same degree. There was no sign of disturbance other than of enthusiastic reception in all the performance.

During the intermission D. W. Griffith, the picture's producer, appeared before the curtain, greeted by a storm of applause.

"My name is Griffith," he began, and the audience hushed. "I appreciate your help and I want to thank you for it. We producers of the motion picture must struggle night and day to make of it something other than it used to be, and we beg you with real tears in our eyes and hearts to help us.

Where Censorship Is Needed.

"In the small theaters with changing programs where children are taken you need censorship, but with productions whose character is known, corresponding to the same surroundings as the stage possesses, we need the same privileges as the stage. We cannot portray the great heart of Abaham Lincoln unless we show the wrong of other hearts. As I have said before (referring to Friday, when he spoke in court in defense of his picture), we must have villains of some sort, and if every nationality becomes so sensitive soon we will be able to have none but American villains."

This brought a wave of laughter which subsided slowly to permit him to thank all who had helped him in his struggle, friends and the press, those present, and to pay a special debt of gratitude to "that distinguished, honorable, brave gentleman, Judge William Fenimore Cooper."

Play Has Sympathy of Audience.

And then the picture went on to a sympathy-attuned audience, any disapprovers, if present, not being manifest. Mr. Griffith explained afterwards that the educational series from Hampton college, showing the colored race's advancement, which had been added to the Chicago version, is not permitted by the censors under threat of stopping the picture on the grounds that it was not shown when the film was inspected.

So the negroes, on whose account the fight was made, have been denied the benefit of the showing of racial progress by the authorities whose sympathies were with them to the point of the picture's suppression.

Judge's Decision Broad.

The decision granting the injunction restraining the city from prohibiting the picture's exhibition given by Judge William Fenimore Cooper was broad and precedent establishing for pictures, the first of the kind ever given in the city and paralleling that rendered in New York last week on "The Ordeal" by Supreme Court Justice Whittaker.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Reker declared the city would take an appeal some time next week. To this Judge Cooper said:

"The Birth of a Nation" has been so often referred to in THE TRIBUNE'S columns that no further review of it is deemed necessary.

JUDGE COOPER'S DECISION.

Judge Cooper's decision was as follows:

"The city contends against the issuance of the injunction on three grounds—that the permit to exhibit the photo play in question was not lawfully issued; that the permit issued was revoked and that the photo play, if presented, will engender race animosity against the negro citizens of our community.

"This last ground is based purely on assumption. To find that this is a good objection to the allowing of the injunction, this court will have to assume that our white citizens will not know or appreciate the fact that the days represented in the play were nearly in the first years of the last half century.

"This court will have to assume that they who will witness the play will be so stupid that they will be unable to comprehend that the people represented on the canvas were of two or three generations ago, and that they do not and will not appreciate the fact that in the succeeding time the negro race has advanced almost immeasurably.

"The court cannot assume that this will be so, when we know that there is universal recognition of the fact that the race has shown such great general advancement in from two to three generations as the negro race has done.

Cites Progress of Negro.

"In our own great community the fact is recognized by all well informed citizens that we have in the various professions and higher lines of business members of that race who are ministers, dentists, lawyers, physicians, and business men of fine ability and business character, who enjoy the respect and confidence of our community.

"This court is satisfied from the evidence that in this photo play the good black man and the bad white man are equally prominent figures in the play. Every night in every fair sized community in this broad land where the stage instructs or entertains each and every play has its good characters and its bad characters portrayed, both of which are essential to a play in the rounding out of the moral of the play, and without which moral a play is of no educational value.

"Every night in every theater there is produced the debased type of the white race of different nationalities, and if representative groups of the various nationalities so presented became acutely sensitive that such individual portrayal would cause them to suffer race hatred of their race, and all the plays in which a villain had played were stopped on that account, the theater as an educator and entertainer of the people would become a memory of the past, and there would be nothing to fill its place for the education and enjoyment of our people.

"No one race or nationality has greater right under the law than any other has. Any race or nationality so offended can best give the lie to the bad characters so presented by continuing to conduct themselves as law abiding citizens who do not expect greater rights from the law than it allows all other men or nationalities.

Same Law for White and Black.

"If white men appeal to the courts to restrain the production of a play because one of its characters portrayed that of a dissolute white man whose acting would bring race hatred against the nation which his stage character assumed, their plea would be denied for want of law to support the same, and the law should be and is the same for black and white alike.

"It is the duty of the courts to protect the individual in the enjoyment of his right of property. The complainant in this case is the owner or lessee of the play called 'The Birth of a Nation.' Under the ordinances of our city, if one who desires to present a photoplay or moving picture complies with the law and obtains a license honestly and in good faith, and the play has been censored by the proper authorities of the city, and he has paid his money for a fee, from that time on the owner of the play is vested with an individual property right, which neither the city of Chicago, nor any official, be he mayor, general superintendent of police, or be he judge, can arbitrarily deprive him of, without giving him his hearing or day in court.

Harrison Permit Stands.

"The evidence in this case satisfies the court that this play was censored by the mayor's private secretary and by Mrs. Harrison, the wife of the former mayor of Chicago. Major Funkhouser admits that he received orders from the mayor's office to issue a permit for the production of this photoplay, and gave directions to that effect. A permit was issued first by James Gleason, general superintendent of police, and later on the present general superintendent of police, Charles C. Healey, issued another permit.

"I am obliged to find under the law and the evidence in this case that the complainant is entitled to the relief prayed for, and I will enter an injunction restraining the mayor, the chief of police, and the city of Chicago from interfering with the production of the play."

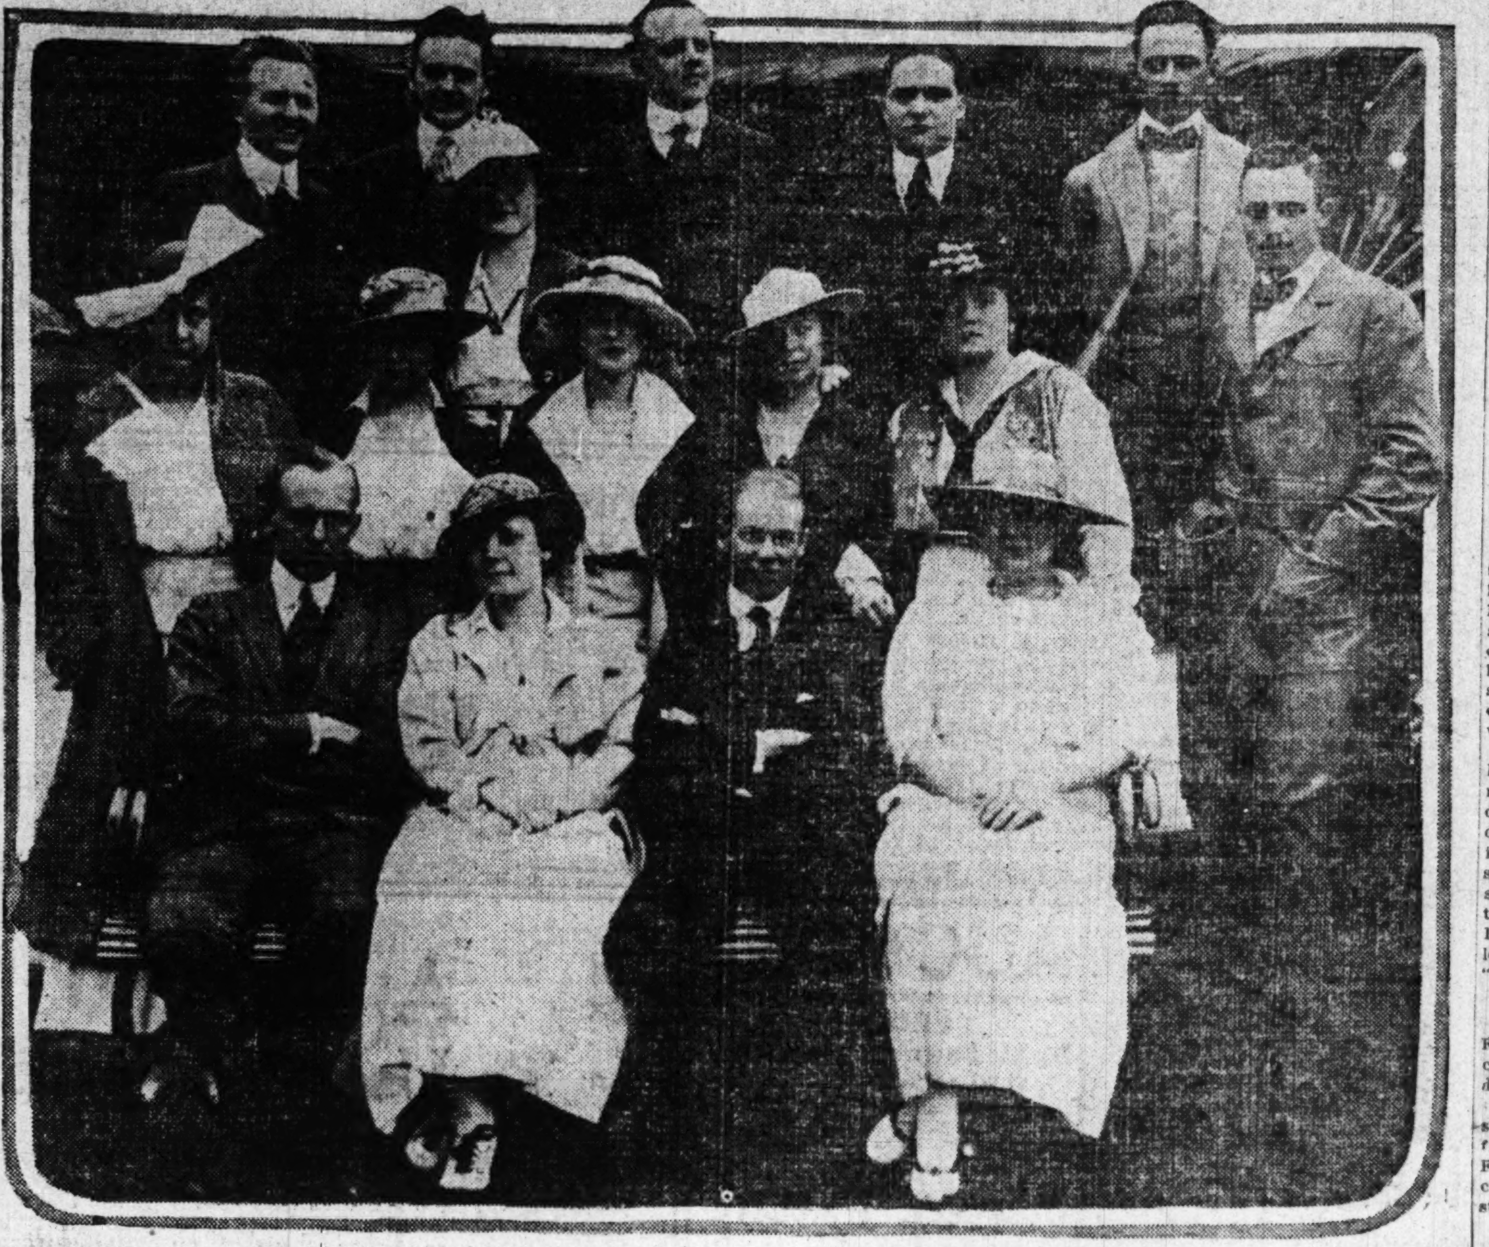
Griffith Highly Pleased.

D. W. Griffith, producer of the film, was probably the most interested listener.

"The decision is gratifying to me for other reasons than the fact there would be a heavy loss of money involved if the film were barred," he said. "I sincerely think more race prejudice would be aroused by the suppression of 'The Birth of a Nation' than by its exhibition. I realize, too, that such a decision took a great deal of nerve on the part of the court."

Chief Healey directed Maj. Funkhouser to have four censors at last night's showing of the picture. Affidavits made by the censors will be presented to Judge Cooper Tuesday in an effort to have the injunction dissolved.

Miss Barker and Fiance at Friends' Wedding.



When announcement of the engagement of Miss Catherine Barker to Howard H. Spaulding Jr. was made a few days ago by James B. Forgan, guardian of the "$30,000,000 heiress," both young people were in Council Bluffs, Ia., prosaic guests at somebody else's wedding. The wedding was that of Miss Marie Stewart of Council Bluffs to Donald McFerren of Hoopeston, Ill. Miss Barker, who served as a bridesmaid, is the last girl to the right in the second row. Mr. Spaulding is second from the right end of the third row. The full personnel follows:

Second row—Miss Florence Heyn of Orange, N. J.; Miss Marie Steifel of Wheeling, W. Va.; Miss Elizabeth Goodrich of Chicago, Miss Louise Haas of Kansas City, Miss Mildred Butler of Omaha, Miss Catherine Barker of Chicago and Michigan City, Ind., and Clifford Wolfe of Council Bluffs.

HEIRESS SEES FRIEND WEDDED

Council Bluffs, Ia., June 5.—[Special.]—Miss Marie Stewart, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles T. Stewart, was married to Donald J. McFerren of Hoopeston, Ill., in St. Paul's Episcopal church tonight.

Among the bridesmaids was Miss Catherine Barker of Michigan City, Ind., and among the ushers was Howard H. Spaulding Jr. of Chicago, who soon is to marry Miss Barker.

The bridesmaids and the matron of honor, the best man, and the five ushers were selected from the close college friends of Mr. McFerren at Harvard and of Miss Stewart at Briar Cliffe manor.

Mrs. Wolfe Given Honor.

Mrs. Clifford Wolfe of Council Bluffs, a bride of a few months, for whom Miss Stewart officiated as bridesmaid, was matron of honor, and the bridesmaids besides Miss Barker were Elizabeth Goodrich of Chicago, Marie Steifel of Wheeling, W. Va., Florence Heyn of Orange, N. J., Louise Haas of Kansas City, and Mildred Butler of Omaha.

Lucien Dyer of Hoopeston was best man, and the ushers were Floyd Evans, Chicago; Howard Spaulding Jr., Chicago; John Banks, Chicago; William McFerren of Hoopeston, and Clifford Wolfe, Council Bluffs.

Church and Homes Decorated.

Both church and home had been lavishly decorated in pink and white. Over 3,000 roses, 200 orchids, and numberless lilies of the valley. Easter lilies, sweet peas, iris, and other flowers were used.

The bridesmaids were dressed alike, in pussy willow taffeta, embroidered in silver, with Castle sleeves, and carried French bats filled with flesh colored roses and orchids, and wore small taffeta hats to match their gowns.

Mr. and Mrs. McFerren left late tonight for Chicago and then go east on a honeymoon trip of six or eight weeks, after which they will live at Hoopeston.

HAVE YOU SEEN THESE BOYS?

The police have been asked to search for six boys and a girl who have disappeared in the last forty-eight hours. They are:

Edward Walsh, 12 years old, of 4247 Cottage Grove avenue.
Walter Jorgenson, 16 years old, of 1036 West Sixty-third street.

50 HORSES BURN TO DEATH.

Fifty horses were burned to death in the stables of the Wakiren Express and Van company at 2300-2320 West Division street last night. The fire started in the garage and spread rapidly to the barn, where a large quantity of hay and feed was stored. The loss was estimated at $15,000.

HUSBAND SUES TYPIST'S TARGET

Hugh McLennan Names Attorney Jennings as Co-respondent.

Mrs. Emma McLennan, who recently escaped a bullet fired at her in Natalby's Randolph street restaurant by Miss Genevieve Irvine, a stenographer then in the employ of Attorney Everett Jennings, was sued for a divorce yesterday by Hugh McLennan, a contractor. Attorney Jennings, who was the cause of the attempted shooting, is named as co-respondent in the bill.

It is not the first time the McLennans' marital troubles have been aired in court. Back in 1910 when McLennan was tried on a charge of wife and child abandonment he testified their marriage on Oct. 6, 1906, was more a matter of the insistence of Mrs. McLennan's brother than his own choosing and that it was contracted on the agreement of Mrs. McLennan to obtain a divorce soon afterward. This Mrs. McLennan denied. The evidence showed the couple had rarely lived together since their marriage.

Jennings Her Counsel.

The next step came on Dec. 30, 1912, when Mrs. McLennan was granted a decree of separate maintenance, given custody of her son, Hugh McLennan Jr., and awarded $110 monthly allimony.

Attorney Jenings represented Mrs. McLennan in the action.

Last April while Jennings was in Springfield attending his duties as counsel for the Public Utilities commission Miss Irvine waited in Natalby's restaurant until Mrs. McLennan arrived for luncheon and, drawing a revolver from her handbag, fired a bullet at the older woman. The bullet went into a wall, and Mrs. McLennan fled screaming.

Typist Blames Mrs. McLennan.

Miss Irvine was arrested on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon. She told a story of having been persecuted by Mrs. McLennan, who accused her of paying too many attentions to Jennings. She said Mrs. McLennan had annoyed her at all hours of the day and night by phone and had driven her almost to desperation by her jealousy.

Mrs. McLennan said she was the persecuted one, and it was Miss Irvine who was jealous. They both had often had luncheon with Jennings, they said, but asserted he was "merely a friend."

When Jennings hurried back to town he disclaimed any friendship for either of the women other than that of purely business relations. The matter was hushed up, and on May 18 Mrs. McLennan withdrew her complaint against the stenographer.

McLennan also asks custody of his son, alleging that Mrs. McLennan is unfit to care for him. He cites various dates on which improper relations are alleged to have existed between the attorney and Mrs. McLennan, embracing a period between January, 1913, and May, 1915. The alleged place of meeting is given as the attorney's office in the City Hall Square building.

Mr. Jennings was formerly an assistant state's attorney and is a member of the firm of Jennings & Fifer. He is married and has a daughter. Mrs. Jennings and her daughter reside in Madisonville, Ky., it is said, because she prefers to live in the south.

OLD DOC YAK OUT IN FILM MONDAY

Sidney Smith's Famous Goat Can Be Got by All Theater Goers.

Old Doc Yak—the famous cartoon figure originated by Sidney Smith and printed in the color section of THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE—will be presented in a series of comic motion pictures beginning tomorrow. Together with the Doc Yak pictures will be shown current events from all over the world. These motion pictures will be shown at leading theaters everywhere.

The title under which these films will be presented is "The Chicago Tribune Animated Weekly with the Adventures of Old Doc Yak." This combination of the educational and the humorous marks a new departure in the motion picture industry.

On Fishing Trip.

The first release of "The Tribune Animated Weekly" to be shown tomorrow at a number of Chicago theaters will show Old Doc Yak on a fishing expedition. The Current Events will include scenes from Sinai Social center at Chicago, showing the making of greater men and women; scenes from the naval academy at Lake Bluff, Ill., showing recruits being drilled in naval efficiency; motion pictures of Mayor Thompson and Gov. Dunne; crippled children being introduced to the jitney bus; a review of our navy showing the giant battleships Kansas and New Hampshire, Rear Admiral Fletcher, and his flagship Wyoming.

The scenes shown in "The Tribune Animated Weekly" indicate exceptional photographic skill. A scene showing the battleship Kansas was taken at the risk of the photographer's life. The daring camera man posed himself at the top of a mast of a near by dreadnought and "shot" the Kansas looking down on to the deck as the huge battleship moved into New York harbor.

Public Invited to Idea Test.

An interesting thing about "The Tribune Animated Weekly" is the fact that the public is invited to furnish ideas for the Old Doc Yak cartoons. A prize of $50 in gold will be given every week for the idea used. Ideas are to be submitted to Sidney Smith, care of THE TRIBUNE. A new edition of "The Chicago Tribune Animated Weekly with the Adventures of Old Doc Yak" will be presented in motion picture form every Monday. Tomorrow the first edition will be shown at the following theaters:

Pine Grove theater—Sheridan road and Broadway.
Twentieth Century theater—4708 Prairie avenue.
Willard theater—340 East Fifty-first street.
Clarendon theater—3819 Clarendon avenue.
Strand theater—3029 Lincoln avenue.
Monroe theater—1316 East Fifty-fifth street.
Star theater—68 West Madison street.
Vista theater—824 East Forty-seventh street.
Oak Park theater—Oak Park, Ill.
Wilson theater—1050 Wilson avenue.

Any theater can secure these films by applying to the Central Film company, 110 South State street, Chicago, Ill.

DUEL IN STREET; AIM PROVES BAD BYSTANDERS HIT

Italians Quarrel Over a Card Game and Settle Dispute in Forquer Thoroughfare.

ONE GUNMAN UNDER ARREST.

Forquer street is a short, narrow thoroughfare near Hull House, in the heart of the west side Italian colony. Most of the buildings are of wooden construction, originally built as one story cottages and afterward raised. Steps lead from the sidewalk to the second story. On a warm night, such as last evening, these steps swarm with Italian women holding bambinos in their arms.

The street was alive with humanity. A hokey pokey man had his cart at the corner of Halsted street, and a score of children were gathered around it. Other children, who had bought a cent's worth of ice cream, were hurrying homeward to share the morsel with bambino. Men stood in groups, smoking and discussing the war. It was soon to develop that Forquer street would be happier if at least two of her residents were on the "other side" to do their shooting.

A Revolver Shot—Bedlam.

A revolver shot suddenly transformed Forquer street into a bedlam. Women clasped their bambinos and fled inside doors.

In a few seconds the street was deserted except for two men who stood in front of No. 827 shooting at each other. Fifteen or twenty shots were thus exchanged. Two of the bullets struck bystanders.

Two Bystanders Hit.

The wounded are:

Vallo, Mary, 6 years old, of 833 Forquer street; shot in the left leg.

Wallace, Robert, of 1800 Lake street, Melrose Park; shot in the abdomen. His condition is serious.

Some one telephoned the Maxwell street station that "Black Handers" were "killing everybody" on Forquer street and a squad of policemen were hurried to the scene.

After the smoke of battle cleared away the police learned that it was not a "Black Hand" case. Witnesses to the shooting said the duelists were Joseph Guido, 827 Forquer street, and Joseph Arrigo, who lives at the same address. They had been playing cards at Arrigo's home and Guido accused Arrigo of cheating. Arrigo invited Guido outside to settle the matter.

One Gunman Held.

Guido, said by the police to have admitted firing four shots, and his brother, Dominick, who was with him at the time, were arrested and Arrigo escaped.

Josephine Sanapoli, 12 years old, was holding a baby in her arms across the street from the gun fighters. In her excitement she dropped the child, whose back was injured by the fall.

BOYS BUILDING OWN PARK AT 30TH AND THE GROVE.

BY THE REV. W. B. NORTON.

A garden spot is in process of creation by boys at Thirtieth street and Cottage Grove avenue.

Charles Comiskey of the White Sox has promised assistance. Other generous persons are willing to lend a hand, but the big end of the job is being done by the boys themselves.

They are working for a self-constructed community playground to be governed by boys for the sake of all the boys and girls within the territory.

The lot which is being transformed is 220 by 120 feet in size, and is owned by a person now living in California, who gave consent to have his property thus used.

For more than twenty years it has been used as a dumping ground. Ash piles six feet in height, beaten hard by rains, and the wheels of dumping carts, were on the place one week ago.

By July 1 it is expected the grounds will be ready for the installation of the apparatus.

"I do not care for the assistance of the city," said the Rev. Myron E. Adams, pastor of the First Baptist church, Thirtieth street and South Park avenue, who conceived the plan. "I believe the boys appreciate doing the work themselves, and the neighborhood takes pride in their enterprise.

"I hope twenty-five churches will adopt the same plan and build community grounds without expense through community self-help."

KILLED DRIVING HIS AUTO; NO CLEW TO MURDERER

Mystery Surrounds Death of M. A. Sherwood of Jackson, Mich., Who Was on Outing with Friends.

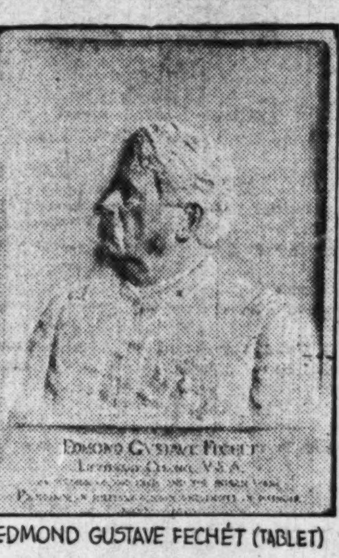
Jackson, Mich., June 5.—After a thorough investigation the police today had absolutely no clew to the identity of the assailant of Mott A. Sherwood, master mechanic of the Michigan Central railroad, who was murdered last night as he was driving through Keeley park in an automobile.

The four persons in the machine with Sherwood told detectives that the automobile came to an abrupt stop, and investigation revealed that Sherwood was dead.

For some time it was believed Sherwood was a victim of apoplexy, but later it was discovered that a bullet had entered his left shoulder and penetrated his heart.

Members of the party reported hearing sharp reports, but said they attributed them to tire explosions.

Honor to Captor of Sitting Bull.



EDMOND GUSTAVE FECHÉT (TABLET)

Col. E. G. Fechét, in whose memory the University of Illinois will erect a bronze tablet on Monday, June 14, had a long and interesting career. At 17 years of age he enlisted as a private soldier, and served his country throughout the civil war.

Then for twenty-five years he was an Indian fighter. It was during this period of his life that he was in command of the forces that captured Sitting Bull. From 1900 to 1910 he was commandant of the University of Illinois regiment.

The death of Col. Fechét recalled to the minds of many throughout the country that he was among the last of a group of men who led wild charges and forlorn hopes against the Indians of our western prairies.

GOLD MEDALS FOR CITY POLICEMEN

Annual Ceremonies to Be Scene of Award by Mayor and Chief of Police.

Decoration of police officials for efficiency was decided on yesterday by Mayor Thompson and Chief of Police Healey. Elaborate ceremonies, in connection with the inauguration of the new aldermen, will be staged annually in the city council chamber.

Gold stars, the gift of the mayor, will be presented to each police official from patrolman up to and including captains for the best records made during the year.

"It seems difficult to get the idea into the heads of the people that there will be no politics in the police department," the mayor said. "I have addressed the captains and told them that I will not interfere in any case for any one, not even my closest political friends.

"The efficiency record will cover the entire conduct of members of the police department entitled to share in these awards. They will be judged first as to their honesty and efficiency in cleaning out the crime places.

"They will be judged on their conduct toward the people of Chicago, their personal appearance, their courtesy, their general efficiency, and, above all, their ability to root out the criminals and keep them rooted out."

Mayor Thompson also, following a conference with Chief Healey, announced he would recommend the installation of a large motorcycle squad for use in making quick captures of criminals.

ASTOR'S INFANT HEIR CAN'T LIVE ON $20,000 A YEAR.

Clothing, Toys and Supplies, $5,000; Physicians and Lawyers, $8,000, Are Items of Child's Expenses.

New York, June 5.—[Special.]—That the infant heir of the late John Jacob Astor, born on Aug. 14, 1912, has not been able to live on the $20,000 a year allowed by the court was made known today when the boy's mother, Mrs. Madeline Talmadge Force Astor, widow of the colonel, as guardian of his posthumous child, filed an accounting.

When Col. Astor went down with the Titanic he left a will which bequeathed to the expected heir a trust fund of $3,000,000. The accounting shows that in addition to spending $20,000, the amount allowed by the court for the child, she has also expended from her own funds $23,639.33 in two years.

Mrs. Astor explains that under the will she was to get the use of the Astor family residence at 840 Fifth avenue for life, unless she remarried. Then she remarks that the upkeep of the establishment constitutes "a great expense," as the taxes are $83,000 and it costs $90,000 a year for service, supplies, and general upkeep.

It is suggested the child should be charged one-third of the cost of maintenance of the establishment.

The accounting shows that since the birth of little John Jacob the mother has expended on him "for physicians, lawyers, and the accountant's bond as general guardian, upward of $8,000, and $5,000 more for clothing, supplies, and toys.

AUTO KILLS BOY AT PLAY.

A group of boys were playing tag in Blackhawk street between Mohawk and Larrabee streets last night. Seven year old Harry Brown of 1507 Larrabee street, dodging his pursuer, ran directly into the path of an automobile driven by Aloysius Weber. He received a fracture of the skull and died before he could be carried to a physician's office. Young Weber, a son of Jacob G. Weber of 2920 Pine Grove avenue, was taken into custody.

John Nehrebzki of 1037 North Marshfield avenue was seriously injured when he was struck by a speeding automobile at Elston avenue and Blanch street. The driver failed to stop and is being sought by detectives.

Lafe Young Sees Year's Strife; No Chance to Starve Germany.

PLENTY OF SHELL METAL.

BY LAFAYETTE YOUNG.

[Ex-Senator from Iowa and Editor of the Des Moines Capital.]

I have just returned from four months passed in the war zone. I am asked every day, "When will the war end?"

In reply I invariably say that my opinion, formed from visits to Great Britain, France, Austria, and Germany, is that the war can easily last another year. The resources of these great countries in men and money have scarcely been touched. The securities issued by these countries are cheerfully bought by their own people. While there is some depreciation in the currency of all the countries excepting Great Britain, it is evident that more money can be had.

During our great American war both sides of the controversy were poor, and money was hard to get. The confederates were especially distressed because they had no government machinery at the start; they had no credit.

The governments I have named have had practically unlimited credit. The thrift of the Germans and also that of the French is proverbial. The Austrians have not had such good standing, but the British have been considered as good as the Bank of England. It will take a long time to bring conditions which will cause these countries to quit on account of money.

Teuton Allies Have Food.

The Germans and the Austrians are issuing bread tickets to reduce the consumption of bread. But I believe both of these countries have more foodstuffs on hand, or within reach than when war was declared. Then, again, it takes a long time to starve people out. Our own confederates lived two years after all sane men supposed they were starved out. Therefore, the war will not end with a failure of money or a failure of food.

How about men? It is believed that Germany has 10,000,000 of men under arms; France must have 6,000,000; Great Britain, 4,000,000; Russia, probably 8,000,000—maybe 10,000,000. Serbia is now in the war with 1,000,000 men and Italy with 1,500,000.

Then there are the battleships, submarines, and the aeroplanes. All these men and machines must be supplied with powder and metal. Every machine shop that was ever created and which now exists in any of the countries at war is making munitions of war.

France Busy Making Shells.

I was in a great factory in Paris which was created for altogether other purposes, but which was turning out 5,000 shells for the three inch guns every twenty-four hours. In other parts of France the same kind of work was in progress; the same state of facts undoubtedly exists in Great Britain. There are factories in Canada running out war munitions, and no one need be told what is being done in Germany.

There is a complaint in Germany that the United States is furnishing the ammunition for the allies, but Representative Gardner says the United States furnishes only 1 per cent of the ammunition used by the allies, and the allies complain that they are out of ammunition much of the time.

Great Britain has been distressed because the workingmen of that country have not been enthusiastic in producing war munitions, and in Germany I saw wagons driven through the streets of the cities gathering up old metal for use in the munition factories. I also saw broken German shells on the battlefields, the shells having been made of aluminum instead of copper, which is the usual metal. I saw the metal wagons traveling in Austria.

Plenty of Metal on Hand.

I concluded that these exertions for the gathering of metal and manufacture of munitions mean that the war will not end on account of the lack of metal. Our own American confederates had powder and ball until the end of the war, though the impression was they were out of everything. Necessity is the mother of invention. This is especially true in war times. The Germans are making substitutes for nearly everything.

Then, when will the war end, and what will end it? It will not be ended by submarines or aeroplanes. It will be ended when one army or the other has a sufficient number of men and a sufficient number of weapons and muskets with which to smash the more than 400 miles of trenches forming a rainbow through France and Belgium. There must be a sufficient number of three pound cannon which, being centered upon the trenches, shall drive men out, thus putting the fighting on the surface.

The smashing of these lines will mean the death of hundreds of thousands, if not millions, of men. That country will win which is most willing to throw its men into the ditches of death. The war began in Belgium and France and must end in Belgium and France.

Trenches Stronger than Forts.

The trenches are secure and are harder to get rid of than the strongest fortress. The Germans battered down Antwerp and this later fortress, Przemysl, but they have not been able to batter down the trenches near Ypres. When Grant undertook to take Richmond he started toward that place and kept going regardless of the dead and dying. This must be done in the present war.

If I were commanding the armies of the allies I would be preparing for the destruction of the trenches, and I would forget the submarines and the Zeppelins. I asked an officer near the fighting line in France why they did not turn the artillery on the trenches and clean them out. He said: "We have not the men, or if we had we have not the weapons," and I judge that Germany and its allies feel the same way, or at least they have felt that way, for the reason that the trenches have not been much changed since the battle of Marne and the German retreat. After this retreat the present trench lines were formed, starting from the valley of the Aisne.

Those countries or combinations the most willing to die along the 400 miles of trenches will win the present struggle and the date is a long time ahead. A war is like a jury. A jury will never agree until the last moment has arrived, and an army will do its desperate work only when the last hour is at hand.

Soldiers Keep Hidden.

The trenches I have referred to make tents and habitations unnecessary. I sat on a hillside with shells going overhead and looked down the valley of the Aisne where thousands of men ought to have been in view, and not a man could be seen. There were sheep grazing not far away and farmers were plowing less than five miles from the trenches, but even the hand of a soldier could not be seen above the trench.

All the leading Germans believe that if the American sale of ammunition to the allies would cease the German combination would win the war within sixty days. This ammunition question causes all the bitterness in Germany toward the Americans. While I was in Berlin I was stared out of countenance on the streets, and it was made manifest to me that they did not want Americans in that country. Every German mentioned the subject of ammunition; every German mother who loses a son is told that her son was killed by a bullet made in America.

Willing to Sell Germany.

A young American friend of mine, in my presence, told a German that America was selling ammunition to the allies and would sell ammunition to the Germans on an equal footing. He also told him that Germany and the Krupp factory had been selling ammunition to warlike peoples for fifty years, and he thought the Americans had the same right. The young man further said: "We have been reading the history of these matters. The Krupp factory has been enriched by selling ammunition to nations other than Germany. This factory furnished guns and ammunition to Turkey, also to the Balkan states, and at one time was shipping such materials to Mexico."

The young American also remarked that if any Americans were making ammunition and making money out of the same they were such Germans as Charles Schwab. I did not engage in this discussion.

The fact is, however, that the German hatred of Americans is great and the average German in Germany expects that in case America has war with Germany that the German-Americans will wake up in the night for the purpose of cutting the throats of Americans born in America. Of course, this is not true, but that idea prevails in Germany to a great degree.

No Joy When Liner Was Sunk.

When the Lusitania was sunk I was in Berlin. I saw no celebrations of that event. The war party in Germany may have been happy, but I have no doubt that there were many Germans who did not indorse that tragedy. The Lusitania bulletin board attracted small attention compared with the bulletin board giving the war news from the Carpathians. But I have no doubt that the hearts of German mothers were deeply touched when they knew that nearly a hundred babies were sunk with the Lusitania.

There is so much said about America in the war zone that one is almost prepared to think that America is at war with some country. American people have poured out their wealth for the poor in Belgium and for the Red Cross; our young women have gone over to act as nurses; our surgeons have been dressing the wounds of all the armies. These things do not soften the almost universal hatred expressed for Americans.

I think it would be good policy for Americans to be giving some thought to their own affairs. We have a big country, and we need loyal and patriotic hearts. The American people do not want war, but we do want a greater spirit of independence in an industrial sense. We should not import what can be made at home. Germany has been preparing for industrial independence fully forty years, and behold the result. It is self-reliant and full of courage.

City Official's Car Hit.

An automobile owned by Deputy Commissioner of Public Works William Burkhardt, who was sitting in it at West Randolph and North Dearborn streets yesterday, was struck by a car owned by the American Auto Insurance company driven by R. G. Gorman of 409 East Fortieth street. Neither car was damaged seriously.

HERITABLE TITLE CANNOT BE CAST OFF IN ENGLAND

Case of Sir Edgar Speyer Calls Attention to Law of Britain.

BY EX-ATTACHE.

[Copyright: 1915: By the Brentwood Co.]

Sir Edgar Speyer's arrival in this country for the purpose of spending the summer and the early autumn on the coast of Maine serves to call attention to the letter which he addressed on the eve of his departure to Premier Asquith, asking him to secure the acceptance of his resignation as a member of the privy council and the revocation of his baronetcy.

Sir Edgar intimated that he had been led to make this application by the agitation in the United Kingdom against naturalized citizens of German birth and by the charges of disloyalty made against him in connection therewith, not only by the press, but also by public men.

Mr. Asquith in reply gave expression to his sense of the injustice of these attacks, to the conviction of crown and government that Sir Edgar's loyalty was above reproach and to the king's refusal to accept the resignation of his membership in the privy council. At the same time Mr. Asquith intimated to Sir Edgar that the revocation of his baronetcy was impossible.

Council Resignation Possible.

George V. could easily have acepted Sir Edgar's resignation of his privy councillorship. Whereas the sovereign cannot bestow a peerage or a baronetcy, nor, indeed, any of the great orders of knighthood, without the concurrence of the government in the person of a minister of state, responsible to parliament, he can make a privy councilor of whomsoever he lists without regard to government or to legislature.

He is entitled to take counsel of whom he will without restriction and the outward signs of his confidence in this matter are the enrollment of the person thus honored in the book of the council and his swearing the customary oath of loyalty and of secrecy.

The sovereign can in the same way revoke of his own accord and without ministerial intervention any appointment to the privy council and without giving any reasons. It is not necessary that the person thus removed should have been guilty of any offense.

Last Removal by William IV.

There have been a number of instances in English history of removal of names from the privy council by order of the sovereign, the last cases being in the reign of William IV. But Queen Victoria, like her successors, abstained from ever taking any such action, although she was sorely tempted to do so with regard to the late Sir Charles Dilke, against whom she developed an extraordinarily violent prejudice after his connection with the Crawford divorce case.

Even English people know little about their sovereign's privy council beyond the fact that membership therein bestows the privilege of prefixing the words "right honorable" to the name and that every one who forms part thereof is specially prayed for on Sundays during divine service of the Established Church.

Oldest British Institution.

The privy council, I may add, is the oldest institution of the British empire, the so-called aula regia, or curia regia, of the early Norman days, older even than that English parliament which is acknowledged to be in point of age the senior and dean of all now existing legislative bodies of the world. The cabinet is merely a committee of the privy council.

However, aside from certain privileges in connection with the entrée at court, the members of the privy council have no particular rights to speak of and have no power to offer advice to the sovereign or to attend any of the meetings of the council unless specially summoned by him for the purpose.

No Instance of Disbaronetage.

With regard to Sir Edgar Speyer's baronetcy, there is no instance on record of any revocation of the patent of that dignity since its first institution by James I. a little over 300 years ago. There are cases in English history of a peer being dispeered—in olden times. But the annals of the realm will be sought in vain for any mention of a disbaronetage.

The difficulty in the way of the revocation of a baronetcy lies in the fact that it is a hereditary honor, and that English law no longer permits the so-called "corruption of blood," that is to say, the visiting of the sins of the fathers upon their children, save in the rare cases of high treason.

Cannot Alienate Dignities.

If crown and government cannot annul a peerage or a baronetcy, save by legislative action in the case of high treason alone, neither can the holder of these dignities, through creation or inheritance, alienate or renounce them.

In the case of the new creation of these honors the person to whom they are offered in the name of the crown is free to refuse them, and there are hundreds of instances of the declination of these dignities. But once accepted and officially gazetted, they become inalienable and have to be borne by the recipient and by his lawful descendants in the male line, no matter how heavy or obnoxious the burden.

Sir Edgar Speyer stands today in the position of a baronet in spite of himself. He may find comfort in the knowledge that there are a number of peers of the realm in a similar position, who have vainly endeavored in every possible way to divest themselves of their status as hereditary legislators.

Dispeered as Offensive.

In olden times English monarchs possessed the right of dispeering as well as of creating peers, and historical research has brought to light the fact that in the Plantagenet and Tudor eras members of the house of lords were frequently dispeered by the monarch when they happened to have given him cause for offense.

Thus there is an official record the instance of a Duke of Bedford, who was dispeered by Edward IV., deprived of all his heredity titles, and reduced to the level of an ordinary esquire, on the ground that in the estimation of the crown he was too poor to maintain the rank of a peer of the realm.

The sovereign, however, has long ceased to enjoy these powers in Great Britain. When in 1678 Robert Villiers petitioned Charles II. that he might "surrender and resign to his majesty the title and honor of Viscount Purbeck and all of his other honors and titles, as well in possession as in remainder," the decision of the house of lords, to whom the matter had been referred, was that the sovereign could not deprive or relieve a peer of his honors and dignities as such.

Among the reasons which the lords gave for their decision was that a peerage was a "dignity annexed to the blood," and that only a "corruption of blood," by parliamentary attainder of high treason could hinder the descent.

This decision on the part of the house of lords was reaffirmed by that body as recently as in 1907, when sitting as the highest tribunal of the land on the earldom of Norfolk peerage case.

Need Not Use Title.

Of course, it is always possible for a peer or a baronet to refrain from using his honors. Thus, the late Sir Arthur Cowell Stepney, who died mysteriously in a village railroad station in Arizona some years ago, and who, a great land owner in Wales and in California, abandoned England in anger at having been placed under temporary restraint in consequence of his eccentricities, solemnly renounced his baronetcy on taking up American citizenship and absolutely declined to receive any letter from England giving him the prefix of "sir" to his Christian name, on the ground that he had "dropped the baronetcy for good and all."

CLAIMS GENERAL AS KIN; MAN ROBS A MAHARAJAH.

German Who Entered Apartments in Salt Lake Hotel Admits He Took Away Strong Box.

Salt Lake City, Utah, June 5.—Lorenz von Arnim auf Kennersdorf, who claims to be a relative of Gen. von Arnim of the German army, is in jail here, and has confessed the theft of the strong box taken from the apartments of the Maharajah of Karpurthala in a hotel Thursday.

Von Arnim has also revealed the hiding place of the box, which, with its contents practically intact, is in the hands of the police. The box contained about $850 in foreign money and papers, including photographs in a secret compartment which Von Arnim did not open.

Among the papers are a receipted bill for $2,266 from a New York hotel, a receipt for $7,000 for a private railway car, a letter of credit for $300,000 issued in Bombay, and another for $150,000 issued in London.

Von Arnim was arrested last night at Ogden, Utah, where he attempted to exchange English for United States money. He talked freely of the theft, saying he first obtained access to the maharajah's apartments here in the guise of a vender of art works, and then waited until the party went out, when he entered and removed the box, which he placed in a suitcase belonging to the maharajah.

Jewels valued at more than $50,000, usually kept in the box, had been removed and placed in another receptacle only a few hours before the theft.

SUES TO REMOVE L BRIDGE.

Clyne Plans to Enforce Order of War Department Against Company.

District Attorney Charles F. Clyne yesterday prepared to file suit in the United States District court tomorrow against the Metropolitan Elevated road to compel removal of the company's bridge across the Chicago river.

WEDDINGS MARK SOCIETY'S FIRST JUNE SATURDAY

As always, the first Saturday in June brought to the attention of Chicago society a number of prominent weddings.

One of the most interesting was that of Miss Isabel Chandler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Chandler of 744 Rush street, who was married at 8 o'clock in the evening, in the presence of the relatives only, to Hobart Paul Young. Her three cousins, Misses Rosalie, Violet, and Beatrice Selfridge, daughters of Mrs. Harry Gordon Selfridge of London, who was also present, served as bridesmaids. Clinton Young was best man.

The bride wore a gown of soft white satin and her veil was held in place by a half wreath of orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley.

The couple will make their home in Chicago after a honeymoon trip that will take them to Yellowstone park, where last summer their romance began during a journey through the park which was given for the Selfridge children.

Miss Florence Butler Weds.

Oak Park residents were especially interested in the wedding of Miss Florence Elizabeth Butler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Fred Butler of 3 Elizabeth court, to Don Bernard Kilbourne, which took place at the First Congregational church at 8:30 o'clock p. m., the Rev. William Barton reading the service.

The bride was attended by Miss Frances Copeland as maid of honor, who preceded the bride, wearing a gown of pink faille, embroidered in silver, and carrying a shower bouquet of pink sweet peas.

The six bridesmaids were gowned alike so far as the model of the gown went. Miss Laura Githens and Miss Margery Baker wore gowns of turquoise blue, veiled in tulle; Miss Dorothy Webb and Miss Ada Lewis Hart of Louisville, Ky., wore gowns of pale blue, and Miss Gladys Beyers and Miss Grace Hill wore gowns alike, of deep blue and pale pink. All the maids carried leghorn hats filled with various shades of pink sweet peas.

Carries Basket of Flowers.

Little Olivia Swiries wore a frock of pink and carried a basket of spring flowers.

The bride was gowned in white satin trimmed with seed pearls and Carrickmacross lace, with a veil of the same lace held in place with orange blossoms. Her bouquet was a shower of lilies of the valley and white orchids.

Lyman Kilbourne served his son as best man and the ushers were Charles R. Crane II., Joseph P. Norton, Harry Lampert, Walter Rehm, Henry Eckstein, Julius Butler, and Paul Butler.

Dawes-Ericson Nuptials.

In Evanston the wedding of Miss Carolyn Dawes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. Dawes of 225 Greenwood boulevard, to Melvin B. Ericson, took place at 4:30 o'clock. The Rev. Arthur Beach of Marietta, O., read the service, assisted by Dr. W. H. McElveen. Miss Sarah Louise Buffington was maid of honor and Chester Ericson was best man. Among the prominent guests were Charles W. Fairbanks of Indianapolis, Mr. and Mrs. George Earle of Philadelphia, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hanna of New York and Mrs. R. R. Dawes of Marietta.

The marriage of Miss Dorothy Wells, daughter of Mrs. Frank Wells of Groveland Park, to Walter H. Merritt of New York, took place at the family residence. The bride wore white satin and her veil was fastened with orange blossoms. Mrs. George P. Braun Jr. was matron of honor and Misses Alta Stevens and Katherine Waldo were bridesmaids. A reception followed. The couple will live in New York city.

A $500,000 Gift
To Users of Fortified Tires

This is an actual gift, as these facts show: Nobody asked for better tires than Goodyear built last year. Nobody thought them possible. They were so extra-good that for years they've outsold any other tire.

And this year—on February 1st—we gave you another big price reduction. It will save Goodyear users about $5,000,000 this year. It was our third reduction in two years, totaling 45 per cent.

This Year's Extras

Yet, despite this reduction, we have added new improvements which will cost us $500,000 this year. Part are in extra rubber—all in extra wear.

We have added these extras to the best tires built. To tires that dominate because of super-service. And we've done it at a time when price reductions have led to considerable skimping.

Total

All the extras we give you in Goodyear tires will cost us $1,635,000 this year, judged by current output. These include five features which no other maker uses. It includes other uncommon features.

We could omit all these, yet build a tire which looks about like Goodyears. It would serve as well as many rival tires. Thus we could add to this year's profits $1,635,000.

Tires Not Alike

It's a vast mistake to think that tires are pretty near alike. Five of the greatest features known are found in Fortified Tires alone. And many a tire lacks all the extras that we cite.

These extras combat rim-cutting, blowouts, loose treads. They combat punctures and skidding. They mean a secure tire. They mean more rubber, more fabric than some. They mean more mileage, less trouble, less expense.

We pay the price to give you these extras, and save it by mammoth output. You should insist on them. Any dealer, if you ask him, will supply you Goodyear tires.

IT'S 'FLY WEEK'; CHICAGO OPENS FIGHT ON PESTS

"Clean City of Disease Carrying Insects," Slogan of Crusaders.

This week is "Fly week."

With the leadership of THE TRIBUNE, Chicago has mobilized its fly fighting forces for an epoch making campaign against the arch-disseminator of deadly diseases.

By virtue of official proclamation by Mayor Thompson, seconded by the school board and Superintendent of Schools Ella Flagg Young, the entire public school system of the city, together with many private and parochial schools, will endeavor to make this week mark the Waterloo of the Chicago fly. Every resident of the city is asked to help by killing flies.

The Clean Chicago federation, the agricultural extension department of the International Harvester company, the Chicago Medical society, and the municipal departments of health, streets, and police have combined with THE TRIBUNE to save lives in Chicago by making the city cleaner than it has ever been before.

Can Be Made "Flyless" City.

That Chicago can actually be made a flyless city has been demonstrated by the sanitation of Havana, Cuba, by Americans.

Dr. W. A. Evans of THE TRIBUNE'S health department has pointed out to the Chicago Medical society that flies are almost unknown in Havana, although the climatic conditions encourage them much more than in Chicago. Nevertheless Chicago, compared with other cities in the temperate zone, has been found to be somewhat worse off than the average in respect to the plague of flies.

The lecture feature of the campaign alone is a big thing. It means that this week in the schools of Chicago there will be given upwards of 3,000 lectures on the evil of the fly and how to stop it.

The initial work will be done by teachers, aided by 200 volunteer lecturers from the Chicago Medical society, the state pure food commission, the state bureau of entomology, the municipal board of health, and the agricultural extension department of the International Harvester company.

Schools Make Fly Traps.

W. M. Roberts, superintendent of vocational training, already has initiated the making of fly traps in the schools. Hundreds of patterns of a fly trap invented by Prof. P. G. Holden of the Harvester company have been distributed to the schools, that pupils may make traps not only for themselves but for their neighbors.

Children will be encouraged to report their individual work in fighting the fly. Essays will be written on the fly. A feature of the campaign in the schools will be this "fly catechism," adapted from a bulletin prepared by the Kansas state board of health:

Fly Catechism.

1. Where is the house fly born? In filth, chiefly in horse manure and outhouses.

2. How long is the life cycle of his birth? About ten days from the time the egg is laid until the mature fly is born.

3. What are the steps in the transformation from the egg to the fly? The egg, the maggot, the pupa, the fly.

4. Where does the fly live? Where there is filth.

5. Is there anything too filthy for the fly to eat? No.

6. Does the fly like clean food, too. Yes, and it appears to be his delight to wipe his feet on clean food.

7. Where is his favorite place of feeding? The manure heap and the garbage can.

8. Where does the fly go after leaving the manure pile and the garbage can? Into the kitchen, dining room, and bedroom.

9. What does he do in the kitchen, dining room, and bedroom? He wipes his feet on the food, bathes in the milk and annoys the sleeper.

10. Does the fly visit those sick with typhoid fever, consumption, smallpox, and cholera infantum? He certainly does, and may call on you next.

11. Is the fly dangerous? Yes, he spreads disease.

12. How does he spread disease? By carrying infection on his legs and wings, and by "fly specks" after he has been feeding on infectious material.

13. What diseases may the fly thus carry? He may convey typhoid fever, tuberculosis, cholera, dysentery, and "summer complaint."

14. Did the fly ever kill any one? He killed more American soldiers in the Spanish-American war than the bullets of the Spaniards, and was the direct cause of much of the typhoid fever in Kansas last year.

15. Where are the greatest number of cases of typhoid fever and summer complaint? Where there are the most flies.

16. Where are the most flies? Where there is most filth.

17. Is the presence of flies therefore an indication of nearby filth? It most certainly is, and that is disgraceful.

FRANKLIN SKAILAND
ETHEL BLADLE, MARTHA COHORT

FLORENCE MUELLER.

MANUAL training pupils in Chicago's public schools already are at work making fly traps in preparation for "fly week." Hundreds of plans for traps furnished to the board of education by THE TRIBUNE and the agricultural extension department of the International Harvester company already have resulted in finished traps. Seventh grade pupils in the Schiller school were the first to take up the work of making traps under the supervision of Mrs. Zelle Mills, manual training teachers, Miss Edna Scharzman, and Principal Belle Murphy.

TO THE PEOPLE OF CHICAGO!

Make up your minds that you will individually and personally kill some flies this week.

Make it your business—each one of you—to cause the removal or thorough disinfection of at least one manure heap or fly breeding garbage pile.

Buy fly swatters and use them.

Build or buy a fly trap or get the boys at the nearest manual training school to make you one.

Put screens in all doors and windows.

Protect all food from flies.

If you see anybody maintaining a fly nuisance, report it to the Health department. Prompt action on your part may save a doctor's bill and possibly a funeral in your house.

Notice of Increase in Guaranteed Mileage to 6,000 Miles

Hereafter 6,000 miles will be the basis of guaranteed service for all Pennsylvania Oilproof
VACUUM CUP TIRES
per guarantee tag attached to each casing.
This will apply also to all Vacuum Cup Tires at present in service.
This announcement follows logically the result of The Automobile Club of America Official Test, in which nine tires on heavy cars averaged 6,760 miles, three of them exceeding 8,900 miles.
On the new basis of guarantee, Vacuum Cup Tires are lower in cost per mile by from 17% to 22% than any so-called non-skid tires sold on a 3,500 miles adjustment basis.
Bear in mind also that Vacuum Cup Tires are the only tires guaranteed not to skid on slippery pavements, or returnable at full purchase price after reasonable trial.
The Vacuum Cups act on the only principle by which rubber projections can grip a smooth wet surface.

SOME REFLECTIONS ON OUR DIPLOMATIC SITUATION.

If our recollection is not faulty, Mr. Bryan, upon his assumption of the high office he now occupies, remarked that this republic would suffer no wars while he was secretary of state.

It would seem at this moment, as the republic is confronting the possibility, though not yet, we hope, the probability, of not merely one war, but two, that though Mr. Bryan proposes it is another and even higher (or much lower) power that disposes.

Mr. Bryan's confidence was founded on the pet pacifist maxim that it takes two to make a quarrel, and as Mr. Bryan was quite certain that under his amiable influence the United States positively would not be one, it followed as the night the day that war would be for us, to use the phrase of another leading pacifist, "humanly impossible."

Yet we see the government moving with apparent deliberation along a course which, as only a most stubborn optimism can fail to see, leads to our engulfment in the European catastrophe and at the same time to our assumption of the difficult task of extensive and costly military operations in Mexico.

If these be the fruits of pacifist statecraft surely any nation that has concern for its own safety and welfare will pray to be delivered from its deceiving charms.

This, indeed, will not be the first time, even in our own annals, as our president has pointed out in his admirable history of the American people, that a program of confident peace has ended in the contrary certainty of war. It is earnestly to be hoped that both the government and the people of this critical day will realize that we are not immune to the fate of other nations, that miracles will not intervene to save us from the normal consequences of our own acts because our intent is lofty, and that if we choose to place ourselves athwart the path of a militant nation's necessities or vital interests we must expect not meek retreat before the light of our nobility, but the full shock of its strength.

We must assume that the extreme consequences of our course are being coolly weighed by the government. The people of the United States do not wish war. They are beyond any question overwhelmingly opposed to it. They oppose it not merely because they have pondered over the terrific facts of the European conflict, its waste and agony, but also because they cannot see any due proportion between the offenses of which we complain and the staggering sacrifice of war. This the president doubtless is aware of as well as of the fact that as chief executive he is not an enforcer of doctrine, but a trustee of the vital interests of the nation.

We may expect, therefore, that despite his self-accusation as a man of one track mind he does not propose to rest an issue of peace and war upon the dogmatic assertion of a rule of war framed before the invention of the instrument to which it is now sought to apply it literally.

Considerations there may be why the United States should enter the war against Germany. It may be that the president fears that Germany triumphant would wreak her power and her resentment upon us, directly or indirectly. It may be that he considers Germany's success over the allies either certain or so nearly so that he feels justified in thrusting us into the struggle to turn the scale against her.

These are substantial though they may be entirely erroneous considerations. But if Germany is already our foe and her triumph a peril to our security or prosperity it is obvious that we would do well to fight now with allies rather than later alone and unsupported.

But certainly the American people are not willing to pay the price of war to enforce the main point of marine law urged in the American note of May 13.

It would seem that such an issue turns upon questions of law and of right which are justiciable, and should be resolved either diplomatically or by such arbitration as the United States, notably this administration, has so ardently favored as a preventive of war.

As to the conduct of the maritime operations pending the adjudication of principles, while it is proper for the president to urge upon Germany a cessation of her program, there seems to be no reason why a satisfactory modus vivendi may not and ought not to be arranged by reasonable concessions on our side as well as Germany's. Unless there is an unhappy failure in Washington to recognize the conditions with which Germany is confronted we shall not expect all the sacrifices to be made by Germany because we hold to a view of law inconsistent with her military interests.

The dispatch of a special representative of the German embassy to Berlin to supplement the other representations of our position and of the American situation gives grounds for hope that a rational accommodation is still probable. Certainly public opinion does not favor either war or the adoption of any position incompatible with a just consideration of German rights and interests and an honorable compromise of legitimate differences.

THE BOND ISSUES.

Cook county voters will have three bond issues submitted to them for indorsement at tomorrow's election. The first of $2,500,000 for a new jail and Criminal court building presents an opportunity to remedy the present barbarous and shameless housing conditions immediately.

The $1,000,000 issue for the erection of new buildings for the care of indigent, sick, and poor will relieve the crowded county hospital and make room for 1,300 more patients. The plans are to spend $650,000 in the erection of two new wings to the hospital, $150,000 for a new morgue and psychological laboratory, and $250,000 for a power house, laundry, and storeroom. The third issue of $200,000 will be used to complete the ninth and tenth floors of the county courthouse, which have been left unfinished for the last ten years.

The issue for the county jail is the only proposal that has met any real opposition, and it is based upon the assumption that because a former county board under an entirely different administration made blunders the present board will make the same mistakes. President Reinberg, who claims a majority following on the board, has publicly promised that no plans for a new jail will be adopted "until concurred in by any expert body the people want."

The voters have the alternative of indorsing the proposed bond issues and going ahead or of rejecting them and standing still for the next four years, with no assurances that at the end of that time the county board will be superior or even equal to the present body.

PERIL AND PRIVILEGE.

In war the post of honor is the post of danger, and the present conflict has created such posts unheard of before. That of the aviator is one. That of the military chauffeur is another. We should not be surprised if when statistics of mortality are available the service of the latter will be proved the more perilous. Frequently there is report of the loss of an airman. There is nothing in the wrecking of an automobile to claim special notice. Only a war photograph occasionally shows the tortured wreckage of the machine, but of the driver there is silence.

Yet many men are serving their country at the constant risk of life behind the wheels of the great cars which cannon along the roads of Flanders and France, of Germany, Austria, and Russia. In the ponderous armored cars mounting guns they hold bridge heads and roadways under fire of rifle and shrapnel and explosive shell. As couriers they rush at the highest speed through streets, swiftly cleared at the sound of their cornet, over unknown country roads in the blackest night—and into culverts and broken bridge spans with maiming or death as the fortune of war.

A good chauffeur is worth a company of men. He may be worth a division if his message or his passenger is of enough importance, and over his braced shoulders waits always the soldier's accolade of death in the service of his country.

This new service has offered a special opportunity for the young men of birth and wealth who, lacking military training, wished to bear their share of danger, suffering, and service. It is to the credit of the privileged classes of all the belligerent countries that they have unflinchingly paid the heavy price of leadership. When a young man of high position lacked training for the army or navy he sought some onerous duty, and the place of military chauffeur was one for which his courage and skill fitted him. In Germany with its forethought there was before the war, and is, an organization known as the Imperial Freiwillige Automobile corps. It is composed of young men of rank or wealth who volunteered to drive their own cars in case of war and to serve as military chauffeurs. It is a highly honorable service because, as we have said, it is dangerous and important. And it is a full and generous devotion. The freiwillige chauffeur supplies his own machine and war equipment and a professional chauffeur or mechanician to see that his service is fully efficient. There is no attempt to avoid service on the ground of insufficient training for the violent and difficult conditions of war. The freiwillige offers himself and makes sure that his offer is of full value to his country.

The war, and of late especially the lengthening of its grim shadow until it threatens our own serene skies, have set most Americans thinking. We know, of course, what would happen at the call, how out of plain houses in quiet village streets and along the innumerable obscure streets of cities would come the American citizen, farmer and mechanic, lawyer and shopkeeper, clerk and doctor, to march as his father did under the flag.

But we know, too, that if war is forced upon us now, while most of us will have to wait months before our service will be of any value, there is one service that can and ought to be given without delay. Not merely men in arms, but military chauffeurs, are needed abroad, and if we are compelled to take our place among the warring nations volunteers for this service would be welcome in the field.

Will there be a free will offering from the American aristocracy for this perilous honor?

It is to be hoped so. Legally we have no aristocracy, but we have thousands of young men upon whom most of the privileges of aristocracy have been bestowed and few or none of the responsibilities. It would be intolerable that in the American democracy alone in all the world there should be privilege without duty, honors without honor.

It happens that it is among Americans of wealth and opportunity that we find the most militant spirit, war talk, and insistence upon our duty to take an aggressive course in defense of civilization, in defense of humanity, in defense of liberal institutions against militarist empire, in defense of national interest or honor. It would seem then that this class will be the first to yield volunteers, and especially for this perilous honor of the military chauffeur. If our young men of "wealth and position" are not trained to arms or even to a public service of peace, they will surely not fail to justify their privileges when the nation calls for its sons.

Editorial of the Day.

WHAT OUR PERIL IS.

[From the New Republic.]

Our present peril exists less in the aggression of other nations than in our own failure to have already decided the basic notions which of themselves determine expedient conduct. If the people are determined not to arm on any account, the authorities must be exceedingly careful not to raise diplomatic issues which will in the least degree provoke opposition abroad, and must relegate to the wastebasket a number of policies of previous administrations—among others the Monroe Doctrine. If, on the other hand, we decide to maintain certain interests and policies which can be made effective only by extensive armament, the people must reach that decision in advance or the government will be unable to execute the popular will when the time comes. It seems unwise to provoke a dispute and then to decline to fight about it; or to determine to fight and to find ourselves without the means.

LA MARQUISE DE FONTENOY.

AMONG the hospitals organized in England for the reception and care of the wounded soldiers is that founded by the American born Lady Fermor-Hesketh at her country seat at Egdon hall, in the Bicester country, in memory of her second son, Freddie Fermor-Hesketh. The latter, holding a commission as lieutenant in the Ninth lancers, mysteriously disappeared on Sunday, Oct. 30, 1910, from Dublin, and has never been heard of since.

Why he suddenly left Shadworth manor, near Banbury, where he was staying with his father and mother for the hunting, and proceeded to Ireland without warning any one of his relatives and friends, is beyond their comprehension. His brown leather valise and his rug were found on board the steamer Leinster, by which he crossed from Holyhead to Kingstown early on Sunday morning. But from the time he landed—he was seen disembarking—he vanished, without leaving any trace.

There was no reason whatsoever which his parents, his relatives, his friends and regimental comrades, could think of that would cause him thus to disappear, and thousands of pounds have been spent without success in searching for him in all parts of the world, especially in the United States and Canada, but without finding the slightest clew.

His mother, Lady Fermor-Hesketh, was Florence Sharon, daughter of the late United States Senator Sharon of Nevada. Sir Thomas Fermor-Hesketh, who was formerly a famous yachtsman, first met her during a cruise on board his yacht, the Goshawk, which had put into the Golden Gate for a refit. During his stay at San Francisco Sir Thomas made the acquaintance of Miss Sharon of that city and won her hand.

Sir Thomas unites in his person two ancient families, that of Hesketh and that of Fermor. His mother, Lady Arabella Fermor, was the daughter and ultimate heiress of the fourth Earl of Pomfret, whose peerage became extinct with the death of his son, the fifth and last earl, when the estates, which had been in the Fermor family for many centuries, passed into the possession of Lady Arabella. Her husband, the late Sir Thomas Hesketh, was authorized by the crown on his marriage to assume the arms of the Earls of Pomfret and their patronymic of Fermor in conjunction with his own.

Sir Thomas and Lady Fermor-Hesketh's eldest son, the elder brother of the missing officer of the Ninth Lancers, is married to Miss Florence Breckenridge, also an American, daughter of Mrs. Frederick W. Sharon of San Francisco by her former marriage. So that young Mrs. Fermor-Hesketh is a sort of cousin of her husband, though no blood relation. Since the beginning of the war he has rejoined his regiment, the Royal Horse guards, in which he formerly held a commission as lieutenant, but which he resigned in order to make full use of his remarkable faculty for mechanics.

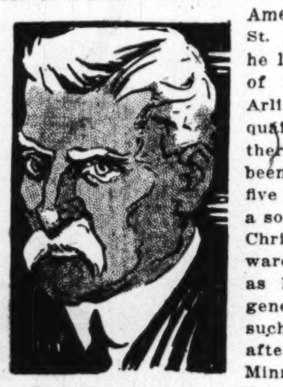
Edward Devon Newman figures among the list of British officers reported as severely wounded in the fighting around Ypres, and if I draw attention to the name it is because, in the first place, he is half American, and, secondly, because some ten years ago he was the plaintiff in most unusual and interesting proceedings in the English law courts.

He belongs to an ancient Devonshire house, which, according to the public records of Exeter, has been seated at Mamhead, the ancestral estates, since the reign of Henry VI., long before the discovery of America by Christopher Columbus. Although the family is so old, the baronetcy is of relatively modern creation, having been bestowed upon Sir Robert Newman, member of parliament for Exeter and high sheriff of the County of Devon, by King William IV.



This first baronet had several sons, the youngest of whom was Alured. The latter came to America and settled in St. Paul, Minn., where he lived with a woman of the name of Ida Arlington, whose acquaintance he made there. After they had been living together for five years she bore him a son, who received the Christian names of Edward Devon. She passed as his wife and was generally recognized as such at St. Paul, and afterwards at St. Louis, Minn., where they lived on Pleasant avenue as Mr. and Mrs. Newman. Their son was registered in St. Louis, Minn., as their legitimate son by his parents at the time of his birth, they giving their names as Alured and Ida Newman.

In 1891 the whole family went to England, and in 1894, as the result of pressure brought to bear upon Mrs. Newman by her husband's English relatives, she went through a religious service of marriage with him in a church at Brighton, Sussex. In the marriage certificate which was delivered on that occasion, Alured Newman was described as a bachelor and Mrs. Newman as a spinster, which of course had the effect of subjecting their son Edward, born nine years previously in America, to the stigma of illegitimacy.

It was for the sake of remedying this condition of affairs that Edward Devon Newman, after the death of both his parents in 1904, instituted proceedings in the following year in the London Court of Probate to establish his legitimacy. In the evidence which he submitted to the tribunal he admitted that there was no proof of any ceremony of marriage having taken place in America between his parents. But he contended that according to the laws of the state of Minnesota it was not necessary that there should be any form of celebration of a marriage between two persons who desired to live together as man and wife.

The presiding judge, Lord Gorell, declared that after hearing the evidence and perusing the laws of the state of Minnesota as to common law marriages he was satisfied that Mr. and Mrs. Alured Newman had been husband and wife in America long before the celebration of the marriage ceremony at Brighton in 1894, and that under the circumstances Edward Newman was a lawfully born subject of the British crown.

FIGHT ON FOR PURE AIR.

UNTIL about 1900 the water supplies of American cities were most impure. It was the custom of the local governments to furnish their people with diluted sewage for drinking water. Naturally, a death rate from typhoid fever of 100 per 100,000 was not unusual, and one of 200 was not unheard of.

The custom is rapidly changing. Most local governments now supply their people with pure water. A death rate of fifteen is about the rule and a death rate of one is not unheard of. We might say, with a moderate regard for accuracy, the fight for pure water has been won.

Time was when the government allowed the seller to sell any food substance he could find a market for, regardless of whether it was wholesome. It was assumed that the buyer knew he must beware and could and would protect himself. It was proved that the assumption was not correct. Then came the great fight for pure food. It has been going on for over ten years. It has won in places. The victory is partial only.

The next fight is to be for pure air. Although everybody knows of the importance of air to the human body, very little accurate information was at hand as to the physiology of the use of air or the pathology which resulted from air or the mechanical principles underlying ventilation. Everywhere rule of thumb methods prevail. To remedy this defect various groups of investigators are at work.

Two groups of physiologists have been at work. One group has proved that our old ideas about the physiology of breathing and our method of using oxygen were all wrong. Another group has proved that, so far as immediate results are concerned, what counts is the temperature of air, its humidity, and its movement, and that its chemical composition is of little consequence.

Another commission has proved that dirty air is especially apt to produce pneumonia. Other scientists are claiming, perhaps have proved, that more important than the pollution of air by gases, more important than the dirt and bacteria which fall out of the air, more important than either of these is the fine dust which remains in the air and which thereby stops some of that part of the sun's rays which kills bacteria.

Two commissions have been at work on the problems of ventilation. One of these, located in New York City, has issued one progress report and is at work on a final report, due to appear in 1916. Another, the Chicago ventilation commission, issued one progress report in 1911 and now issues a second.

The Chicago commission is a voluntary commission. It has no official standing except that it was organized upon the initiative of the health commissioner and the health department has always had membership in it. It has had no funds at its disposal. Its membership is composed of delegates from the department of health, the board of education, the heating and ventilating engineers, the Institute and Society of Architects, and the Society of Engineers.

The particular problems which they have been studying are the ventilation of cars, schools, office buildings, and theaters. Their conclusions are expressed in resolutions. Some of the resolutions appearing in the 1911 report have disappeared. Perhaps some of these in the 1915 report will not be found in later reports, but it is only by publicity, discussion, and investigation that the truth is established and errors are eliminated. The commission is wise in stating its positions even though some of them may not stand.

One of the points that is clear to those who are in touch with ventilation problems is that the most satisfactory method of measurement now available is the determination of comfort or discomfort produced. Comfort makes for efficiency of the human body, at least so far as the immediate work is concerned. Discomfort makes for inefficiency.

No doubt we will find that in the long run the curve of health does not always run parallel with that of comfort; that, though certain atmospheric conditions make for comfort for the time, in time they make against health. This may be true, but there is no very satisfactory way to prove it now.

One of the interesting scales worked out by this commission is what they call the comfort zone chart. In establishing the comfort zone they take account of the temperature and the humidity of the air. Elsewhere they discuss the effect of drafts and currents of air on comfort, but they do not cover these in this chart.

This chart is divided into zones called "Too cold," "Cool," "Comfort," "Too warm," "Very warm." A temperature between 69 and 74 degrees is comfortable when the humidity is 28. If the humidity be 40 the borders of the comfort zone are at 66 and 72. Comfort lies between. At 50 humidity the temperature borders are 64 and 69. At 60 humidity they are 61 and 68. At 70 humidity they are 52 and 67.

The following are from the revised list of resolutions of the Chicago committee on ventilation:

"Resolved, That carbon dioxide, as encountered in working practice, is not the harmful agent of major importance in expired air or air otherwise contaminated.

"Resolved, That a temperature of 68 degrees Fahrenheit with a proper relative humidity is the proper maximum temperature for living rooms artificially heated.

"Resolved, That in those processes of manufacture where considerable CO2 is liberated, the CO2 content is not a proper index of air pollution.

"Resolved, That for the removal of kitchen odors, body odors, stable odors, and other odors associated with heat production, upward ventilation is more efficient than downward ventilation.

"Resolved, That the delivery of a certain volume of air per unit of time per occupant into a given space does not necessarily constitute ventilation.

"Resolved, That air which is introduced into an occupied room in such a way as to strike the occupants should be not lower in temperature than 60 degrees Fahr.

"Resolved, That heating and ventilating are two distinct problems, and therefore the installation of heating and ventilating systems, whether separate or combined, should be such that neither system shall interfere with the efficiency of the other.

"Resolved, That from the standpoint of health relative humidity is one of the important factors in ventilation.

"Resolved, That efficient air cleaning devices are desirable in all ventilating installations where the air supply is liable to be contaminated by dust or other objectionable matter.

"Resolved, That the bacterial content of the air is an important factor in all ventilation, and bears a direct relation to the source and quantity of air supply.

STREET CAR VENTILATION.

"Resolved, That ventilation by deck sash is never satisfactory.

"Resolved, That air delivered into cars should not be colder than 50 degrees Fahr.

"Resolved, That in cars in which wraps are worn a temperature of not less than 50 degrees Fahr. or more than 60 degrees Fahr. should be maintained during artificial heating.

"Resolved, That ventilation by the deck sash is never satisfactory in elevated cars.

"Resolved, That inlets should be of such size and location that drafts are not perceptible when the air enters at a temperature of from 50 degrees to 60 degrees Fahr., and they should be of such number and distribution as to supply the maximum number of occupants with the proper amount of air.

STANDARDS.

"Resolved, That the following standards should apply to the ventilation of cars:

"Street cars, elevated cars, or other cars making frequent stops, during which the doors are opened, shall be so ventilated that the amount of air entering the car for ventilation through openings provided for such purposes shall be at the rate of not less than 500 cubic feet per hour per occupant, based upon the maximum carrying capacity (seats and standing room included) of such car, provided that the total amount from all sources shall not be less than 750 cubic feet per hour.

"Day coaches, sleeping cars, suburban cars, and other cars making long runs shall be so ventilated that the amount of air entering the car for ventilation, through openings provided for such purpose, shall be at the rate of not less than 1,000 cubic feet per hour per occupant, based upon the maximum seating capacity of such car.

"Smoking cars and smoking compartments in cars shall be so ventilated that the amount of air introduced for ventilation shall be at least 20 per cent in excess of the amount required for the same type of car under the above standard.

PICTURE THEATERS.

"Resolved, That when cold air for ventilation is introduced into picture theaters above the breathing zone, either

"1. There will be an insufficient supply of air for proper ventilation, or

"2. The occupants of the theater will be uncomfortably cold.

"Resolved, That upward ventilation in picture theaters is more efficient than downward ventilation; also it is more economical from the standpoint of operation.

"Resolved, That in the cooling of picture theaters in the summer time the system of downward ventilation is inefficient.

"Resolved, That air delivered into picture theaters for ventilation purposes should not be delivered at a temperature colder than 60 degrees Fahr.

"Resolved, That in the breathing zone the number of colonies of bacteria on a standard agar plate should never exceed fifteen after a five minute exposure.

"Resolved, That the relative humidity of the air when brought into picture theaters for ventilation purposes should not be less than 35 per cent.

"Resolved, That the velocity of the air delivered into picture theaters for ventilation purposes shall not be less than twenty-five cubic feet per occupant per minute. It shall be understood that in determining such quantity the maximum seating capacity shall be considered as the number of occupants of the room.

"Resolved, That fresh air registers in the floor of the aisles and lobbies of picture theaters should be prohibited.

SCHOOLROOMS.

"Resolved, That either the plenum or vacuum principle is applicable to the ventilation of school rooms.

"Resolved, That in the artificial ventilation of a school room the air inlets and outlets should be of such size, number, and location as to insure equal distribution of air throughout the room.

"Resolved, That the maximum temperature for a school room, artificially heated, should not be more than 68 degrees Fahr.

"Resolved, That the relative humidity of a school room, artificially heated, should not fall below 40 per cent.

"Resolved, That in the present state of knowledge and practice the quantity of air supplied to school rooms for ventilation should not be less than thirty cubic feet per pupil per minute.

"Resolved, That efficient air cleaning devices are desirable in all ventilating installations where the air supply is liable to be contaminated by dust or other objectionable matter.

"Resolved, That in mechanically ventilated school buildings it is desirable at stated periods to flush all the school rooms in the building with fresh air by means of open windows.

"Resolved, That careful consideration should be given to the sweeping and cleaning of the school room as affecting its ventilation.

"Resolved, That the temperature of a school room should be kept as low as the comfort of its occupants will permit; and that the temperature may be kept down by increasing the humidity.

"Resolved, That a constant temperature and a constant relative humidity are not conducive to the highest degree of comfort in a school room.

"Resolved, That in a school building artificially ventilated and heated the comfort zone should be established in order that the engineer may properly operate the heating and ventilating system.

"Resolved, That the carbon dioxide content alone is not always an index of the contamination of air for ventilating purposes within an enclosure."

DON'T USE OIL OF MULLEIN.

REPLY.

Oil of mullein will not do any good in ringing of the ears. Do not use it.

LAW AGAINST DEPOSITING REFUSE IN LOTS.

Chicago, May 30.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Kindly inform me if there is not a law preventing people from throwing tin cans, etc., in vacant lots and alleys? The garbage is removed all right, but none of the residents using the alley between Kolmar and Kilbourne on Van Buren and Congress streets have provided receptacles for either their ashes or old cans and the alley and vacant lots are in anything but a sanitary condition. There are at least two or three wagon loads of old cans and refuse distributed in the above mentioned territory, and will certainly aid fly and mosquito breeding if not removed at once. X. Y. Z.

There is a law against depositing refuse in vacant lots. While it is no part of the duties of this bureau to clean vacant lots, we go out of our way to do this work where the responsibility cannot be fixed. It is a difficult matter to maintain cleanliness in a neighborhood unless the residents thereof have civic pride enough to stop littering vacant lots.

PAVE THIRTY-THIRD STREET NEXT YEAR.

Chicago, May 31.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Kindly tell me how soon Thirty-third street will be paved extending from Ashland to Western avenues.
MRS. J. WOODS,
1801 West Thirty-third street.

We will hold a public hearing some time next fall on the paving of West Thirty-third street, from Ashland to Oakley avenues, but the street will not be paved until next year.

MAY PAVE HARDING AVENUE THIS YEAR.

Chicago, May 29.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Kindly inform me why Harding avenue between Fullerton and Belden avenues cannot be paved this summer.
H. A. I. C.

The assessment for paving Harding avenue, between Fullerton and Belden avenues, is being spread at the present time and every effort will be made to get it into court before July. If there are no objections filed against the assessment the work can be done this year.
EDWARD J. GLACKIN, Secretary.

WILL NOT PAVE ALLEY THIS YEAR.

Chicago, May 28.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Please advise me if the alley between Kenmore and Sheridan road directly south of Hollywood avenue will be paved and when.
G. S. HOLLAND,

Public hearing will be held some time next fall on this matter, but we do not expect that the alley will be paved until next year.

NOT LIABLE ON OLD LEASE.

Chicago, June 5.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—The agent holds my lease on a flat, which expires Oct. 1. On May 1 I moved from this flat to another flat in the same building, with the understanding that I would sign a new lease expiring April 30, 1916, providing the cleaning was properly done. It was not done to my satisfaction, and I refused to sign the lease for the new flat. My old flat is rented and people are now living there. I am figuring on moving from the new flat, and the agent threatens trouble. E. E. C.

Your lease on the old flat has been canceled and we cannot see upon what theory you are further liable on the old lease. You moved into the new premises on the agreement of landlord to clean the flat properly. If you can prove that he has failed to do this in a proper fashion, we are of the opinion that you are entitled to move. In determining, however, whether or not the cleaning has been done properly, you cannot be unreasonable and arbitrary. If it is such that it would satisfy a reasonable man under all the circumstances, the landlord has probably fulfilled his contract.

RECOVERING INSURANCE IN CASE OF SUICIDE.

Chicago, June 3.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—My husband was insured in a fraternal society and I am anxious to know if I am entitled to the full benefit of his policy, although he committed suicide. E. H.

If your husband committed suicide and his insurance policy was taken out more than a year prior to his death, you are entitled to the benefit of his policy, provided you were made the beneficiary therein and the contract has been performed in other ways as required. An insurance policy becomes incontestable on the grounds of suicide after one year.

EXECUTRIX NOT LIABLE.

Chicago, June 3.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Is an executrix still liable for any debts which were incurred, but not filed, against an estate until after their dismissal by the courts? I. E. S.

The executrix is not personally liable, nor is the estate, if it has been closed and the creditor failed to have his claim allowed, unless he can discover some further property belonging to the deceased which was not inventoried in the probating of the estate.

BRIBING BULGARIA TO JUMP IN.

Chicago, June 2.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Now that the triumvirate, England, France, and Russia, after forming a coalition to checkmate and destroy Germany, have succeeded by the usual secret negotiations in bringing Italy into the fight with them, the preponderance of world opinion on that side is deemed to be so great that the usual secret "diplomatic" means is thought no longer necessary, and it is now openly proposed by the English press that the usual method be dispensed with, and that the allies secure Bulgaria to attack Turkey at whatever price Bulgaria sees fit to name, including, no doubt, the composition of a blue book or a black book to be signed by Bulgaria setting forth the high moral grounds that impelled her to jump in. In other words, Bulgaria is to be hired to slug Turkey, because Turkey has no card signed by the allies. Will this country develop statesmen able to see the meaning and purpose of the European war which this departure from the usual means to accomplish ends adopted by governments makes so plain? American newspaper editors generally, it appears, are hopeless. C. C. H. Z.

AN UNBIASED ATTITUDE.

Chicago, June 1.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—It is really a pleasure to start the day right with the splendid unbiased articles of your paper. Why don't you issue later editions—just one would do—the kind a man would take home to his family.

Your articles on this unfortunate war are the fairest of all—they are not paid for by foreign capital as I suspect is the case in New York. Truly Chicago—"That's where the west begins." That's where our levelheaded president looks for what the country thinks. That's where THE TRIBUNE has the respect of the thinking neutrals. Let the world beware when a thinker enters. The Germans are deep thinkers, therefore the greater respect for your paper. You respect their side also.

ITALY'S IDEALISTIC MOTIVES.

Chicago, June 1.—[Editor of the Tribune.]—Please accept my congratulations for the editorial "Italy." However, I beg to say that you have not mentioned the idealistic side of the question. If the "irredentism" had not existed the Italian people would have never allowed the government to plunge into war against Austria. I will say better that if Austria, during the last thirty years, had kept a different attitude toward Italy and toward the Italians residing in Trento, Trieste, Dalmatia and Istria what is happening now would have never happened. But Austria, far from being kind, has ruthlessly humiliated Italy and persecuted her Italian subjects.

Therefore, it is not only for cold political reasons that Italy goes to war, but mainly for idealistic reasons; that is to say, to free from Austrian domination the Italians of Trento, Trieste, Dalmatia and Istria. GUGLIELMO MANNTINI.

HAVE YOU READ THESE BILLS?

Chicago, June 2.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Your editorial, "For Legislative Consideration," is about the way any American citizen having any sense of justice and liberty views the actions of the present general assembly. House bill No. 283 makes it unlawful for any person, firm, corporation, club, league, society, or association to directly or indirectly request, solicit, or attempt to secure from any candidate for nomination or election to the general assembly any pledge or promise to support or oppose any bill or measure if elected; penalty for violation thereof is $200 to $1,000 fine, or not to exceed sixty days in jail, or both.

House bill 729 provides that it shall be unlawful for any person or any firm or corporation, acting by or through any agent or representative, to publish or make any public criticism of the vote, speech, or action in the general assembly of a member thereof. It makes the violation thereof a felony punishable by a fine of from $1,000 to $5,000, or by confinement in the state penitentiary from one to five years, or both.

This bill, introduced by Mr. Lipschultz, also contains the emergency clause which your editorial suggested. There are more bills of this sort which have been introduced in the present general assembly, to its shame, but the two noted ought to be enough to wake the people up to take note of whom they send there in the future. WAR AND WALL STREET.

Chicago, June 1.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Referring to your editorial, "Mars in Wall Street," I am glad to note that you are approaching a spot that, as far as I am aware, has heretofore remained untouched. I believe, however, that you could have found a better answer to your question, "What, then, can have happened in the street that it is willing not only to fight to the last westerner but to involve its fortunes in the crash?"

As a suggestion: Wall street prefers war with Germany to a loss of our trade with England and her allies and to a crushing defeat of the same parties. Is it possible that in considering the Lusitania horror Wall street overlooked its powerful threat to our trade? In view of the intimate financial relations existing between Wall street and London and the enormous loans made to the allies, is its attitude so mysterious?

The Conscript Mother

By Robert Herrick.

ROME, May 18.—When I met Signora M. at the tram station she was evidently troubled by something that was not really explained by the excuse of "a sleepless night." We were to make the excursion across the Campagna to one of the little towns in the Albanian hills where her eldest son was then stationed with his regiment, and if we had good luck perhaps the mother would get a sight of the boy for a few minutes. All the way out over the flowering plain with the blue hills swimming in the near horizon the signora was unusually quiet, unmindful of the wonderful beauty of the day, of the country in the opening spring. When I pointed to a dirigible that was lazily swimming in the air like some huge silver fish she gave a slight start, and I knew what she was thinking of—the imminence of the war that has been threatening all the year. It was that which had destroyed her customary buoyancy, that indomitable cheerfulness of the true mother that she was. . . .

"It is coming!" she said. "I am sure now—it will come—in a very few days now!" And to the ignorant optimism of my remarks she smiled with that sense of fatalism that women get in the countries of conscription. And I was silent, for it was useless to combat with mere logic and theory the conviction of a mother's heart. Most likely she had heard something which to her sensitive consciousness was more real, more positive than all the labored reasoning of the newspapers. The sphinxlike silence of ministers and diplomats had not been broken, there was nothing new in the "situation," and yet for the first time she was convinced against her will.

A similar fatalistic acceptance of the war has come over the country these last days, not to be attributed to any of the rumors flying about, to the stories of Germans leaving Rome in haste, to anything but a mysterious sixth sense which enables humanity, like animals, to apprehend its immediate dangers. What starts this conviction, what event? It is impossible to hazard a guess. But those whose lives and happiness are at stake know before the blow comes what is about to befall them. And for the first time I began to think that Italy might really plunge over the gulf into the war. There are secret methods of intelligence especially in a country like Italy, where so much is still hid from strange eyes, which entirely baffle the foreigner. Signora M. had heard some whispered word from those who knew; she could read the signs that I could not, as when she pointed to some soldiers in a cab with their outfit and murmured: "They are going north."

WE talked of other matters while the tram climbed into the hills and circled the wooded glens, offering on either side entrancing views of the open Campagna, of vineyards and olive groves. At last we descended at the dirty, gray little hill town of G——, where the boy was stationed. There was no barracks; the soldiers were quartered by squads here and there in old buildings. We could see their young faces at the windows and the gray uniforms of the grenadiers in the courtyards. They were kept in their quarters by the hostility of the townsfolk, who stoned the soldiers to express their dislike of the army and of the war, as the young officer who good naturedly accompanied us in our search for young M. explained. They were a very tough lot up here in the hills, he said with a smile—that was why the regiment had been sent there, to keep down all "demonstrations."

The townspeople looked "tough," dirty and poor and fierce of eye, always scowling. The little town in spite of its heavenly location seemed dreary and wretched; one did not wonder that these people, descendants of fierce ancestors, disliked the prospect of a war that would bring them nothing but heavier taxes and—death to their sons! Nor that they had no great enthusiasm for the army, which they usually encountered in an unpleasant manner. I read the word "Socialismo" scrawled roughly on the walls, half effaced as if some authority had tried to erase it.

The young lieutenant liked to air his French, and, smoking the really good cigar that I gave him, talked easily while we waited for "Harry" to emerge from the old monastery where we finally located him. "Yes, it would be war, of course. . . . Before it was doubtful, but now," he shrugged his shoulders. "There were Germans down there in Tripoli and German guns, too. . . . The government had given the Germans four days to explain, etc." One could see that he welcomed anything, even war, to get away from garrison duty in G——. Then "Harry" came, as nice a lad of 19 as one could easily find, even in his somewhat soiled and worn uniform, and Harry had no false shame about embracing his mother most warmly there in the street in the presence of his officer and the comrades who looked down enviously from the window above. The young officer smilingly offered him three hours' leave to spend with us, and, saluting, went back to his quarters.

So we wandered up the hill with Harry toward the ancient lake. Signora M. kept tight hold of the lad, purring over him in French and Italian as mothers do, turning from delight to gentle scolding—why did he not keep himself more tidy? Surely he had needles and thread! And how was the ear? Had he followed the doctor's orders? Which of course Harry had not. The mother explained to me then that the boy had lost the hearing of one ear because of careless treatment by the military doctor. She had no complaint to make of the military authorities; of course they could not bother with every little trouble a soldier had in such a time as this—only if they had taken the proper steps the boy need not have lost the use of an ear, which would be always a handicap. . . .

It seemed that Harry had not yet breakfasted, and although it was only 11 I insisted on putting forward the movable feast of continental breakfast and we went to the rustic restaurant above the lake. There the mother looked and looked at her boy while Harry and I ate and discussed the war. She got up and felt of his shoulders beneath the loose uniform to see whether he had filled out any since the great hike in a broiling sun along dusty roads for thirty miles. It was much the way an American mother might look over her boy at a boarding school, only more intense. And Harry was much like any good, clean, hearty schoolboy, delighted to be let off and talk. He was sure there would be war, O, so very sure! And he nodded his head at me mysteriously. His captain was such a good fellow, like a father really, and the captain had said—but he pulled himself up—after all I was an outsider and ought not to know what the captain had said. Only their regiment had received the "promise" to go among the first! The mother's devouring eyes contracted slightly. . . .

AFTER luncheon Harry took me into the old monastery where his squad was loafing on the grass under the trees or writing letters. A few had gone down to the lake for a bath, and their cries of enjoyment could be heard far below beside the green water. The signora had been barred by the Franciscan monk who admitted us, but presently she came hurrying down the shady path. "I told him that he could look the other way and avoid temptation," she explained, "and he just pointed out a back door and I slipped in!" So with her hand on her recaptured boy we went to look at the sleeping quarters, which were in an old stable. The floor was covered with straw and overcoats, which the young soldier assured me made a good bed. They were given 4 cents a day for spending money—that was not much for cigarets and stamps—but they would get 10 when they were finally in the campaign.

At last we turned into the road arched with old trees that led down to the tram. All the glory of the sunny spring day seemed to pour down on us with the wild flowers by the roadside, the hum of bees, the songs of birds. Harry climbed the hedges to pick the purple heather his mother wanted. "Blanche will like it so when she knows the brother picked it," she explained to me. "Blanche thinks he is already a hero, and she is working for the Red Cross—she has taken her examination—she will go too!" We sat on the old stone wall awhile talking.

Across the road in a field a gray mare stood, looking steadfastly at her foal, who was small and was asleep in the tall grass at her feet. The old mare stood there without once cropping a bit of grass for about twenty minutes, occasionally lowering her head to sniff at the little colt. There was an attitude of absorbed contemplation, of perfect satisfaction in her ungainly offspring that made me laugh. At last the little fellow woke, got up somehow on his long legs, shook his scrubby tail, and gamboled down the pasture enjoying his world, experimenting with it, and the old gray mare followed close behind with eyes only for him. "See!" Signora M. exclaimed, pointing to the ridiculous foal. "How gentle he is! O, how beautiful youth is always!" And she looked up, content with her tall, handsome "Harry," who had just brought her another bunch of heather. The birds were singing like mad in the fields; a few of the country folk came by driving their donkey carts laden with garden produce; I smoked in peace—while mother and son exchanged the family gossip and the mother went all over the boy again. . . . Yes, surely youth is beautiful—but there seemed something horribly pathetic about it all.

AT last the three hours were up. Harry drew himself up before us and saluted formally. He was glad to have met me; I was very good to bring his mother, and he and the comrades would much enjoy the cigarets! "A riverdeli." Then he turned to the mother and without any silly shame bent to her open arms. I walked on down the road. When the mother joined me she was clear eyed, without a trace of tears or self-consciousness, but serious. "Do you know," she said as if we had been talking of something else, "when I hold that boy in my arms and think of all he has been, of all I have done for him, his education, his sickness, all, all—and what he means to me and his father and Blanche—and I think in one moment it may all be over for always, all that precious life—O, God, what are women made for! . . . We shall have to hurry, my friend, to get the tram."

I saw that slim figure, that mere boy with the kindly, loving eyes, who had just gone around the bend on the run so as not to exceed his leave—such a nice boy, so healthy, clean, and joyous in life, so affectionate with his mother, so thoroughly what any mother could love, and he might well be going "up north" tomorrow! . . . "Well," I said, "do you believe in the necessity of this war, signora?"

"They all say it has to be," she replied dully. "I expect I'll get to see him again before they go. . . . I am only one of hundreds of thousands. It is a hard world to understand. My God!"

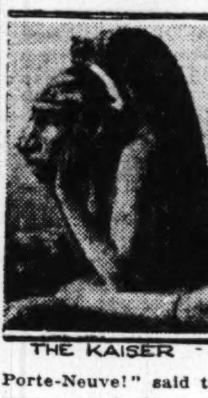
The expert put down his cup of tea that same afternoon, and spoke: "Yes, this time it looks to me really like it. They have gone too far with their national aspirations to draw back. It looks to some of them as if they might get a good deal out of a war with a small sacrifice, and everybody loves a bargain. . . . Then, too, you know, Gen. So-and-so, chief of staff, he's a very ambitious man, a successful war would make him, and he has great influence. But I don't know—it would be quite a risk, quite a risk."

Yes, I thought, quite a risk for the mothers.

The Gargoyles of Notre Dame

By Sterling Heilig.

PARIS, May 24.—"It looks like the kaiser!" say Parisians. The postcard circulates. There is a series. It is the penseur ("the Thinker") of Notre Dame, with the kaiser's mustache and casque. He remains at once the penseur and the kaiser, as elusive, profound, unexplained, and unexplainable as in 1593—when they added a goatee to make him a dead ringer for the Duke of Feria.



THE KAISER

It is Hairy-Breast. A drooping mustache makes him Von Kluck. In 1593, when the Spanish held Paris against the Bearnais, they had no postcards, but drew good pictures. They put a beard on Hairy-Breast. "He's looking toward the Porte-Neuve!" said the populace of Paris. And, sure enough, it was by the Porte-Neuve that Henry IV. entered!

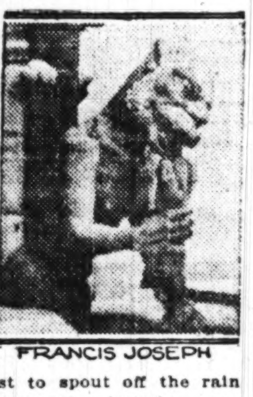
It is the Sneerer. A mustache gives him disquieting likeness to Von Buelow. In 1593 he was Don José Castil. In 1814 a few touches made him Blücher. Wellington was the Eater of Rats. The Tsar Alexander was Pan, who gazes into the back yard.

They are the Gargoyles of Notre Dame, the most mysterious objects of Paris. Whenever Paris is at war the greater and more human Gargoyles—called the Masters—seem to bear a curious resemblance to the leaders of the enemy. The Penseur is their chief. He leans and thinks. Each, in his corner, stares immobile on a section of the landscape. It gets on the nerves of Paris.

Climb the towers of the cathedral. High up you come to this Gallery of the Roofs, whence, amid a population of gigantic creatures, you have Victor Hugo's bird's-eye view of Paris. Tourists are more struck by the strange population carved in stone than by the shining city.

"What are they?" ask tourists. "Look at that whiskered goat, five times as big as you are!"

There are immense bulls and boars, a contemplative elephant on his hind legs, a vicious panther, owls, and eagles. In vain for centuries have visitors inquired the meaning of the collection.



FRANCIS JOSEPH

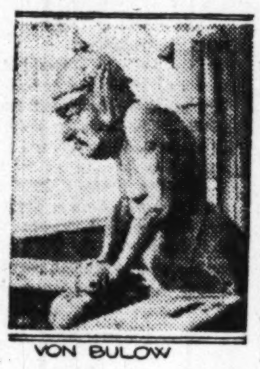
In particular, the humanlike figures arouse wonder, genii, Titans, of stern thought, sad dignity, unyielding purpose. . . . Calling them Gargoyles explains nothing. Regularly, Gothic churches have their decorative roof spouts carved in grotesque shapes and known as gargoyles, just to spout off the rain water. Notre Dame has gargoyles, but they pass unnoticed amid these vast creatures, simply called "chimeras." With their object unknown, their common attitude has led folks, in all ages, to ask finally: "What are they looking at?"

And the populace of Paris answer, as they answered always, "They are looking at the mystery."

Once I asked a butcher on the Parvis. "It is subterranean," he said. "In the revolution my great-grandfather helped hunt it. But it was too well hid."

"It's a closet, high up, filled with jewels of kings," said an old woman selling cabbages.

"Once there was a crow inside, who looked toward it."



VON BULOW

Victor Hugo knew about the crow and made the shopkeepers of the Parvis whisper how Claude Frollo spent hours "calculating the angle at which the raven looked from the west porch."

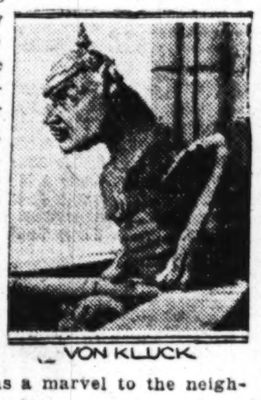
There is a sad bird, immense, draped in her bat-like wings as in a mourning veil, known as "the Widow." Her eyes seem fixed painfully on the east gallery of the Louvre. "John Bull," who in his day was identified with King George III., gazes with ruminating content on the central markets.

Walk round. The Carrion Crow and the Speaker look at two points along the same line. The eyes of the Elephant and Panther have stared for centuries along another. The Goat and his side partner, Pan, are fixed on the back yard. The Wandering Jew, startled, looks straight into the river. The Two-Headed Dog has a double objective.

Men have actually carried theodolite and logarithm tables up there to measure exactly "what they are looking at." What could they hope to find—a treasure? The ground of Paris has been dug and rebuilt a dozen times.

A curious character, "the Man of the Cathedrals," actually lived up here, two months, in 1913. He claims to have grouped the lines of vision. A pair always stare on the same spot, "probably to mislead the seeker," he says. In two cases, three gaze on the same spot. This is more interesting. But what about the damaged Gargoyles, whose heads have been restored or not? Perhaps a bunch, originally, looked on the True Spot.

Once, there was a man who found it—unless, indeed, he were its originator. It was the famous Nicolas Flamel, reputed by Paris of his day to have accomplished "the great work." He appears first as a poor clerk of the Sorbonne, around 1355. Then, suddenly, in 1362, Nicolas Flamel quit his poor student's room for a house built on his own plans, in which he gave free accommodations to a band of chosen disciples, and the secret luxury in which they lived for years was a marvel to the neighbors.

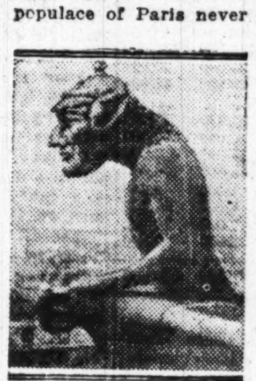


VON KLUCK

Time passed. Nicolas Flamel outlived his students. In his extreme old age he made the extravagant liberalities to Paris churches which connect his name with the mystery of Notre Dame and confirmed his reputation as a transmuter of metals and "jewel molder." Did he, really? It is curious to note that the Renaissance came right after him, with its inexplicable increase of the world's treasure. And Victor Hugo tells how half the alchemists of Europe dug vainly in Nicolas Flamel's cellar up to fifty years after his death.

Did Nicolas Flamel point the Gargoyles? His munificence to Notre Dame was notorious. Some say that the Penseur is his portrait.

So argue the dreamers of hidden treasure. The populace of Paris never make this error. They say only: "The Gargoyles are looking at the mystery." And their mind connects with a more portentous figure and an older, grander reputation, more mysteriously bound up with the ancient cathedral. I refer to the Wandering Jew.



VON MOLTKE

He is up there with the Gargoyles, Isaac Laquedam, the friend of Paris. He leans over, so intent and anxious, yet so honest and benevolent, beyond the parapet! Some say Nicolas Flamel was his agent.

Time embroiders old traditions. Who knows what elements of a prophetic and persecuted race originated the popular figure of the Wandering Jew as a benefactor of Notre Dame de Paris! Did some banker-prophet or some merchant-poet, doctor-cabbalist, or topographer-seer point his Gargoyles on some greater mystery than a caché of gold and jewelry?

He is up there, with them—Isaac Laquedam, friend of Paris. And each time the capital is threatened, the brooding figures are seen to bear this strange resemblance to the enemy.

"Give them whiskers or a shave," runs the old Paris proverb. White sideburns reveal the Eater of Rats as Francis-Joseph, who, "having absorbed Bosnia, Herzegovina, Trieste, and the Trentino, is trying to eat Servia." He is the only one too busy to keep watch on Paris.

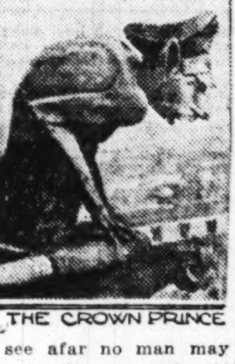
The Penseur (kaiser), leaning on palms, his elbows on the parapet, stares, intent, past the Plain of St. Denis toward Calais, absorbed in his meditation, pondering his vast problem.

The Laugher (Von Moltke) watches Champs-Elysées, the river, and the Rouen road, where come the English armies. A smooth shave and the German casque completes his likeness. Versailles is in his line of vision, where his father helped to crown the King of Prussia kaiser. The confidence of his father's son is still upon the smiling face.

The Hairy-Breast (Von Kluck) is startled, worried, his gaze fixed upon the plateau of the Marne, from Lagny on to Ligny. Mustache, haircut, and alarmed eyes make a Von Kluck young, alert, and undismayed, but troubled in his look toward Nancy. "What next?" . . .

The Sneerer (Von Buelow) has the hump. His vigil is southeast. He looks toward Lyons, across the garden of France, which Italy should overrun had she been faithful.

Pan (the crown prince) gazes into the back garden. It is beautiful down there, trees, flowers, and sculptures. A nice mamma sits beside her little child upon a bench. She takes out her gold watch to see the hour. . . .



THE CROWN PRINCE

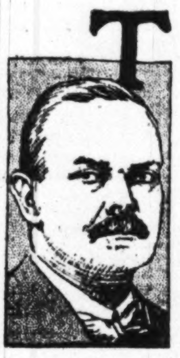
Around the towers the Gargoyles keep their vigil. What they see afar no man may know. But it is strange and curious—and here's the thing that worries Paris—each stone figure, intent, straining, watches round the forts of Paris, some weak spot where an investing army might win through.

The thing has been examined.

Is it Isaac Laquedam's warning?

SILEANT MUSAE

By Edward Goldbeck.



THERE is an old Latin proverb: "Inter arma silent musæ" (In war times the muses are silent). But, like so many proverbs, it is not true. On the contrary, the muses are very boisterous just now; they yell, they howl, and make a terrible racket. Really Apollo, as their master and teacher, ought to give them a good spanking. "Sileant musæ!" (Let the muses be silent!) I do not think that the poets who have raised their voices have done much good up to now, no matter whether you look at their performances from the æsthetic, the political, or the purely human point of view. In my quality as a German I shall mention the German poets first, as charity begins at home.

Our dramatic poet, Gerhart Hauptmann, has answered a letter by Rolland, the famous but rather overvalued author of "Jean Christophe." Hauptmann has often tried to write in a popular vein, but that is not in him, and the moment he ceases being refined he becomes trivial and vulgar. So his letter was without literary dignity; Mr. Müller or Mr. Schultze could have done just as much or just as little. He was indignant, but he did not find the convincing accents of sublime wrath and he did not crush the enemy by the solemn simplicity of a great heart and a pure conscience. The poet wanted to be the spokesman of his nation; he wanted to lower himself to the level of the man in the street, and he succeeded too well.

Another German poet, Thomas Mann, demonstrated in a clever essay that war ought to be the joy of the artist. But the subtlest art of a great dialectician does not persuade us in the midst of all these horrors that we should rejoice in them. The strongest men of the belligerent nations proclaim that they will fight to the bitter end, but the more they are in earnest the more they refuse to listen to hyperæsthetic considerations of the kind I have mentioned. Reality is too terrible for these mental gymnastics. War is no joy for the modern man. It may appear to him as a sacred duty, but he refuses to look at it from the artistic point of view and the sophisms of the poet sound hollow and blasphemous while thousands and thousands are crying out their agonies.

Richard Dehmel, a poet who has given to the treasury of German poesy some of its most beautiful jewels, has enlisted as a volunteer. His countrymen all appreciate his readiness to die for the fatherland, but he writes and publishes open letters to his children and to the Frenchmen. He uses the French language in the latter ones; he signs "Dehmel, Poete Allemand." He publishes his picture in uniform in the magazines, and the Germans think he has developed too much talent for self-advertising and that the "ego" of the greatest poet is a negligible quantity when the existence of the country is at stake. In quieter times one would only smile at the exuberance of the artistic temperament, but the Germans are not in a smiling mood, and who will blame them as long as the Gorgon of war is staring at them from her hideous mask!

THE exuberance of the artistic temperament has swept William Dean Howells off his feet. He has published an article, "Why?" which would horrify the president if he had time to read it, because it makes no pretense whatsoever of neutrality. Howells informs the reader that the powers of Germany are "Satanic"; that the Germans "dine at 1 o'clock and eat with their knives" (My dear, you should see them!), and that Germany is a "dead corpse of mediæval oppression, galvanized into an ecstasy of murder and rapine." He has a better opinion of the czar, and he asks: "Who knows, then, but in the day of reckoning for Germany the czar may not issue a ukase declaring his subjects the citizens of a free and independent republic, and endowing them with the initiative and referendum, the recall, and woman suffrage, with himself for their first president ineligible for reëlection?" Yes; who knows? If we should ask the czar himself he might answer like Julia Sanderson in "The Sunshine Girl": "I might."

I am not going to challenge Mr. Howells to a literary duel. Two reasons prevent me from raving for his blood. First, the fact that I am only enjoying the hospitality of the United States; secondly, my heartfelt admiration for the man. Mr. Taft called him "our greatest novelist" a few years ago. This praise was, as most official praises are, as inadequate as possible. There is no "greatness" in Howells. Louis XVIII. said that the man who wants to rule France must know the exact value of an adjective; Americans are not so particular in this respect. Howells is not great, but the most delicate of poets. He is no Rubens, but a pastel painter of the first rank. His "Rise of Silas Lapham" shows an unsurpassed realistic power and a keen understanding of the average American. His "Indian Summer" resembles in the graceful rhythm of "causerie" those Italian melodies which float and glide, freed from all earthly substance, like the first bars of the "Barcarole" in the "Ballo in Maschera" which Caruso interprets so divinely. His "Lady of the Aroostook" is as charming as pathetic. Howells is a humorist who "smiles in tears," and one of his finest qualities is his artistic poise.

How could he lose his poise so absolutely in judging Germany? It seems an interesting case worth while for the investigating powers of a psychological Conan Doyle. But the solution of the problem is easy. Read Howells' criticisms and you have the answer ready made by himself. He has no critical faculty; he has only sympathies and antipathies. Don't demand brambles from a rose bush.

GABRIELE D'ANNUNZIO, the wonderful Italian poet who combines the art of chiseling masterpieces in prose and poetry with enthralling passion and a deep knowledge of the labyrinth we call the human heart, has been acclaimed in the parliament as the representative of warlike nationalism. Overwhelmed by the applause of an irresponsible multitude, he sends a telegram to Paris which runs as follows: "The fight is won. I am drunk with joy. After the French miracle there will be an Italian miracle!"

If Cavour, the sober liberator of Italy, should read this telegram in the Elysian fields, he would smile grimly, as he cannot choke with anger. The fight is won? It has not even begun. A leader of the nation drunk with joy? You had better keep your head cool and beware of intoxication, carissimo mio! And every patriot must hope that the Italian miracle will not resemble the French, for that would mean that Germany would occupy the most valuable Italian provinces. For a man of D'Annunzio's command of language the wording of the wire is not felicitous. Restrain your emotions, great poet! Think of the French minister Ollivier, who said in 1870 that France was going to war with an easy mind, "d'un cœur léger." These two words became a burden which crushed his whole life.

WE all know what Maeterlinck, Verhaeren, Kipling, and Rolland have said. They have howled and yelled, and you do not find a word of common sense and not even a word of real inspiration in these outbursts. I do not blame them. I am trying to understand them. Frankly speaking, I think the German professors were worse, much worse. Haeckel, the famous naturalist; Harnack, the famous theologian; Lamprecht, the famous historian—all wrote unconvincing platitudes. The poets may plead extenuating circumstances. They are accustomed to violate reality; they build a world of their own; they despise facts. (If they are not apostles of the "scientific" and "experimental" novel!) They feel as guardians of the ideal and refuse to compromise.

Maeterlinck, Verhaeren, Rolland: they all had found their most enthusiastic disciples and followers in Germany. So they had worked out for themselves an ideal Germany and they were disappointed and personally hurt when they saw their mistake. They had not embraced the whole Germany; they had lived in the small set of authors and artists who were proud of being, as Nietzsche used to say, "good Europeans." They saw only the wide range of their cosmopolitan culture, the "limitless curiosity" which a famous Italian has adjudged to the Germans. Everybody does the same every day of his life. We meet a man or a woman, we notice just one quality; we put a label on the human being, as: stingy, vain, talkative, domineering, and so on. A body has three dimensions, the spirit has innumerable ones, and the wise ought to abstain from judging. But as that would mean "abstain from living," let us at least judge with the full conscience of human fallibility.

Sileant musæ? No; there would be a better way out of the difficulty. May the poets remember Antigone's words: "Not to hate with you, to love with you I was made." A voice from heaven—that is what poor, suffering bleeding humanity needs in these days of distress.

The Balkans from Within

Mr. McCormick is the war correspondent for "The Tribune" with the Russian forces. His articles appear in both the daily and Sunday "Tribune." The following was forwarded from Petrograd:

By Robert R. McCormick.

[Copyright: 1915: By The Chicago Tribune.]

THE Balkan question is easily understood when compared to Cook county politics. The Balkan states are interested only in their own problems and will join one side of the European struggle or the other to gain local advantage, just as county bosses espouse the cause of one or another presidential candidate.

In Bulgaria the paramount question is how to conquer Macedonia, just as in Greece the paramount question is how to solidify its grip upon this territory. In each kingdom there is a party that believes an active alliance is the surest means of accomplishing this object, in each a party that wants to haggle over terms of reward.

In Greece, Venezelos, the minister who made the alliance against Turkey and against Bulgaria, advocated this policy and was forced to resign because of the king's opposition.

In Bulgaria quite another situation presents itself. The minister who made the alliance with Greece and Serbia was Guechoff. The treaty in a general way defined the division of the territory to be taken from the Turks. Greece was to receive the Ægean islands; Serbia her heart's desire, a port on the Mediterranean; Bulgaria the lion's share of the mainland.

Every one knows that Bulgaria did most of the fighting against the Turks. Greece, Serbia, and Montenegro had little else to do than occupy undefended territory. Being at ease, they occupied a good part of the territory assigned to Bulgaria.

The Turkish war over, the division of the spoil would probably have been peacefully made had not Austria intervened and prevented Serbia from taking Albania and obtaining a port on the Adriatic. The whys and wherefores of this step must be told in the article dealing with the causes of the great war. The fact must suffice here.

From what we now know of the relative fighting efficiency of the Balkan and Austrian troops, it appears that the Balkan alliance could have held the territory against Austria. But this idea does not seem to have occurred to any country. Serbia seems to have yielded her heart's desire not without protest but without effort to hold it. Instead, she demanded as a recompense that part of Bulgaria's share of the spoils which her troops occupied.

The Turkish war gave Bulgaria enormous prestige as well as a substantial increase in territory. There was talk the world over of Bulgaria forming an empire of the Balkans with the king of Bulgaria as emperor, just as forty years before the empire had been formed under the king of Prussia. Bulgaria was in a dominating position and the other Balkan states were jealous. Roumania, which had not undergone the hazards and hardships of war, demanded not even Turkish territory, but Bulgarian, in order to preserve the Balkan balance of power!

As neither drew towards a crisis, the Czar, who was at Moscow, offered to arbitrate between the Balkan states. Serbia accepted the offer. Ferdinand, king of Bulgaria, returned an evasive answer.

Guechoff, a much traveled and highly educated man, saw that Bulgaria was overmatched and urged that Russia, the liberator and life-long friend of all the Balkan states, arbitrate between them. His advice was contrary to the spirit of the hour, so after vainly counseling prudence he was forced to resign. His successor in office, Dr. Daneff, when sobered by the responsibility of government, reached the same conclusion and was preparing to start for St. Petersburg when the war party began hostilities.

The Bulgarian army had overwhelmed the Serbians in 1885; they had just decisively beaten the Turks, who had easily defeated the Greeks in 1897. It was confident of its superiority over the combined Servian and Greek armies. A plan was in existence to take Belgrade within five days of the outbreak of war and to surprise Saloniki. As no railroad ran from Saloniki south, the taking of Athens would be a slower matter.

In order to force war, Gen. Vasoff, without the knowledge of the government, caused troops to attack both the Serbians and Greeks. The Daneff government, which had brought about the resignation of Gneseloff because of his unwillingness to fight the other Balkan states, refused to back up the general. It ordered the army to cease operations and called upon Russia to interfere. While the Bulgarian army was paralyzed the Greeks and Serbians took the offensive. The Turks seized arms again and Roumania mobilized.

Prince Constantine of Greece, who had been accused of cowardice in the Turkish war of 1897 and who had subsequently studied in Germany, developed real military ability. Finding himself in superior numbers at Kilkish, he harangued his troops, turned the Bulgarian right flank, and as the enemy began to withdraw attacked the center with the bayonet. His victory was overwhelming, and he evinced great power in following it up, never giving the Bulgarians time to reorganize. Serbia entered from the west, Roumania from the north, and Turkey retook Adrianople.

Bulgaria was prostrate.

Peace was made by a congress of the great powers held in London.

Bulgaria not only failed to gain the boundary awarded to her before the Turkish war but lost a large part of the land she held at its close, including the part of Kavala and Saloniki, which was in joint possession of Bulgarians and Greeks up to the outbreak of hostilities. She still remains the largest state of the Balkans, her population is the most uniform, her land is evenly divided. The men are physically stronger than the Greeks and the Roumanians.

All Bulgarians are united in the desire to retake Macedonia; they differ only on the method to pursue. I believe that if Guechoff were in control he would capture Constantinople and open the Bosporus to the allies, trusting to their support in a later attack on Greece, or possibly getting up a war with Greece while still an ally.

The present government will not take the initiative, but will go to war any day the allies offer the one desired reward. The government would be equally willing to take the German-Austrian side for the same reward, but there is now less likelihood of Germany-Austria being able to bring pressure to bear on the Balkans.

The situation is further complicated by Italy's occupation of Valona, which is to be permanent, and by an undisclosed understanding between Italy and Roumania—which countries are connected in race and language.

Roumania is not interested in the Macedonian question. Indeed, except for a rivalry with Bulgaria, she has no interest in affairs Balkan. There is a historic gratitude to Russia for driving out the Turk and a Hohenzollern king. There is also a German form of constitution which keeps the government in the hands of the aristocrats. When the great war started, the bulk of the Roumanians wanted to join Russia, but the government did not move.

As with Greece, much money is coming to the country through neutrality. Roumania is the only grain growing country able to sell to Austria. Therefore her exports are great and at enormous prices. However, as all the land belongs to a few great land owners, the increased cost of bread from 2½ sous to 7 sous a loaf is bearing hard on the proletariat.

There is real need and an increasing demand for agrarian reform in Roumania. The discontented ones also belong to the war party, hoping through war against Austria to obtain Bessarabia back from Russia. Thus the Balkan peoples only look upon the great war as an instrument to be used for their several desires, though the kings are sympathetic to the German throne.

If they all stay at peace their future will be in the nature of a private fight; if some world size statesman secures control in any one country, all of them will begin kicking the shins of the great antagonists. Possibly another great nation will be born.

FURTHER SLUMP IN GRAIN MART

Liquidation of Long Wheat Continues; Foreign Demand Is Lacking.

CORN HOLDERS UNLOAD.

Liquidation in wheat futures appeared checked for a time yesterday following the initial break, which was due to lower Liverpool spot cables. After shorts had covered freely, however, there was renewed selling with a lack of demand and prices slumped badly in the last few minutes. Net losses for the day were 2¼@2⅜c. Some little buying by cash houses was in evidence early, Nye-Jenks, J. Rosenbaum, and others buying, but offerings were liberal on the advances.

Liverpool spot wheat was 1@2d lower, making the fourth consecutive day of big declines on the other side. The slow consumptive demand in the United Kingdom and the continent was a big influence at Liverpool, and the impression appears to prevail abroad that much lower prices will result from the movement of new wheat in this country, especially as they are under no immediate buying necessity.

Cash Prices Are Steady.

The cash market was slow and there was no special demand. Offerings were not heavy, however, and prices relatively were firm. Shipping sales were 40,000 bu to mills. The east did not send any bullish reports in regard to the foreign demand. Cash men appear to be quite generally of the opinion that business will be light until the market is tested by liberal hedging sales.

Weather conditions were not so favorable in the southwest and there have been heavy rains with wheat in the bloom in southern Kansas, and in some sections some damage is feared. On the other hand, recent rains have been extremely timely in the Canadian northwest, where there was some complaint of insufficient moisture. On the whole, the spring wheat outlook at this time of the year has seldom been more promising.

Argentine Futures Firm.

Argentine markets were firm for futures with a good demand, although the weather conditions are fine in that country and seeding of wheat in the north is making rapid progress. Receipts of wheat continue fairly liberal, and in the southwest do not show much indication of falling off. Primary receipts were 495,000 bu, against 299,000 bu a year ago, and for the week primary arrivals were 3,842,000 bu, compared to 3,089,000 bu a year ago.

Northwest receipts were 163 cars, or the same as a year ago. Winnipeg had 44 cars, against 163 cars last year. It is significant that Minneapolis stocks increased 10,000 bu for one day and Duluth increased 161,000 bu for the week. Clearances were moderate at 484,000 bu, or about 100,000 bu larger than a year ago. Local receipts were 16 cars, with 26 cars inspected yesterday.

Big Smash in Corn.

Prices for corn were 1⅝@¾c to 1⅞c lower for futures and cash prices were 1@1½c lower. The crop news was generally of a favorable kind. The Missouri report for June showed a condition of 85, or about the same as a year ago, with about 91 per cent planted, against 93 per cent a year ago. Weather conditions generally are favorable and there is little apprehension as result of the rains. It is beleived the rains at this time will do more good than harm. Cables were unchanged to 2d lower and Argentine reports said weather conditions were favorable for the movement. The cash demand here was fair and sales were 215,000 bu. Clearances for the day were 39,000 bu. Receipts in the west were 516,000 bu, against 1,242,000 bu a year ago, and for the week there were receipts of 2,550,000 bu, against 9,417,000 bu a year ago. Local receipts were 126 cars, and 104 cars were inspected yesterday. Omaha expects a larger run this week.

Oats Offerings Heavy.

Offerings of oats were large and prices showed extreme weakness, especially for the July. Net losses for the day were ¾@1¼@1⅜c. The cash market was weak also with prices off 1@1½c. The demand for cash oats was fair and there were sales of 305,000 bu. Country sales are light, but all reports are of favorable crop conditions, and there was some evidence of hedging sales from the southwest. Shorts were the principal buyers. Receipts here were 61 cars, with 76 cars inspected yesterday. Primary receipts were 406,000 bu, against 698,000 b year ago. Primary arrivals were 2,405,000 bu for the week, against 5,071,000 bu a year ago.

Hog Products Lower.

Provisions prices were a little lower. There was no particularly heavy selling, but continued liberal receipts of hogs and the decided weakness in the grain markets unsettled prices and discouraged buyers. The cash demand is not at all urgent. Packers were credited with selling a little product. Hog receipts were 10,000, with 34,000 for Monday, with 140,000 estimated for the coming week. Western receipts for the week were 528,800, compared to 437,000 a years ago.

Rye Dull and Steady.

Rye was dull and steady at $1.18 nominal for No. 2. Receipts, 2 cars.

Barley was firm for malting at 76@77c for spot and 76c to arrive, and 1c higher for feed at 73@74c. Screenings were steady at 70@72c. Receipts, 10 cars.

Timothy seed was steady. September sold at $6.70 and closed at $6.75 bid, while October was $6.75 bid and cash lots were $5.00@6.75. Clover seed was dull at $8.00@13.50 for cash.

Duluth flax closed 2@2¼c lower, with cash on track $1.83½; July, $1.85; September, $1.87¾; and October, $1.87¾. Receipts, 8 cars. Minneapolis was 2c lower at $1.82@1.84 for cash on track. Receipts, 3 cars. Winnipeg closed ⅜@1c lower, with July $1.64⅝ and October $1.68. Receipts, 2 cars.

NEWS AND GOSSIP OF BOARD OF TRADE.

Further evidence that foreign governments are indisposed to buy wheat at these prices was shown yesterday in the indifference of export brokers in wheat even on the decline. Cash prices here were a trifle firmer relatively, but there was no big demand and so far as given out there has been little business in new wheat. Having supplied their needs for the period between old and new crop wheat, agents of European countries apparently are in a position to wait until prices are forced lower by the new crop offerings. It will take heavy buying in any event to hold prices in the face of the impending big movement of winter wheat, and with foreigners holding off they will be the price dictators for some time to come.

The oats demand is fair for domestic account, but prices in the sample market were 1@1½c lower, following the further decline in futures. The crop prospects are so universally good they overshadow the recent stronger developments in the cash trade. It is the general opinion of oats traders that the strength which has developed in the cash market has come too late to be much of a price stimulant. It was expected the bull conditions would develop several months ago. There was selling in the pit yesterday which was supposed to have reflected offerings of new oats from the southwest. Texas is offerings oats on a much cheaper basis than northern points. Local sales were 315,000 bu.

"We hear from a splendid oats section today that recent heavy rains have packed down the soil in the oats fields until it is hard as a board," said Perrine & Co. "The plant is making rank growth, however, with the cool, wet weather, but there might easily come a change with hot, dry conditions. We are again faced with the talk of Texas red rust proof oats offering in southern territory. We have these oats to contend with every year and they are always absorbed without prejudice to our northern grown white oats."

The corn bears were more confident of their position last night, owing to the weakness in wheat and other grains generally. They regard prices as too high with the present export prospects. It is figured there will be little export business from now on with Argentina shipping a normal quantity weekly. There is a tremendous exportable surplus in that country, and there has been nothing recently to indicate that European buyers would not take the Plate corn before coming to this country.

"With oats crop two weeks ahead of the season in Illinois, it is hardly to be expected that even wet weather June 20 to July 15 will prevent a heavy movement of new oats to market in July, to take advantage of the big premium over the September," said Somers-Jones. "Receipts in July could easily become heavy enough to force the July to a discount under the September. This is almost certain to be the case with dry weather during harvest."

A large number of New York oats handlers were the guests of Chicago oats shippers and dealers at a dinner given in honor of the eastern dealers at the Chicago Athletic club. The eastern grain men came yesterday in a special car, there being a large delegation. On several occasions the New York brokers have entertained the western shippers and dealers.

Le Count wired Barrell from Enid, Okla.: "Crop has been slightly damaged by rain. To what extent will depend on when weather clears." John Inglis wired Logan-Bryan from the same place: "North from El Reno wheat runs lighter and has stood up well under heavy rains. Every rainstorm is spreading the damaged area."

The Missouri June report, as wired by King of Toledo, makes the condition of wheat 69.8, against 68 the special May report and 82 a year ago. Corn condition, 85, same as a year ago. Acreage 91 per cent planted, against 93 a year ago. Oats condition, 85, against 63 a year ago.

Kansas City wired Keusch-Schwartz: "Wheat is in bloom in southern Kansas and one of the big firms here reports grave fears of damage from these heavy rains. Reports of this kind come from their men at country stations.

Receipts for Tuesday: Wheat, 26 cars; corn, 104 cars; oats, 76 cars; rye, 2 cars; barley, 10 cars; hogs for Monday, 34,000 head and for all next week, 140,000 head.

According to an eastern writer, this year will be the most prosperous in the history of the Chicago packing industry on account of the immense orders received for meats.

Several of the big buyers of wheat in the sample market were not buying yesterday, only two or three of the larger concerns being in the market.

According to B. W. Snow, the general rains in the Canadian northwest will allay all fears that were entertained in regard to its being too dry in that section.

Logan-Bryan had a letter from Grafton, N. D., saying conditions in that section were never better for a bumper crop. Acreage of wheat is large.

The Chicago grain market will be closed Monday on account of the judicial election. Toledo will also close, but other exchanges will be open as usual.

Charles D. Olsen made application for membership on the board of trade and a membership was posted for transfer by Robert B. McConnell.

Omaha reports indicated a big run of corn to that market the coming week with good weather. Receipts there yesterday were 100 cars.

Argentine weather conditions are favorable for the corn movement and in the north seeding of wheat is making rapid progress.

Minneapolis wheat stocks showed a gain of 10,000 bu for one day.

Duluth wheat stocks decreased 161,000 bu for the week.

Canadian Pacific.

M. P. N.—The slump in earnings suffered by the Canadian Pacific railway, due first to business depression in Canada a year ago and then to the war in Europe, has been tremendous. The Canadian Pacific reached its highest point of earnings in 1913. Since November of that year every monthly report has shown a decrease in gross as compared with the same month of the previous year, and every month showed a decrease in net till last January. Then the decrease in gross was $1,807,189, but this was more than offset by economies, making an increase of $140,059 in net. In February the gross declined only $858,494 and the net showed an increase of $507,438. Hopes that the road had "turned the corner" were dashed, however, by the Marc report. The decrease in gross went up to $1,594,000 and the net again showed a decrease of only $126,224, however. The April report just issued makes a less favorable showing. In the ten months from June 30 to April 30 the gross earnings decreased about 24 per cent as compared with the year before and net dropped about 21 per cent. These figures include only the railroad earnings which furnish 7 per cent dividends on common stock. The other 3 per cent of the dividend is supplied from land sales and other outside operations. It is not known how much of a decrease there is in these latter earnings. The railroad earned 11.19 per cent on common stock in the year 1913-14 and the land sales increased this to 14.46 per cent. If the land sales do not show a very great decline the 10 per cent dividend will be more than earned this year, but there is too much uncertainty in the situation to make the position of the common stock assured.

World Film.

G. M.: Stock of the World Film corporation is speculative. The company has outstanding $1,500,000 stock of $5 par value. The stock has paid no dividends, but in a recent interview General Manager Lewis J. Selznick of the company is quoted as saying he will recommend that the directors declare the first 3 per cent quarterly dividend, payable in July. He says present contracts of the company will pay 12 per cent annual dividends and leave a large surplus. Several film stocks that are actually paying 12 per cent sell some distance below par.

Oxweld Acetylene.

E. G. S.—The Oxweld Acetylene company has $2,000,000 common stock, $215,000 6 per cent preferred, and no bonds. It is controlled by men connected with the Union Carbide company. Both companies keep their affairs as secret as possible. In 1913 the Union Carbide company paid to its stockholders a dividend of 12½ per cent in Oxweld Acetylene stock. The entire $2,000,000 of the latter company's common stock was at that time only about 17 per cent of the Union Carbide's stock. The Oxweld Acetylene paid preferred dividends from the start. It began paying 5 per cent on common in 1913. The stock is of $100 par value.

National Candy Company.

C. C.—The National Candy company owns factories in a dozen cities of the middle west and south. It has outstanding $1,000,000 first preferred stock, $1,699,300 second preferred, and $5,294,600 common. Dividends of 7 per cent a year have been paid on the first and second preferred for the last twelve years. No dividend is reported on common since 1911. The report of earnings from 1906 to 1913 shows rather wide fluctuations, the balance after preferred dividends changing from a $20,700 deficit in 1912 to a $272,341 surplus in 1913. No report of earnings in 1914 is available, but the balance sheet of Dec. 31 last shows a total surplus of $1,004,721, which is an increase of about $27,000 over the statement of Dec. 31, 1913.

Packers had need for all of the 9,000 hogs received at Chicago yesterday, and they paid largely 5c higher than on Friday for the offerings, while shippers' orders were neither numerous nor urgent and no material advance was made by hogs sold to outsiders. Only one load of prime light hogs reached the day's top of $7.75, while the bulk cleared at $7.45@7.65. Shippers took 500 head and packers bought 9,700, cleaning up all the pens and closing the market in a firm position, with nothing left unsold. Most of the pigs sold at $6.75@7.50 for good to prime lots.

Final prices made hogs largely 15c lower than a week ago, while pigs were 10@15c higher, the latter being helped by a rejuvenated eastern shipping demand for young stock. The average price of all hogs here this week was placed at $7.60, against $7.65 last week, $8.15 a year ago, and $8.30 two years ago.

CATTLE.

Beef cattle values at Chicago this week closed practically from figures in force a week ago. Sales during the first half of the period were made at higher figures, the market being benefited by much smaller receipts. The supply on later days more than equaled requirements, however, and values took a downward turn, losing all of the early gains. Steers topped the week at $9.50, against $9.35 last week and $9.25 a year ago, while the bulk sold at $8.25@9.10, compared with $8.00@8.85 a year ago. Calf receipts for the week fell short of requirements, although showing an increase for the week, and prices were advanced 50@75c, closing with prime vealers quoted at $10.00.

Cattle at six western markets for the week 102,600, against 106,000 the preceding week, 95,100 a year ago, and 115,600 two years ago. Total for 1915 to date, 2,545,000, against 2,461,000 the same period in 1914.

SHEEP.

Having been pounded until pegged at an attractive level, sheep values at Chicago this week displayed more stability and closed at a recovery of 25c from last week's low closing level. Lambs continued to show unresistible strength and touched new high records for this market by closing 25@50c higher than a week ago and up to $10.75 for prime shorn offerings. There were no wool lambs offered during the week, excepting the springers, which sold up to $11.75, and showed a gain of 25@50c for the week. Receipts for six days showed a moderate decrease, due to the holiday on Monday, while shipments were practically nil.

STEEL DECISION OF WIDE IMPORT

Enthusiasm in Stock Market Outward Reflection of Money Relief.

N. Y. BANK FIGURES.

The enthusiasm shown in the securities market on Thursday and Friday following the announcement of the "steel trust" decision, reflects the relief which moneyed interests would feel if the era of prosecutions might be by them considered over. The rise in quotations was the expression of the sentiment which stands behind the confidence of capital. For four years there has been in such quarters a feeling of pessimism on account of legal activities of the government to correct what the latter considered the abuses of capital. Without expressing an opinion on this point, it remains a fact that business activities have been depressed. Those who furnish credit for enterprises have curtailed its volume, stating their reason for so doing that certainty of investment was lacking.

The steel decision was taken to lift this uncertainty because it was assumed that the court in a measure sought to reflect what seemed to be a popular change of opinion, and there are many evidences that the timidity of capital because of prosecutions has become eventually felt by a large part of the population, and whether the practices of capital were right or wrong the results of the prosecutions have been the same. It can be stated that those not directly interested felt there was much righteousness in what the government was seeking to accomplish.

BIG BOOM FADES IN WALL STREET

COPPERS AND MOTORS UP

Total sales of stocks, 300,000 shares.

Total sales of bonds (par value), $914,000.

New York, June 5.—Little or nothing remained today of the boom which yesterday sent stocks in general to the highest levels of recent weeks. The effect of the United States Steel decision seemed to have spent its force for a time, Steel shares as well as the other leaders reflecting moderate pressure.

The light trading of today's short session consisted largely of an evening up of weekly accounts. Opening prices showed a number of declines, these being mostly fractional, but later Steel common and preferred, Canadian Pacific, Union Pacific, and American Can receded a point each, Canadian Pacific becoming weaker as the session progressed.

Features of Strength.

Amalgamated copper and Anaconda copper were among the few features of strength, the former rising above its high price of the previous day. All the motor issues made considerable gains, presumably as a result of the enormous stock dividend declared by one of the better known companies.

Advances in these stocks ranged from 3 to 11 points, Willys-Overland scoring the maximum rise. In the final dealings Steel, Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, and American Can manifested renewed heaviness, closing at lowest prices.

In the London market the Harrimans and Steel registered fractional losses, other issues in the international list being higher on very light inquiry. Some selling was reported for Amsterdam, which may have represented offerings for Germany.

Underlying Conditions Sound.

Mercantile agencies in their weekly reviews referred to the intrinsic soundness of underlying conditions, which show further strengthening as a result of the decree favoring the Steel corporation.

Among the several railway statements submitted was that of Canadian Pacific, showing a gross decrease for May of $2,537,000. Norfolk and Western reported a net gain of $165,000 for April, and Wabash $125,000, while Texas and Pacific lost $96,000.

Bonds were steady on a nominal demand. United States coupon 4s declined ½ per cent on call during the week.

Review of the Week.

The decree in favor of the United States Steel corporation in the government's dissolution suit evidently outweighed considerations of world politics and wars in stock market estimation. Dealings broke through the restraint imposed by the dispute with Germany into animation and buoyancy, although prices reacted later and the market again became dull. Nevertheless, broad inferences were drawn from the Steel decision, while the chances of reversal on appeal were not lost sight of.

Ground work for recovery had been laid before this decision by the tone of confidence, due partly to greater hope of agreement with Germany, but more to the conviction that the extraordinary strength of this country's financial position would not be impaired in any event. Happenings in the exchange market confirmed this conviction. Gold imports arrived in large volume, with prospects of indefinite continuance.

Release to New York of great sums of gold by debtor nations with manifold increase of credit facilities, points very surely to plans for flotation in this market of foreign government securities for the purpose of establishing much needed credits here. Home demands on the money market continue light and time loans, including overyear accommodations, this week fell to lowest rates since 1911.

Mercantile paper, 3½@4 per cent. Sterling, sixty day bills, 4.7525 per cent; demand, 4.7835; cables, 4.7885. Francs, demand, 544; cables, 543½; marks, demand, 82⅝; cables, 82⅞; lire, demand, 592; cables, 591½; rubles, demand, 39; cables, 39⅛. Bar silver, 49¼c. Mexican dollars, 39c.

IN FOREIGN STOCK MARKETS.

LONDON, June 5.—Money and discounts were in fair demand today. The stock market was quiet. Gilt edged securities were steady and Brazilian issues responded to the recovery in exchange, but Kaffirs were irregular and home rails closed dull and easier. American securities were mostly under parity, but they closed steady. Bar silver, 23 5-16d per oz. Money, 1¼@1¾ per cent. Discount rate: Short bills, 2¾ per cent; three months, 2⅞ per cent.

THE HEART OF THE CRESCENT CITY FOR SALE

Southern States Fair Site CONTAINING 87.25 ACRES NEW ORLEANS, LA. WILL BE SOLD at Public Auction June 15, 1915.

This property is one that is rarely placed on the market—with its location, surroundings and future. Situated in the very heart of the metropolis of the South—New Orleans, La., the famous and historical Crescent City. Canal Boulevard, a broad traffic avenue, the greatest boulevard in the South, extending from the Mississippi River to Lake Pontchartrain (starting from the very business center of the city), passes through the property, giving a frontage of 4,024 feet. It is bounded by Taylor Avenue (frontage 2,200 feet), Orleans Boulevard Avenue (1,400 feet frontage), the magnificent City Park (2,500 feet frontage).

The property has been thoroughly cleared.

About 75% is sub-surface drained.

A large building—the Entrance and Administration Building—costing over $17,000, fronts one of the boulevards, is of stucco and is in good condition.

On all sides are splendid drives and parks. The site is away from the busy city, yet only 15 minutes' car ride distant.

Imagine 2,500 feet of continuous frontage on the greatest Parking system South, containing innumerable pleasure walks, ancient oaks, called the "Duelling Grounds," many lagoons covered with beautiful swans and other birds and also containing many fish. In the Park is the grand Art Gallery founded by Mr. Delgado, the well appointed Casino and other interesting attractions.

Adjoining is the 110 acre Model Race Track of days gone by, on which immense sums were spent to make it a superior resort.

The new Half Million Dollar Country Club, the Boys' High School, Beauregard Public School, Lakeview High School and Girls' High School are in the immediate vicinity.

The transit facilities are unsurpassed.

Adjoining property, with but little more improvements, has sold at about $6,000 per acre.

THE real estate market continues to make a good showing considering the many unfavorable conditions against which it has to contend, notably the continued tieup in the building trades, which seems now to have assumed a more unfavorable condition than at any time since the trouble began.

It has had practically no effect on the downtown market, which, because of overbuilding, unfavorable general business conditions, and excessive asking prices, has been in a semi-moribund state for a long time, but it has been, and is now, affecting the outside market, which has been the one sustaining factor in the general situation. It has injured this market for the reason that the bulk of the buying has been for purposes of improvement, the volume of speculative buying being small.

Buyers Keep Out of Market.

Not seeing their way clear to going ahead with their building plans, many would-be buyers naturally have kept out of the market. Nevertheless, owing to a widespread belief that the trouble was not likely to continue much longer, there has been a good movement of property, subdividers generally reporting improved conditions, while building permits have been taken out almost as freely as under normal conditions.

This was the case again last week, while at the same time announcement was made of a large number of important building projects. There was nothing of the magnitude of some of those announced for the previous week, but the showing was an excellent one under the circumstances, and is an encouraging sign, evidencing, as it does, the confidence of many people in the outlook for the future.

Effect of Last Break Watched.

It will be interesting to see what will be the effect of the last break between the carpenters and the carpenter contractors, with the threat of a general lockout in the building trades. Undoubtedly strong efforts will be made to bring the warring factions together, and because of the strong public sentiment against any labor war at the present time it is believed by many that a settlement will be reached. The threatened trouble among th street car men also acted as a disturbing factor last week, but the belief is that no serious trouble is to be apprehended from this source.

With the labor troubles out of the way, and with the abundance of cheap money that is now in the market, it is believed there will follow a period of much activity in both real estate and building.

Temple Foreclosure of Interest.

Although of no significance in a market way, much interest, nevertheless, attached to the foreclosure sale of the Temple building at La Salle and Monroe streets last week, both because of the prominence of the property as well as because of the heroic efforts made by its builders, the Woman's Temperance Building association, to save the structure. As was expected, the property was bid in by the Field museum of natural history, the holders of the $600,000 first mortgage bonds, on account of which the sale was had.

The museum was the only bidder. These bonds were a gift from Marshall Field, making up with money the $1,000,000 which he gave as a present to the museum prior to his endowment some years later. The total indebtedness at this time is $676,000. The difference between the bid and this amount, $45,000, is held, it is stated, in case the receiver may have a surplus of rents to meet it.

The stockholders have twelve months in which to redeem the property, and other creditors have three additional months, which together make fifteen months before a deed will be given to the purchaser. The property is now in the hands of George Manierre, who was appointed receiver Dec. 29, 1914, and in whose hands, as receiver, it will remain until Sept. 2, 1916, the end of the foreclosure proceedings.

The building was erected in 1892 and cost the Woman's Temperance Building association $1,251,048. It occupies a lot 95x188 feet which was leased by Marshall Field to the association for a term of 198 years from Jan. 1, 1890, at a straight annual rent of $40,000. The ground at that time was valued at $700,000.

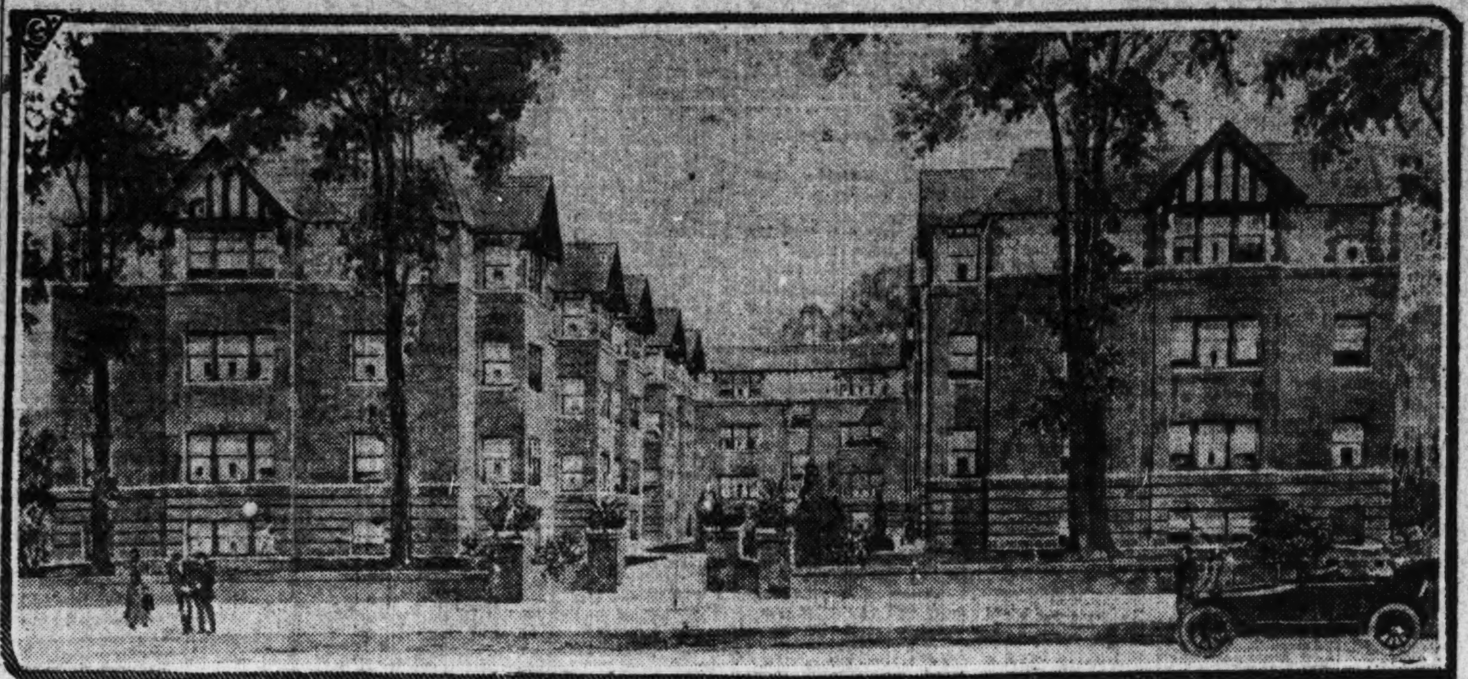
Annual Rent $157,000.

It is stated the building now has a gross annual rent of $157,000, which is said to be 93 per cent of its total rental capacity, viz: $167,000. Its fixed charges and running expenses, including extraordinary repairs, are estimated at $177,000. It is stated that one reason why the building is not paying is the gradual increase in the rate of taxation in the last twenty years, which shows an increase of $18,000, with no additional income to offset it; also within the last two years, by order of the city, new fire escapes, rewiring, sidewalk, and other expenses, amounting to about $20,000, were incurred.

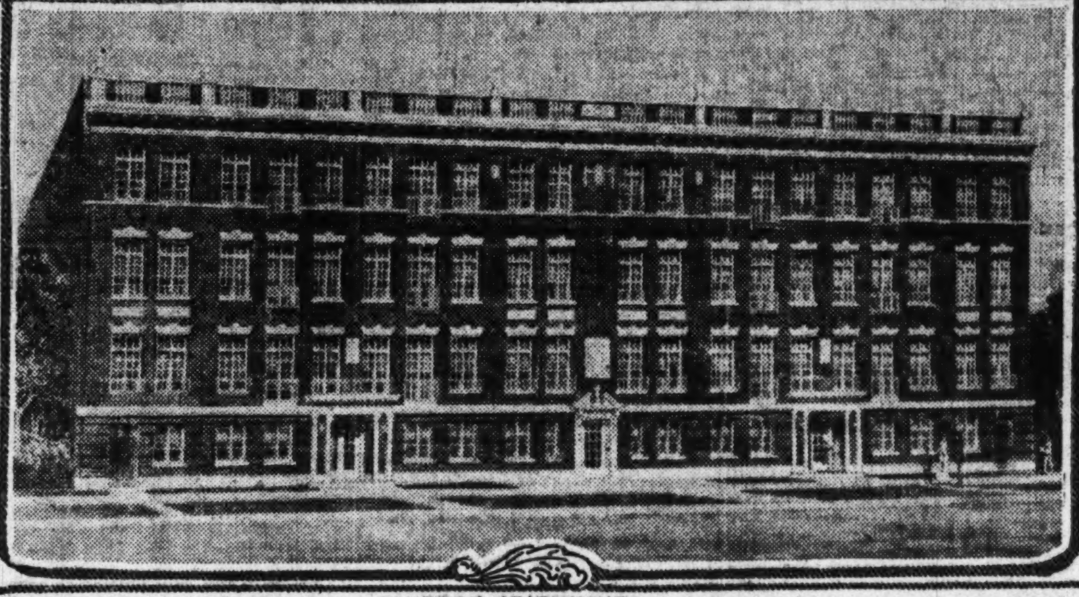
There were two minor sales of downtown property made matters of record, one being the sale by Esther P. Stockwell to Ludlow J. Washburn of the property in North La Salle street eighty-five feet north of Randolph street, lot 16 1-3x170 feet, west front, with four story brick business improvements, for an indicated consideration of $60,000, subject to an incumbrance of $42,000, $18,000 being paid for the equity.

Record also was made of the transfer by Ernest R. Graham to Charles J. Horn of the property on Fifth avenue, 168 feet north of Van Buren street, lot 25x100 feet, west front, for an indicated consideration of $33,000.

Costly Oak Park and North Side Apartments.



SEVEN ELMS APARTMENT, BUILDING



CAMERON APARTMENTS

Oak Park is to have another exceedingly attractive apartment building in "The Seven Elms," to be erected at 811-17 Lake street after plans by Monroe Sandel, architect. The building will contain forty-five apartments of four and five rooms and will cost more than $150,000. It will have an estimated yearly rental of $18,800. The building will have a ground area of 125x216 feet, north front, and is to be of English style, with green glazed tile roofs, stucco and half timber work, with red pressed brick laid with a wide white joint. Each apartment will be finished in oak and birch mahogany, with a Murphy In-a-Door bed, kitchen cabinets, wardrobes, and sun porches. S. W. Straus & Co. have made a loan of $110,000 serial 6 per cent bond issue.

The Cameron apartments at 19-31 East Elm street are the latest of the several high grade apartment buildings on the near north side. It is owned by Dr. Uhl Cameron, will contain 12 apartments of six rooms, a reception hall, and three bathrooms, will occupy a lot 125x78 feet, north front, and will cost about $125,000. William D. Mann is the architect and the Central Trust company has made a serial bond issue loan of $75,000 at 6 per cent.

Subdividers Report Lot Business Brisk.

A. T. McIntosh & Co. announce that about two-thirds of the Marquette Park subdivision has been sold. This property is located between Western and Kedzie, along Seventy-first street, and lies just across the road from Marquette park. It is expected that several buildings will be constructed in this subdivision during the summer and fall months.

Henry L. Schoolcraft reports that all residence lots in the Devon-Western addition to Rogers Park have been disposed of. This property, which lies along Devon avenue, between Western avenue and Robey street, will be improved with cement sidewalks, water and sewer. These improvements are already in on Devon avenue, Western avenue, and Robey street.

E. B. Kendall reports a normal advance sale of lots in Desplaines Gardens. For the last year there has been a pronounced development in this suburban town, and at the present time more than forty buildings are under construction there. Real estate operators who have offered property in and around Desplaines hint at new projects in the village in the near future which will greatly increase values.

Frederick H. Bartlett & Co. will announce the opening sale and location of Portia Manor within a short time. All preparations for this sale are complete and ready for the public offering.

William H. Britigan, manager of Marquette Manor, is announcing the closing sale of lots in this subdivision. Since Nov. 1 the total sales of property there is more than $1,250,000. Three thousand five hundred people have purchased lots since this property was placed on the market.

LABOR TROUBLE FAILS TO DAUNT FLAT BUILDERS

Purchases of Ground Involving Extensive Construction Week's Feature.

While the trouble in the building trades undoubtedly is greatly restricting construction operations, the fact remains that an unusual number of important building projects are in contemplation, and the most interesting feature of the week's real estate market was the many purchases made involving extensive improvements. Most of these were for apartment buildings, one involving improvements to cost, it was stated, between $500,000 and $600,000.

It was also announced in connection with a sale of acres in the northwest part of the city for subdivision purposes that the purchaser plans during the coming year the construction of from 75 to 100 two flat buildings, to cost about $5,000 each. The erection of business buildings in various outlying parts of the city was also a feature in this connection.

Northwestern to Build.

Of much interest also was the announcement that the Chicago and Northwestern road is to construct a four story office building at the northeast corner of East Ravenswood park and Lawrence avenue, to cost about $250,000, on ground which it has just acquired at that point. The plot, which is 442x163 feet, west front, was acquired from several different owners for a stated total consideration of $46,450. The proposed building, the plans for which are being prepared by Architect Charles S. Frost, will cover about half of the lot and will be occupied by the clerical force of the accounting department.

Much interest also attaches to the announcement that Peter F. Reynolds, the builder, is to erect several high grade apartment buildings at Broadway and Addison street and Pine Grove avenue and Addison street on property which he purchased from Mrs. Effie Payne, to cost between $500,000 and $600,000.

Church Gets Part of Property.

He acquired from Mrs. Payne 450 feet on Broadway and 123 feet on each of the other two streets for an indicated consideration of $60,000. In that connection Mrs. Payne also sold to the Convent of the Sacred Heart of Pine Grove avenue the south 100 feet of the property for $35,000, making a total of $95,000 for the block.

Mrs. Payne, who has resided on the property for nearly fifty years, is the widow of James Payne, pioneer banker, at one time said to have been a silent partner of Preston, Keene & Co., bankers. Mr. Payne purchased the property in 1867, when that vicinity was a practical wilderness. He paid $2,500 for it, so that the present sale for $95,000 is exactly thirty-eight times the original purchase price. He died in 1907.

She Retains Her Chickens.

It is said that when the contract for the sale of the property to Mr. Reynolds was presented to Mrs. Payne for her signature she at first refused to sign for the reason the contract did not state that she was to retain a number of chickens which she owns and to which she is much attached, as well as their houses. She also wanted to retain the old frame dwelling. She was permitted to retain both. Louis H. Shapiro of S. W. Winefield & Co. was the broker.

Gustav H. Gottschalk, a builder, bought from Nathan Glickman and others the vacant on Milwaukee 354 feet northwest of Kedzie avenue, with 200x125 feet of ground, northeast front, for an indicated consideration of $35,000, or $175 a front foot. Mr. Gottschalk plans to improve with a building containing a 1,000 seat theater, eighteen flats, and twelve stores, to cost about $130,000.

30 Flat Building Planned.

A thirty apartment building to cost in the neighborhood of $100,000 is to be erected at 5413-21 Ellis avenue on 96x165 feet of ground by Carl A. Anderson, the builder, on vacant which he has just purchased from Walter Snell for a reported consideration of $10,000. The sale was negotiated by C. F. Parker and T. D. O'Hern of C. W. Hoff & Co.

Edward M. Bertha, the builder, purchased from the Chicago Title and Trust company, trustee, the vacant 129½x127½ feet at the northeast corner of Crandon avenue and Seventieth place, for a reported consideration of $12,500 cash. It is stated he will improve with a high grade twenty-four apartment building to cost in the neighborhood of $85,000. J. E. Bistor of W. K. Young & Bro. was the broker.

Other Good Deals of the Week.

In another south side deal Thomas D. O'Hern of C. W. Hoff & Co. sold to Mrs Emma J. Walker the vacant at 5553-59 Ingleside avenue, 96x130 feet, a nominal consideration being given. It is stated the purchaser will improve with a twelve apartment building to cost about $50,000.

The property at the southeast corner of Kedzie avenue and Palmer square, 200x90 feet, was sold by F. L. Otto to Frank Paschen for a reported consideration of $12,000. It is stated the purchaser will improve with a thirty apartment building to cost about $80,000. Both parties were represented by W. C. Regelin company in the Logan Square Bank building, successors to the Logan square office of Regelin, Jenson & Co.

The vacant 97½x140 feet at the southeast corner of West Madison street and Parkside avenue, has been sold by D. A. McLaughlin and M. E. Courtney to Antonia Borsi for a reported consideration of $10,700. It is stated the purchaser will improve with a building to contain four stores and twenty-four apartments to cost about $65,000. John B. De Voney represented both parties.

PROPERTY OWNERS ORGANIZE

The Burr Ellyn Subdivision Improvement association, formed to promote the welfare of the district between West Fifty-fifth and Sixty-first sts., Kedzie and Fortieth avenues, has filed incorporation papers at Springfield. It was done by Capt. James Baker, Edward J. Tusk, and Marvin E. Ellinwood. The movement was started by Capt. Baker at the request of 300 property owners.

Leases and Loans.

THE mortgage loan market was much in evidence last week, with two $500,000 loans, one for $160,000, and several for $75,000 or thereabouts. There is nothing new to report in this field except that there is an abundant supply of loanable funds and that interest rates remain practically unchanged. Some conservative lenders are disposed to hold off somewhat because of the German and Mexican complications and because of this interest rates probably are held a little more firmly than likely would have been the case had these questions not arisen.

One of the $500,000 loans was made by the Chicago Title and Trust company, trustee, to Alexander W. Hannah, David Hogg, and John G. Campbell, trustees, on the Hotel Brevoort property at 160 West Madison street, between Clark and La Salle streets. The loan, which is understood to be for the purpose of refunding an existing loan for the same amount held by the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance company, runs ten years from July 1 next and bears 5 per cent interest.

The borowers have the privilege of prepaying the loan July 1, 1920, on giving six months' notice. The lot fronts fifty feet with a depth of 180 feet, the hotel being a fifteen story fireproof structure. The board of review valued the property at $837,920.

The other $500,000 loan, running ten years at 5 per cent, is secured by the Ashland block at Randolph and Clark streets. The loan is for the purpose of refunding an existing loan of $500,000, which matures next November. Hamilton Moses of Moses, Rosenthal & Kennedy is trustee in the loan, the grantors being Mrs. Lucy Alexander and William E. Summs and others. The building is a sixteen story structure on a lot having a frontage of 80 feet on Randolph street and 180 feet on Clark street with 160 feet north frontage on Couch place. The loan is subject to a lease from Alexander John Alexander to the Ashland Block association.

Record was made of a loan by the New England Mutual Life Insurance company to Jacob L. Kesner of $160,000, five years at 5 per cent, secured by the property on South Wabash avenue, 120 feet north of Harrison street, lot 40x172½ feet, west front, with brick business improvements.

Greenebaum Sons Bank and Trust company is trustee in a loan of $75,000 in the form of a 6 per cent bond issue to Edward M. Bertha, secured by the building in course of construction at the northwest corner of Ellis avenue and Fortieth street, containing thirty-three apartments on a lot 70x200 feet.

The same trust company is trustee in another loan of $52,500 in the shape of a 6 per cent bond issue to Charles J. Johnson, secured by the twenty-four flat building at 6822-30 Ridgeland avenue on 120x125 feet of ground.

The Chicago Title and Trust company is trustee in a loan of $75,000, ten years at 6 per cent to the Climax Container company on the property in West Forty-third street, 146 feet west of Princeton avenue.

The Fort Dearborn Trust and Savings bank is trustee in a loan of $50,000, seven years at 6 per cent, to William Hughes, secured by the property at the southwest corner of Michigan avenue and Fifty-third streets, 100x150 feet, with apartment house improvements.

S. Yondorf & Co. have made a loan of $38,000, five years at 6 per cent, to John E. Ward, with annual prepayments of $2,500, secured by the twenty-four apartment building at the southwest corner of Fifty-third street and Ellis avenue on 100x158 feet of ground.

E. M. Griesheimer & Co. have leased for Jay C. McCord and Downer McCord to Joseph G. Levi the store at 119 South Dearborn street for a term of years at a total reported rent of $80,000. This is the third of the chain of lunchrooms doing business under the name of Richmore that Mr. Levi has opened since the first of the year.

COUNTRY HOME ACRES LEADING TRADE OF WEEK

Mrs. A. J. Lichtstern Purchases Lake Site South of Highland Park.

The most important deal of the year in high class north shore acres was the purchase by Mrs. Adolph J. Lichtstern from William F. Dummer and others of a tract of forty-two acres just south of Highland Park, along the lake, north of the North Shore Golf club, as the site for a handsome country home.

The property, which has 1,600 feet of frontage along the lake shore, and is recognized as one of the most attractive pieces of acre property on the north shore, was for several years occupied by the Gad's Hill encampment, now located at Arden Shore, Lake Bluff.

It is covered with a handsome growth of timber and is traversed by several exceedingly picturesque ravines. Only a nominal consideration is given in the transfer, but it is understood the revenue stamps on the document indicated a consideration of $150,000.

Handsome Home Planned.

It is understood no plans have yet been made regarding the proposed improvements except that they will be of a high order, in keeping with the character of the property as well as the neighborhood, where several handsome country homes have been established, notably those of Julius Rosenwald, Mrs. Leon Mandel, Charles A. Stonehill, and B. E. Bensinger.

It is understood an effort is to be made to enhance the natural beauties of the property by artistic landscaping under the direction of Jens Jensen. Title to the property was taken by Mrs. Lichtstern, while the negotiations in connection with the acquirement of the property were conducted by Murray & Terry.

Syndicate Gets Site.

In another interesting north shore transaction a syndicate headed by Henry E. Chandler, a business man of Evanston, closed the purchase from Frank M. Elliott of the property at the southwest corner of Chicago avenue and Main street, Evanston. Together with other purchases made recently, the syndicate has acquired a holding having 180 feet on Chicago avenue and 100 feet on Main street, improved mostly with three story brick stores, offices, and flats, for a reported total consideration of about $100,000. Mason & Smart were the brokers, while Joseph L. McNab attended to the legal details.

An important transaction in acres in the northwest part of the city, involving a new subdivision to be known as the Colonial Gardens and extensive improvements thereon, has been closed and filed for record. The transaction, which was under the Torrens system, covers the tract of forty and one-third acres at the southeast corner of Foster avenue and Menard avenue, formerly North Fifty-eighth avenue, extended, which has been purchased by William Zelosky, the subdivider, from Lafayette Hopkins for a stated consideration of $80,500. It is stated the property has been in the Hopkins family for sixty years.

Mr. Zelosky plans to put in all street improvements at a cost of about $60,000 and subdivide the property into 295 lots with a thirty foot frontage. During the coming year he proposes to erect from seventy-five to 100 two flat buildings to cost about $5,000 each. The property is now used for truck farm purposes.

MOTOR FIRM BUILDING SOLD

An interesting transaction in South Michigan avenue was the sale of the fee under the building at 2323 Michigan avenue, 40x160 feet, by Garabed T. Pushman to Harris Whittemore of Naugatuck, Conn., for a reported consideration of $50,000. Mr. Pushman has taken back a lease for ninety-nine years on a net 5 per cent basis, he retaining the ownership of the building, which is a three story mercantile structure, occupied by the Cole Motor company. The property is subject to an incumbrance of $24,000, Mr. Whittemore paying $26,000 for the equity. W. A. Pridmore negotiated the sale.

BADGERS WIN MEET FROM MAROONS BY ONE POINT

CUBS BLANKED BY GIANTS, 3-0, IN FIRST FRAY

Bears Held to Four Hits by Perritt and Humphries Loses.

DOYLE STARS AT BAT.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

New York's Giants made the National league race look still more like a closed up accordion by defeating the Cubs, 3 to 0, yesterday in the opening game of their series here. Only five games now separate Bresnahan's leaders from McGraw's tail enders.

Pol Perritt let the Cubs down with four base hits and applied the whitewash evenly. Only once did the Cubs get close to the pan, and only four of them went as far as second base. Thunder Humphries, who shut out the Giants in Gotham last month, would have held them to one run yesterday with the support his pitching deserved.

Two Runs Off Humphries.

Lumping a single and a triple, the visitors earned a tally in the fourth. Their second run was handed the Giants by a Saier muff in the eighth and that was all off Humphries. He retired in favor of a pinch walker in the home eighth and Pierce contributed a base on balls, a wild pitch, and a wild throw to the ninth inning Giant tally.

Doyle's bat drove in two of New York's runs and earned him a perfect batting average with four consecutive safeties, including a three bagger and a double. That was half the hits made by the visitors.

Merkle gave the Giants a chance by opening the third with a single and making second on McLean's out. A wild chuck by Archer trying to pick Merkle off second let the runner to third, but he was stranded there while Phelan threw out Perrit and Humphries struck out Snodgrass.

The Cubs came near counting in their half. Phelan singled wtih one down and stole second, spiking Fletcher so that he had to quit for repairs. Humphries skied, but Good walked and Phelan stole third on the fourth ball. On an attempted double steal Phelan was caught at the pan.

The Giants cracked the eggs in the fourth, which Lobert opened with a single. Doyle pulled one just inside first base and made three bags while Good was corraling the ball in a corner, scoring Lobert. Doyle was nailed trying to score on Burns' rap to Fisher. Brainerd skied and they pinched Burns stealing.

Robertson Gets to Second.

Robertson led in the fifth with a single, but it was sterilized. He got to second on Merkle's out, but no further. McLean skied, and Perritt rolled out. Doyle rapped out his third safety with two gone in the sixth, and Williams' fumble let him to second, but Burns popped the side out.

The Cubs did not get a man on from the third to seventh. Then a fumble by Brainerd gave Phelan a life, and Humphries neatly sacrificed him to second. Nothing more doing. Good skied and Fisher whiffed.

Merkle worked Humphries for a pass after two Giant deaths in the seventh. McLean deposited a Texas leaguer in short field, but no damage resulted, because Perritt struck out. Saier whistled a two bagger through right center in the home half, but there were two gone already, and Williams was disposed of easily by Doyle.

Sends Snodgrass Home.

Saier dropped a low throw by Phelan, giving Snodgrass a life in the eighth, and the Giants converted it into a run. Lobert sacrificed, and Doyle pickled his fourth straight hit. It was a double over first base, and gave Snodgrass an easy ride home. Burns was robbed of a double because the ball hit third base and stopped where Phelan could get it in time to throw him out. Brainerd flied.

With two gone in our half, McLarry took Humphries' stick and walked, but Good was called out on strikes. Pierce took the slab and passed Robertson, then let him to second with a wild pitch. Merkle's out put Robertson on third, and he scored because Pierce made a low throw to the plate after fielding McLean's bounder. Perritt and Snodgrass were easy.

TERRIERS SWEEP WHALES SERIES

Take Five Straight by Winning Both Double Header Contests, 6-4 and 6-0.

BY J. J. ALCOCK.

St. Louis made a clean sweep of its five game series here by trimming the Whales in both games of a double header yesterday. One big rally won the opener for the Terriers, 6 to 4, and Otis Crandall shut out the Tinkers in the twilight engagement, 6 to 0.

Errors where they hurt most cost the Whales both games. Beck contributed one boot which helped St. Louis count six runs in the fifth round of the first clash, and five Chicago errors were inserted in the second fray just where they did the most good for the enemy.

Crandall held the Tinx to four hits which were evenly divided by Flack and Beck. Only six blows were poled off Mike Prendergast, but a series of errors made them good for as many tallies. Mike quit his job after the eighth and let Brennan hurl in the last round.

Terriers Win in Fifth.

For eight of the nine innings of the first game Hendrix hurled no-hit ball. The exception was the fifth round. In that frame the Terriers massed all their five blows and scored all six of their tallies. Two doubles and a triple were included in the assault, and an error by Caruso Beck helped considerably in the rout of the spouters.

Hendrix had one alibi for his explosion in the fifth. He started the Whales in front by soaking a homer into the bleachers in the fourth, when Hanford was on third. Possibly the strain of trotting around the circuit caused Claude to blow in the next round.

Bud Watson, an ex-Whale, was nicked for all the Chicago tallies before he quit in the sixth. Dave Davenport, the Texas ranger, sat in after Jones yanked the southpaw out and there never was much chance for the Tinkers while Dave was operating. Seven hits were all the Whales could gather off the two St. Louis hurlers.

Double Play Prevents Scoring.

Two passes and two singles were wasted by the Whales in the first. A double play after the first blow prevented any scoring. A single and a boot by Ernie Johnson were equally worthless in the second.

Bud Watson lost his horseshoe in the fourth. He passed Hanford with one down and Hendrix lifted a mighty drive into the left bleacher for a homer. Two runs.

Hendrix had allowed only one hit up to that time, but the exertion of circling the bases seemed to take all the pitching strength out of him. St. Louis batted all the way around in the fifth. When a double play retired the side six runs had been scored. One was out when Miller beat a hit to Smith. Hartley lined a single to center, and Deal doubled to left, scoring Miller. Johnson pulled a double inside first and Hartley and Deal trotted home. Watson walked. Beck let Tobin's bounce all through him and Johnson counted. Vaughn projected a triple into left, driving across Watson and Tobin. Vaughn and Drake were doubled on the latter's bounder to Smith.

Two for Whales in Sixth.

COUPON OUT FOR BALL ASPIRANTS

Entries Will Enable "Tribune" Scouts to Cover the Ground Better.

BY HARVEY T. WOODRUFF.

THE TRIBUNE's offer to send three amateur players of Chicago on a road trip with the White Sox, Whales, and Cubs without a cent of expense to these players, as a reward for skill and good sportsmanship on the diamond, has brought a more enthusiastic response than any offer ever before laid before the youngsters of the prairies, who, a few years hence, will be the major leaguers to whom we all will be paying homage.

"It's strange no one ever thought of such a thing before," said one man high in the councils of organized baseball. "It's just the thing. It's great for the boys and it's great for baseball. I hope THE TRIBUNE will make it an annual affair."

Move to Watch Games.

As for the boys themselves, THE TRIBUNE sporting department has fairly swarmed with ambitious youngsters, anxious to learn more of the details of the plan. It has been flooded with letters of inquiry as to how to get a scout to see certain players perform. These requests have become so numerous that it has been found necessary to add to the number of scouts who today will visit the various park and prairie games.

Remember, boys, this offer is open to any player in Chicago under 21 years old. Reports from the scouts are filed with THE TRIBUNE committee. The reports will be sifted until the committee is able to pick three boys who appear to have played the best baseball and to have observed the most sportsmanlike conduct on the field. These fortunate three will be actual members of Chicago's big league teams for a road trip, sharing the fortunes of war with the White Sox, Cubs, and Whales as regular members of the teams.

Will Teach Diamond Intricacies.

Managers Rowland, Tinker, and Bresnahan have enthusiastically promised they will do all in their power to show these boys chosen by THE TRIBUNE all the intricacies of big league baseball. It will be an education in the national pastime as well as a splendid trip through the big cities of the east.

There are absolutely no strings attached to the offer. It is a free field, open to any boy in Chicago and suburbs who is under 21 years old. In view of the many requests to be enrolled as candidates, THE TRIBUNE has deemed it advisable to prepare an entry blank, which appears elsewhere on this page. This entry blank will enable THE TRIBUNE to distribute its scouts to better advantage, so that every young ball player of promise may have an equal chance for the big prizes.

Cut Out Coupon.

So, boys, cut out this coupon today, fill in the blanks, have it signed by your manager, and then mail your entries to the Amateur Baseball Editor, CHICAGO TRIBUNE, 310 Tribune building.

The first official reports of the scouts will appear in THE TRIBUNE on Tuesday morning. The observers will tell what they see today.

FED OWNERS IN SESSION AT SECRET CONFERENCE.

Federal league magnates gathered at the Hotel La Salle yesterday morning for a secret conference. Every club in the league was represented, but after the meeting adjourned President Gilmore said the session had been salled merely to discuss the baseball situation. There was no talk of peace, according to the league prexy. After lunch the entire assemblage hurried to Weeghman park to see the double header between the Whales and St. Louis.

Those at the league confab were: Phil Ball and Otto Stifel, St. Louis; C. B. Comstock, Brooklyn; Conrad H. Mann, Kansas City; William E. Robertson, Buffalo; E. W. Gwinner, Pittsburgh; Harry F. Sinclair and Pat T. Powers, Newark; Ned Hanlon, Baltimore; C. H. Weeghman and William M. Walker, Chicago; President James A. Gilmore and Secretary Tom Gilmore. C. B. Comstock of Brooklyn came as representative of R. B. Ward, who is ill.

SOX BEATEN BY RED LEGS, 4 TO 2

Umpire's Refusal to Allow a Triple Play Gives the Hub Team Two Runs.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

Boston, Mass., June 5.—[Special.]—The proud White Sox were on the wrong end of the score today in their second battle of the eastern invasion, Boston getting the verdict in an exciting combat which ended 4 to 2.

One decision by the umpire gave Boston two of its four runs and messy fielding by Buck Weaver and Reb Russell gave the local crew the other two. The two runs tallied by the White Sox were valiantly earned, but they weren't worth shucks. The decision by the umpire not only gave Boston two runs but it deprived the White Sox of the honor of making a triple play. Instead of getting three men out, as they supposed, they found they didn't get one out.

Quinlan's Catch Disallowed.

The play came up in the second when Boston had the bases filled, with no one out. Manager Carrigan was at bat. He hit one in a line over second base and Tommy Quinlan raced in at breakneck pace, dived headlong, and made the catch. At least it looked like he made it, and the general impression was he had made it. Quinlan heaved the ball to second, where Weaver took it, touched the bag, and then relayed it to first.

Two of the base runners had crossed the plate and the man who had been at first was on second. Therefore, if Quinlan really caught the ball, the Sox had turned a triple play. But Umpire Evans wouldn't declare it so, and there was a fine gathering of ball players and umpires in the middle of the diamond. But the protesting did no good, for Mr. Evans said "No."

Quinlan appealed to Umpire Mullaney, but the latter refused to change Umpire Evans' decision. Tonight, at the hotel, Quinlan still insisted that he had made a fair catch of the ball.

Bungles Cost Two Tallies.

Even those two runs wouldn't have beaten the Sox if Weaver hadn't been guilty of dropping two high fly balls later on. One of them belonged to Fournier, but Buck insisted on making the catch.

"Reb" Russell was pitted against George Foster in the slabbing, and the Boston man had a bit the better of it. Russell yielded only seven blows, while the Sox made only four off Foster.

The Sox could do nothing with Foster's curves in the first round, but in the second they got the bases full on a single and two walks. No scores came in though, because the batters were helpless in the pinch.

Boston's boys did no damage to Russell in the first, but in the second round they nicked him for two runs, but not without a vigorous lot of protesting by Chicago on one decision.

Umpire Rules Against Sox.

Russell was wild and walked Hobby, after which Scott singled, Hobby going to third. Gardner walked, filling the bases, and then the remarkable play happened. Carrigan hit a terrific liner over second. Tommy Quinlan ran in at top speed, dived headlong, and from the press stand seemed to make a fair catch as narrated.

Following this exciting play Foster

Urbana, Ill., June 5.—[Special.]—By the tenuous margin of one point Wisconsin won the fifteenth annual outdoor track and field championships held here today on Illinois field with a total of 38 points. Chicago was second with 37 points, and Missouri third was 21 units, while Illinois was next with 18 points.

The meet, which was featured by the breaking of seven records, while two were equaled, will go down in history as the greatest event of its kind ever held in the west. The competition, which was of the keenest sort, was the result of the record smashing performances.

The first mark to go by the boards was in the mile, when Ivan Myers of De Pauw footed the route in 4:19 1-5. Running with a powerful stride, he beat Harvey of Wisconsin, who had been picked to win, by ten yards.

Both Hurdles to Simpson.

Robert Simpson of Missouri then came along and clipped a fifth of a second off the record by leaping the barriers in :15, which tied the world's record. He then repeated in the low hurdles and set a record of :24 3-5.

In the 880 yard run Roy Campbell of Chicago ran the distance in 1:53 3-5 for a new record. He ran a great race and his performance was one of the best of the day. A. H. Mason of Illinois lowered the two mile record to 9:33 2-5. D. G Stiles of Wisconsin won the running broad jump with a leap of 23 feet 9¾ inches, while the Chicago relay team hung up a new mark of 3:21 4-5.

Ward of Chicago ran the 100 yard dash in :09 4-5 and the 220 yard dash in :21 3-5. His time in both events equaled the established records.

Arlie Mucks of Wisconsin was the individual star. He won twelve points by winning the shotput and discus throw and finishing third in the hammer throw. Ward of Chicago and Simpson each scored ten points and Bachman of Notre Dame registered nine units.

Myers Clips Mile Mark.

In one of the greatest long distance races ever held in the west, Ivan Myers of De Pauw defeated Harvey of Wisconsin in the mile run and established a new conference record of 4:19 1-5 for the distance.

Stout of Chicago led for the first half mile, but on the start of the third lap Myers went into the lead and Harvey moved up to second place. When the pistol was fired for the final circuit the pair raced down the backstretch on even terms. Myers had more endurance when the stretch was reached, and crossed the line five yards in advance of the Badger. The former record was 4:20 4-5, and was held by A. F. Baker of Oberlin.

Simpson Equals World Time.

Robert Simpson of Missouri certainly lived up to his reputation as a hurdler by winning the 120 yard high barriers in :15. This performance not only broke the conference record, but it equaled the world's record held jointly by C. F. Smithson and Fred Kelly. The rangy Missourian leaped the sticks in faultless fashion and hit the tape two yards in advance of Packer of Ames.

After getting away to a bad start, Dismond of Chicago won the 440 yard run in the fast time of :49 1-5. The Maroon had to run around the entire field, but he took the lead on the back stretch and crossed the line three yards ahead of Williams of Wisconsin, who secured second place.

Maroons One-Two in Dash.

Maroon colors flashed to the front again in the 100 yard dash when Ward beat his teammate, Knight, by a yard and equaled the conference record of :09 4-5. The Chicago pair led all the way and beat Casey and Smith of Wisconsin by a good yard.

Fisher of Chicago and H. James of Northwestern tied for first place in the running high jump at 5 feet 11¾ inches. Gorgas of Chicago, Vidal of South Dakota, and M. James of Northwestern tied for third place at 5 feet 10¾ inches.

With a throw of 137 feet 7 inches, Mucks of Wisconsin won the discus throw. Bachman of Notre Dame was second, while Dutton of Iowa was third.

Campbell Also Record Breaker.

Roy Campbell of Chicago was the next performer to break into the record breaking column, when he won the half mile and established a new mark of 1:53 3-5. The Maroon took the lead on the second lap and finished ten yards ahead of Myers of Depauw. He finished strong, and defeated a fast field.

Maroon colors flashed to the front again in the 220 yard dash, which was won by F. Ward in the record time of 0:21-3-5.

INDEPEND'T ORDER FORESTERS

Grant and Umatilda, Illinois and Glory, both at Grant park.

Inquisitive Fans.

Genesee, Ill.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—A claims that if a ball game is called after four and one-half innings have been played the game counts, providing the team second at bat scores more runs in four innings than the team first at bat scores in five innings. B claims five full innings have to be played. Which is right? FAN.

A is right. According to B's claim it would be necessary to play the last half of the ninth even if the home team was ahead in eight and one-half innings.

N. Pierce, Lowell, Ind.—Technically, Chicago was half a game ahead of Philadelphia on May 23, but if Philadelphia had won a game while Chicago did not play, the percentages would have put the Phillies in the lead.

J. W. Beckstrom, Evanston, Ill.—Record of such performances are not preserved by "The Tribune."

P. S., Chicago—Regarding the game of May 26, none of the Sox pitchers in that game would have been charged with a defeat if their team had lost. Each pitcher would have been credited with the number of innings he pitched and charged with the number of runs earned off him. The absurd rating of pitchers by games won or lost by their teams was discarded officially three years ago.

Chicago.—Editor of The Tribune.]—Does a pitcher get credit for a strikeout when he strikes out a batter and the batter gains first base by the catcher missing the third strike? E. B. C.

Certainly.

Moline, Ill.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—[1] If first only is occupied with no outs and an infield fly is hit, is not the batter out whether the ball is fielded or not? [2] Can a double play be made? [3] A is knocked out of the box in the first inning, five runs being scored. B relieves him. The game is lost, 8 to 2. Which pitcher is credited with the defeat? C. T. BUCKLEY.

[1] Batsman is not out unless the fly is caught. [2] Not if the batsman runs to first as he should do. [3] Most league secretaries used to charge the defeat to A. There are no rules governing the point.

Chicago.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—With a man on third base and no one out the batter hits a ball to the third baseman. The man on third starts for home and the third baseman, having plenty of time to catch the runner at the plate, throws the batter out at first. Is the third baseman charged with an error in the official score? H. M. NYLEN.

No. Unfortunately the rules do not permit bone plays to be scored as errors.

C. J. M., Chicago.—Yes.

Aurora, Ill.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Ball is hit between third baseman and shortstop which the third baseman cannot reach. The shortstop cuts across toward left field and fields the ball cleanly but has no chance to get the runner. Would you consider this a clean or scratch hit? R. McC.

It sounds like a clean hit, but all hits count alike in the score.

Evanston, Ill.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Man on third, one out. Batter hits to pitcher, who throws to plate. Man from third attempts to score but fails to touch the plate and goes to the bench. Catcher touches the plate and I claim an out. Is the runner out? EVANSTON.

Not unless he went more than three feet out of the line to avoid being touched. The catcher could not put him out by touching the plate.

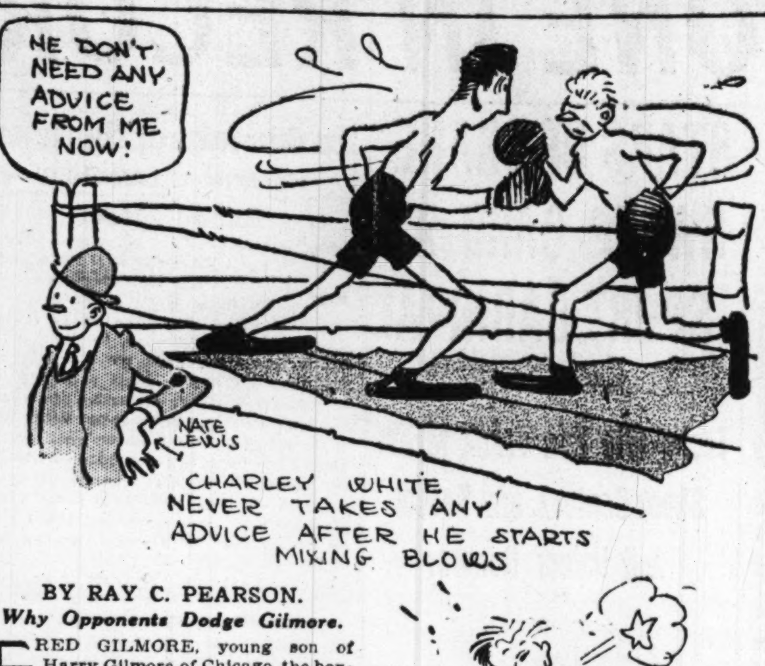
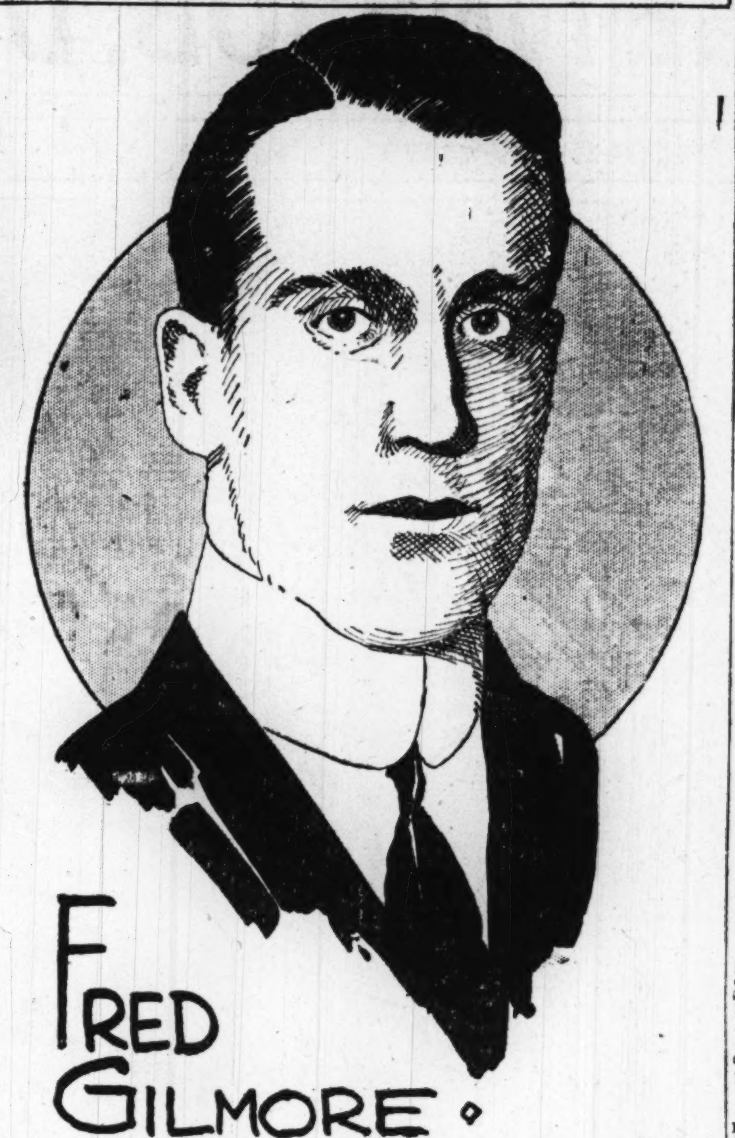
Anecdotes and Incidents of the Prize Ring; How Hotel Clerk Spoiled Match for Gilmore.



HE DON'T NEED ANY ADVICE FROM ME NOW!
NATE LEWIS
NATE LEWIS

CHARLEY WHITE NEVER TAKES ANY ADVICE AFTER HE STARTS MIXING BLOWS



BY RAY C. PEARSON.

Why Opponents Dodge Gilmore.

FRED GILMORE, young son of Harry Gilmore of Chicago, the boxing instructor, who is making a bid, and a strong one, for welterweight honors, has been having a world of trouble trying to get some one to fight him, and has been wondering why everybody dodged him. One explanation is offered which may have had something to do with Fred's inability to match up with rival welters. It happens that young Gilmore has a manager known as Wee, Cupid or Little Doc Krone, the said manager being pretty near big enough to outweigh half a dozen heavyweights. Krone admits to a poundage of 350, but some folks who know him declare that it is downright modesty that prevents his acknowledging his real weight.

Of course, Krone does all the matchmaking for Gilmore, but Fred, who is a smart boy and above the average mitt artist in speedy thinking, always is on hand to see that nothing is put over. Recently Krone thought that he had a match all but hooked up for his protege with a boy from a small city in Michigan and asked the Michigander to come on to Chicago to sign the articles of agreement for the bout, which was planned for a Wisconsin ring. By return wire Krone was informed that the fighter and his manager would be in Chicago the next day.

The place for the meeting had been set by Krone, and the manager and Gilmore waited in the rotunda of a hotel for the arrival of the visiting boxer. Soon a tough looking bird, wearing a cauliflower ear and accompanied by a chap resembling a manager, put in an appearance, furtively eyeing everybody in sight. They gave Gilmore the once over, then gazed at Krone, and they certainly gave him the twice over. They undoubtedly thought they had found the party they were looking for, but didn't stop. They hiked over to one of the clerks behind the counter and inquired of the clerk if he knew Gilmore or Krone.

"Sure, I do," answered the clerk, pointing in Krone's direction and pulling a little joke of his own. "That big fellow over there talking to the little chap is Gilmore. He's some fighter, too, believe us. Why, he simply sticks out one of his paws and they drop dead. Tough is no name for that Gilmore person."

The gent with the cauliflower listener and his manager was seen to ooze out of the hotel and Gilmore wondered why the negotiations for the match had fallen flat. There has been no further communication from the Michigan party.

White Knows His Business.

Charley White, the Chicago lightweight who is making great strides toward the championship goal, has his own ideas about how a fellow should conduct his battles in the ring. He doesn't accept advice from a lot of seconds when he is milling, for his manager, Nate Lewis, long ago found out that it was useless to try to direct the movements of his protege in the ring. The manager seldom offers any advice unless the other fellow is doing damage.

In one of White's fights not long ago he had his foe nearly out, but the other fellow, by sheer gameness, was able to keep his feet. He was wabbling from one side of the ring to the other, and was receiving so many cracks on the chin that he didn't know whether he was riding in an aeroplane or a submarine. He weathered out the bad round and managed to stay the limit.

LARNEY LICHTENSTEIN TELLS OF A SCRAPPER KNOCKING HIMSELF OUT WITH AN UPPERCUT

After the fight was over one of the scribes who had been at the ringside started to scold Charley for not finishing his man when he had him going.

"What do you mean, finish him?" answered White. "Let me tell you something that I know that you didn't know. I was in worse shape than my opponent in that round. He copped me with a hard body wallop that was a stinger. All you fellows at the ringside didn't see it land, but I felt it. All you saw was me pounding him on the jaw and him wabbling, but I'll bet I was more hurt in that round than my opponent."

Knocked Himself Out.

Larney Lichtenstein, manager of Jimmy Clabby, the Hammond middleweight, and Joe Welling, the Chicago lightweight, tells a story about a boxer who when engaged in a mixup with an opponent knocked himself out with a right uppercut. Here's the way Larney tells it:

"I went up into Wisconsin to see a boxing show last winter and in one of the preliminaries there appeared a young man who looked as if he was making his first appearance before a crowd. He appeared half scared to death when he climbed through the ropes, but the funniest thing about him was the length of his arms. They looked out of all proportion to the rest of his build.

"When the gong sounded he started swinging his arms like flails, but his most wonderful blow was a right uppercut. He let it go time and again and when he missed he was swinging so hard that the force of the movement raised him clear off his feet. In the third round, at close quarters, he let go with another right uppercut, and the punch, instead of connecting with his opponent's jaw, landed on his own. He didn't fall to the floor, but was out on his feet. He stuck until the gong sounded, but was unable to come up for the fourth round."

Larney declines to state whether he had been eating a rarebit.

ECLIPSE BLANKS MERCURY A. C., 4-0

Superb twirling by Criss shut out the Mercury A. C. team at Roseland yesterday, the Eclipse nine winning, 4 to 0. Criss allowed the visitors three hits that were so far apart that they produced no runs. Chester Sullivan, late of the Canadian league, was in his old position at third for Eclipse and got four bases on balls out of four times up. Score:

Cub Sydelights.

New York again today.

The National league teams will all be tied at .500 in another week, the way the race has been closing up lately.

Henry O'Day of Chicago was among those present. He was considerably interested in watching the team for which he used pitch defeat the team which he recently managed.

Merkle kept the Cubs from scoring by making a great stop of Robertson's throw to first after capturing Humphries' fly in the third. If the ball had gone through, Phelan could have completed the circuit.

Burns was the victim of tough luck in the eighth. He hit a hot one down the third base line, ordinarily good for a couple of corners. The ball struck third base squarely and stopped dead in front of the bag, enabling Phelan to pick it up and throw Burns out at first.

The "press" gate seemed to be most popular yesterday, a line extending half a block from the deadhead turnstile for fully half an hour before the game time, which would indicate that a considerable portion of yesterday's crowd was not of the revenue producing kind.

It looked a little like old times to see the Cub plant more than half full, but the resemblance was incomplete, as there used to be folks on the field every time Cubs and Giants got together under such ideal weather conditions. Conservative estimates reckoned the crowd at 10,000.

Phelan spiked one of Fletcher's feet sliding to second in the third inning. Fletcher stuck it out until Humphries flied, Good walked and Phelan stole third, then he asked permission to go to the clubhouse to have the wound inspected. The out was found to need attention, so Brainerd went in at short for the rest of the day.

Notes of the White Sox.

Red Faber is slated to hurl against the speed boys in the next combat.

Hap Felsch was able to partake of a bit of batting practice today and his ankle felt so good he expected to be in Monday's fray.

President Lannin of the Red Sox sent his big touring car to the White Sox hotel this morning and the Chicago scribes had two hours of motoring.

Red Juel, the Northwestern university hurler, who was tried out by the Sox in a batting practice at home just before the team left, still is a free agent. Manager Rowland liked the youngster, but decided to wait until he gets back and has another look before offering the lad a contract.

According to the Sox players, Speaker was hit in the head yesterday because the Red Sox were trying to steal the Chicago signs. Manager Carrigan, coaching at third, was peeking at Schalk, then tipping off the batter whether the sign was for a curve or a fast one. The White Sox got wise to it, and Schalk switched signs. Speaker thought one thing but it was the other and he was the victim.

WHALES SERIES ALL TERRIERS'

Charley tallied while Johnson threw out Farrell. Deal made a two base wild throw on a rap by Hendrix, and Fielder Jones decided Watson had enough for the day. Long Dave Davenport went to the mound and got Zeider on a roller.

Tinker injected Fisher and Wickland into the box score in the eighth and ninth, without paying results.

Terriers Score Twice.

Flack and Smith collaborated in handing the Terriers a two run lead in round four of the second game. Drake doubled and stayed on second, while Prendergast tossed out Borton. Flack made a two base muff of Miller's fly, and Drake scored. Smith's wild heave gave Hartley two bases on a roller, while Miller went home. Then Flack and Smith pulled a double play which ended the horror. Max took Deal's line smash and relayed to Smith, who tagged Hartley off second.

Further atrocities were perpetrated by the invaders in the sixth, when three more runs were chalked up against the floundering Whales. Vaughn singled and Drake sacrificed. Borton skied, then Farrell paved the way for three counters by letting Miller's hard drive carom off his shins. Vaughn scored on the boot, Hartley walked, and Deal filled the bases by beating a tap to Zeider. Johnson rolled down the first base line, and Prendergast let the ball roll in the hope that it would go foul. It stayed inside for a single, however, and both Miller and Hartley scored. When Crandall grounded out the bugs cheered derisively.

Wickland donated a run to St. Louis in the seventh. He let Tobin's single go through him, and Johnny reached third, whence he scored on Vaughn's fly to Flack.

NOTES OF THE WHALES.

Pittsburgh comes today for one game. It will be the last home appearance of the Whales until July 3.

Hendrix certainly hurled a wonderfully erratic game. Only one Terrier was left on base, and only three got to first aside from that woeful fifth spasm.

Baltimore saved the Tinkers from flopping into sixth place by trimming Brooklyn in ten innings. The Whales now have suffered six straight defeats.

Manager Tinker shifted his lineup again in a vain effort to shake the jinx that has been pursuing him. He put Zeider up to lead off and dropped Hanford to seventh place in the hitting list.

Tomorrow the Whales exhibit at Havana, Ill., the home town of Caruso Beck. On Tuesday they will be at Ottumwa, Ia., then they move to Kansas City for a five game series. From there they jump to Buffalo to open hostilities in the eastern theater of war.

Forty-eight women, each of whom was chosen as the most beautiful girl in her home state, will be guests of the management this afternoon. They were gathered together by a movie concern and are on their way to the coast. Charley Williams has promised to move the press box down among the fair ones for this one game.

bunted and Gardner was forced at third. Hooper was thrown out at first and Wagner ended the spasm with a long fly to Quinlan.

Brief Drives in a Run.

The Sox managed to push one man around in the fourth when Fournier began with a walk. J. Collins died on a fly ball. Fournier then made second on a short passed ball and moved to third on Weaver's out. In this pinch Brief made good with a single, sending the French boy home. Brief was nipped stealing, ending that round.

The Sox defense cracked in the fifth and Boston was handed two more runs. Hooper was safe on Weaver's low throw and Wagner made first when Russell messed his bunt. Gainer bunted and Hooper was forced at third. Lewis then raised a high foul back of third and Weaver muffed the ball. Lewis then doubled to left, sending Wagner home and Gainer to third. Hobby drove a fly to deep right and J. Collins made a wonderful running catch, but that made only two out, and Gainer ran in from third after the catch. Scott ended the fuss with a fly to Quinlan.

Sox Earn Another Tally.

E. Collins opened the sixth with a smash that carromed off Hobby's shins to the fence, and, by good leg work, Eddie made a triple of it. Fournier crashed a single to right, Eddie scoring. J. Collins popped out and Weaver died on a roller to Hobby, Fournier taking second. He was left there when Lewis made a great running catch of Brief's foul fly.

OLD ELM GOLF COURSE FINE JOB, DONE IN RECORD TIME

GOOD SCORE ON LINKS TEST OF PLAYER'S SKILL

Beauty and Practicability Combined in the Work of Colt and Ross.

BY FREDERICK DONAGHEY.

There's a lot of nonsense about Old Elm; and it consists entirely in what has been written about it since, less than two years ago, its founders announced their intention of building a course for the use of an organization whose membership would be held down to the 150 limit. That it would cost $1,500 to sit in became known by inadvertence.

That was enough for the writing comedians, who proceeded, without other basis of information, to explain that Old Elm as a club, would be made up of a group of carefully selected sybarites, bent upon upholstering, gold plating, and platinum inlaying the game of golf.

They were pictured as a body of spectacular spendthrifts no better than Pittsburghers with or New Yorkers without coin. [Than which nothing could be more so, to quote Rabindranath Tagore in one of his ante-knighthood moods.] The Babylonian note was always sounded in these killingly funny "write-ups."

Old Elm was to be, it was told, a sort of glorified roadhouse, walled in, and with a prohibitive tariff on the wine list—all in the spirit of "Let's keep the pikers out!"

The cut-ups reveled as they catalogued the new course—gold sand boxes with diamond dust for tee-making; champagne in the water buckets; bar service at every green; a new ball for every stroke; vintage Moselle running in the water hazards, and a demi-ford to carry the player from lie to lie.

Why Old Elm Was Founded.

Old stuff—all of it—made over into the terms of golf. And through it all ran abject awe of the money involved. That strain is always present—awe of the money when possession of money is the especial offense or provocation. Frank R. Walsh couldn't hide his awe of the money, even when he hectored his hardest at Crœsus on the witness stand; and Frank R. Walsh certainly proved himself to be at least as comic as the numerous writers-up of Old Elm.

The animating purpose of the men who formed the new club was precisely that of the man who, eager to make a quick journey and believing that the regular railway schedules can be improved upon, hires a special train to take him where he wishes to go. He couldn't do that, of course, unless he had the means; but his willingness to pay for what he wishes to have doesn't argue him a snob.

Comfort—Not Exclusiveness—Aim.

Old Elm was considered, founded, and built, and is conducted, in just that spirit. It represents a group of men who, unwilling to accommodate their hours to the exigencies of play on the crowded courses of other clubs, found a way out in creating a club in conditions which would permit them to accommodate the exigencies of play to their hours. They were moved not at all by a desire to be exclusive in their golf, and were moved altogether by a desire to be comfortable therein.

All of them—all of them, at least, whom I know—are in possession of a goat apiece; and this goat wanders ungrudingly and without hesitation to the sapient outsider who seeks to suggest that Old Elm rests on a foundation of caste or social aloofness.

Why Fee Was High.

As late as Sept. 1, 1913, what is now Old Elm was a plowed field. Barely nine months later—June 20, 1914—it was a finished golf course of the first class. And, as such, it was the debt-free property of the 150 members.

This brief excursion into data ought to explain why the fee was so large. Had it been possible to achieve the same results for less, then the fee had been less. The point was not to make the cost of joining a matter of "frightfulness," but to make in record time a fine, modern course for the use of 150 players, and no more.

Money was made to overcome, as far as possible, the handicap imposed by time. A golf architect of proved capacity, Colt, was brought from England to make the best possible layout of the acreage. The problem was worked out by Colt and Donald Ross. When Colt went home, his share of the task performed, Ross remained to superintend, to ornament, and beautify, and to see that science and loveliness should be combined.

Work Superbly Done.

The wonder of Old Elm has nothing to do with what it all cost, and all to do with the superb results. I am certain there is no record of a like feat in course building. Tees, fairways, and greens alike suggest that quality which, until recently, marked all the notable courses of the world—"age," meaning years of care, and cultivation, and intensive regard for condition.

Old Elm is, as a links, a matter of real golf. A well known course architect recently said to me: "I wish I could play over Old Elm with you: I'd show you a hundred ways of bettering it." His revisionary eagerness is, perhaps, explicable when I say that he was neither Colt nor Ross. This same builder has said the same thing, in effect, about pretty nearly every course in the middle west with which he has had no connection. He's the "You know me, Al!" fellow of golf.

However, he has managed, in the case of Old Elm, to have himself believed by so many that there is a definite belief among golfers who have not been there that what the founders obtained for their money was something less than a great course.

YOUNG LEADS IN MATURITY CLASH

First in Opening Skirmish for Golf Cup Despite His 77 Years.

BY J. G. DAVIS.

A. N. Young once more performed the seemingly paradoxical feat of leading the veteran golfers in the first skirmish of their annual battle for the Maturity cup at the Glen View club yesterday.

Mr. Young is 77 years old, and as he receives a stroke for every year beyond three score, his allowance is 17. This margin enabled him to lead the field of thirteen players with a total of 90. Capt. R. W. Hunt, who, according to estimates based on his handicap, is one year younger than Mr. Young, finished with a net of 94 and tied H. A. Christy, who had an allowance of 13. Thus it can be seen that the "old veterans" refused to be pushed out of the top positions by the "young veterans." Dr. Sanger Brown, aged 63, was the youngest of the contestants to get into the eligible eight.

Pairings and Qualifying Scores.

The pairings and qualifying scores follow:

H. A. Christy [107—13—94] vs. J. E. Tilt [112—11—101].

A. N. Young [107—17—90] vs. A. D. Langworthy [102—4—98].

R. C. Lake [105—8—97] vs. G. H. Moore [106—7—99].

Holmes Hoge [111—13—98] withdrew.

The first match round for the Frazier cup and a class handicap was arranged for the other members. In the latter event W. A. Viles was the winner in class A, with 88—13—75. In class B J. W. Cremin was the winner with 96—18—78, while in class C, E. M. Skinner, who had 102—20—82, took the prize.

BY KEENE GARDINER.

Crane's track athletes grabbed all the honors in sight at the Sportsmen's club carnival at White City yesterday. Juniors and seniors of the technical school landed first place in their respective track meets and others distinguished themselves in other sports. Crane marksmen captured first place in the rifle shoot, Crane kickers defeated Schurz High in a soccer match, and, since the battle for the indoor baseball championship was between two squads from Crane, that school likewise copped the prize at this branch of sport.

Almost every Crane athlete registered a few points in the track contests. Gindich won the fifty yard dash and 440 yard sprint, Peets was second in the 50 and 100 yard dashes, and McCauley won the 120 yard low hurdles brush.

Preps Almost Start Fight.

Much time was consumed in wrangling. The verdicts of the officials failed to please, and nearly half a dozen preps were disqualified because they mixed pugilism with the sport on the program. Peets of Crane and Luther of Senn almost started a real battle in the 220 yard dash.

Otis of Hyde Park walked in a winner in the mile run in 4:56. In the abbreviated dash Gindich beat out his partner, Peets, by a few inches.

In the 220 the entrants scrapped all the way around. Luther of Senn won, but those in charge said he had attempted to imitate Jess Willard on the turn, and he was scratched from the prize list and the points taken from Senn. Patten of Englewood, who finished second, was given first place. Diebert and Mendius of Lake View were awarded second and third berths. No one was given the fourth position medal.

Crane Also Wins Relay.

Crane's relay team gave a good account of itself, trouncing Lane, Senn, and Hyde Park in clever style. Crane led all the way.

Frank Paul, director of the Sokol Cechie, had his little charges go through a number of exercises before the track meet. Other exhibitions of the same sort were given. Summaries:

In the Wake of the News

Bill to Steve.

CHICAGO, June 5. Steve. Well Steve it looks like as if I was runing a Hotel or a amusement pk. or some thing onley in the stead of me makeing money off of it Im pain $25.00 dolars per mo. to run it with out no prophet. while we was still in Pittsburg yet Gussy come a way from her old mans where she was stain wile I was a way and come over to our flat to live and get things clened up on acct. of me going to be home al threw june so when I get home her bro. was in the parler a sleep on the lunge so I woke him up and ast him what was he doing there and he says Gussy had ast him to stay all night.

so then I ast Gussy weather he was teling the truth and she says yes and he had been loging there ever sence we left for Pittsburgh last Sun. because she felt saffer with he in the house because they might may be burglers come so I says yes if burglers come your bro. would holler so loud that the pollice would hear from him down to Cent. station. Then I ast her what had she been doing evenings and she says she had set in the bed rm. reading the paper on acct. of her brother bringing his girl to the flat and him and the girl set in the parler and held there hands and she dident want to undisterb them so I didens say nothing more and sure enough when I come home for supper the bro. and his girl was there and all ready at the dining rm. table so Gussy interduced me to the girl and if she was the onley girl in the world and they was runing a beaty contest the jurey couldent make up there mine who to give the prize to.

So we ett our supper and after supper the 2 of them went in to the parler so as they wouldent get a late start holding each others hands and left I and Gussy to wash the dishs up so I says to Gussy why dont you make them do the work a round here to pay for there bord and she says Cant you remmember when I and you was corting each other we dident want to be bothered with no work but all as we wanted was left a lone and I says yes but when you was corting me your old man had a higher girl to do the work so we dident have no reason to feel a shame of our self and she says yes but the higher girl dident pay for the groserys you ett at Pas house and bessides these 2 young 1s is to much in love to eat big meals and havent used a nichols worth of electrick lights all wk. so you cant say there costing us any thing. so I dident say no more until we was threw with the dishs and then Gussy ast me what I was going to do and I says I was tired out and going in to the parler and lay down a wile so she says if your tired you better go to bed and I says I wasent no baby that goes to bed at 7 P. M. but I wanted to lay down a wile and then go to bed latter when it got late enough so Gussy says I could lay down on the bed as good as on the lunge and I says whats the matter with the lunge is they pins in it and she says no but if I went in the parler the 2 lovvers couldent talk for the fear I would hear them and I says they wasent no danger of me lissning because I just got over bean sick and the Dr. told me to be carefull so then Gussy says I could go in and ask them if they was going out some wheres and if they says no then I couldent stay in there so I went in and told Fred they was a comicle pitcher going to be showed down to the theter at the cor. of Madison and he says thanks for the invatation but I and Gussy better go a lone because moveing pitchers hurt his girls eyes and I says if her eyes is easy hurt no wonder she dont want no lights turned on when your a round and I guess that was a hot 1 Steve but he dident pertend like he under stood it so I seen they wasent no use argueing so I and Gussy put on our hat and went down to the cor. and it cost me 20 c. for 2 tickets and I hadent no sooner set down in my seat and I was a sleep and I dident never waken up untill the pitcher was all over and then we went in Shaffers and had a couple drinks and then we come home and I wasent tired and sleepy no more but had to go to bed because Fred hadent tooken the girl home yet.

A fine game eh Steve when you pay $25.00 per mo. for a flat and cant use the parler and pay $7.00 for a lunge and then half to take your naps in a pitcher show where it costs $.10 per seat and the minut you get home you half to go to bed right a way weather your sleepy or not like you was a patent in a hospitable. I told Gussy I says I wasent going to stand for it and she says to keep stil and she would speak to Fred tonight and see if she couldent get him to go out some wheres and leave us have our parler so I says I would kepe stil and give her a chanct but if he dont take the hint Im going in the parler right after supper and if they want to do there billing and coon in the parler they will half to do it in the front of me with al the electrick lights turned on full Forse even if it does hurt the poor little things eyes.

NEW SPEEDWAY IS A MARVEL, SAYS CARLSON

BY REED L. PARKER.

William Carlson arrived in Chicago yesterday with three of the Maxwell racing cars that will compete in Chicago's first annual 500 mile race on June 19. After unloading his cars he drove one to the speedway in Maywood and spent the better part of an hour practicing on the turns, in which the banking is more abrupt than on any speedway in America. At the conclusion of his trials he announced that the speed in the race here would astound even the most ardent admirers of the track.

Looks for Record Speed.

"The speed will astonish the wisest heads in the game," said Carlson. "I should not be at all surprised if the average was better than ninety-five miles an hour providing the cars can stand that strain in a long grind. I had no idea the track was so fast."

After Carlson made his tests of the track Billy Chandler, who will drive one of the Duesenbergs in the race here, made several laps in one of the fastest Marmons owned by a local sportsman. Chandler took greater risks than Carlson and drove into one of the turns at a speed of eighty miles an hour. There was no skid in the rear wheels, which indicates the turns may be negotiated at close to 100 miles an hour without difficulty. Andy Burt had out a Stutz, but contented himself with a few slow laps.

Course Is Being Cleared.

A great deal of lumber and material is crowded on the track now. It is being rapidly removed, and by Tuesday active practice will start. About a thousand persons saw Carlson give the track its baptism.

VARIETY OF SPORTS IS SEEN AT THE SOX PARK.

A crowd of 5,000 watched the field carnival held yesterday afternoon at the White Sox ball park for the benefit of the House of the Good Shepherd. Those participating in the running events were sent out by the Chicago Athletic club. The Blues, captained by F. J. Zoellin, defeated the Reds, who had as their captain J. E. McDonnell, in the one mile medley race. The one mile relay was won by the team captained by Plant.

In the feature wrestling match Ilias Goverdacia defeated Marty Cutler in two straight falls. In the other bouts Jack Dribbs threw Kalla Pasha and Joe Wallace won from the Stockyards Lamb. Summary of meet:

The runners started from Oak Park and Evanston at 2 o'clock. A shot was fired in Oak Park and the sound was transmitted over the telephone to Evanston, starting the race. Hundreds of spectators saw the finish at Oak Park and Evanston.

Among those who ran for Oak Park were Hatch, Cowin, Hollenbeck, McCrea, and Witherspoon. The leaders for Evanston were Parker, Geier, Lee, Wood, Shelton, and Lane.

RECORD JUNE TIMES MADE.

San Francisco, Cal., June 5.—The exposition summer harness meet, which opened today, developed what were termed by followers of the sport the fastest June times ever made in this country. There were three events on the card. McClosky, owned by Alonzo McDonald of Indianapolis, won the 2:30 class trot with a best time of 2:09¾. The Beaver won the 2:07 pace, best time 2:05¼, and the 2:08 trot went to Peter McCormick, best time 2:09½. All the races were hard fought and the finishes close.

WILLIE BENTON WINS 2:20.

Willie Benton, 2:05¼, won the feature race, the 2:20 pace, in 2:20, at the Austin track yesterday. Billy L. was first in the free for all in 2:25¼. A polo game, put on as a feature, aroused great interest.

The most important deal of the year n high class north shore acres was the urchase by Mrs. Adolph J. Lichtstern rom William F. Dummer and others of tract of forty-two acres just south of Highland Park, along the lake, north of he North Shore Golf club, as the site or a handsome country home.

The property, which has 1,600 feet of rontage along the lake shore, and is ecognized as one of the most attractive ieces of acre property on the north hore, was for several years occupied by he Gad's Hill encampment, now located t Arden Shore, Lake Bluff.

It is covered with a handsome growth f timber and is traversed by several xceedingly picturesque ravines. Only a ominal consideration is given in the ransfer, but it is understood the revenue stamps on the document indicated consideration of $150,000.

Handsome Home Planned.

It is understood no plans have yet been made regarding the proposed improvements except that they will be of a high order, in keeping with the character f the property as well as the neighborhood, where several handsome country homes have been established, notably hose of Julius Rosenwald, Mrs. Leon Mandel, Charles A. Stonehill, and B. E. Bensinger.

It is understood an effort is to be made o enhance the natural beauties of the roperty by artistic landscaping under he direction of Jens Jensen. Title to he property was taken by Mrs. Lichtstern, while the negotiations in connection with the acquirement of the property were conducted by Murray & Terry.

Syndicate Gets Site.

In another interesting north shore transaction a syndicate headed by Henry E. Chandler, a business man of Evanston, closed the purchase from Frank M. Elliott of the property at the southwest corner of Chicago avenue and Main street, Evanston. Together with other purchases made recently, the syndicate has acquired a holding having 180 feet on Chicago avenue and 100 feet on Main street, improved mostly with three story brick stores, offices, and flats, for a reported total consideration of about $100,000. Mason & Smart were the brokers, while Joseph L. McNab attended to the legal details.

An important transaction in acres in he northwest part of the city, involving new subdivision to be known as the Colonial Gardens and extensive improvements thereon, has been closed and filed for record. The transaction, which was under the Torrens system, covers the ract of forty and one-third acres at the outheast corner of Foster avenue and Menard avenue, formerly North Fifty-ighth avenue, extended, which has been urchased by William Zelosky, the subdivider, from Lafayette Hopkins for a stated consideration of $60,500. It is stated the property has been in the Hopkins family for sixty years.

Mr. Zelosky plans to put in all street mprovements at a cost of about $60,000 nd subdivide the property into 295 lots with a thirty foot frontage. During the coming year he proposes to erect from eventy-five to 100 two flat buildings to ost about $5,000 each. The property is ow used for truck farm purposes.

MOTOR FIRM BUILDING SOLD

An interesting transaction in South Michigan avenue was the sale of the ee under the building at 2328 Michigan venue, 40x160 feet, by Garabed T. Pushman to Harris Whittemore of Naugatuck, Conn., for a reported consideration of 50,000. Mr. Pushman has taken back a ease for ninety-nine years on a net 5 per ent basis, he retaining the ownership of he building, which is a three story mercantile structure, occupied by the Cole Motor company. The property is subject o an incumbrance of $24,000, Mr. Whittemore paying $26,000 for the equity. W. A. Pridmore negotiated the sale.

Germany Awakened and United by Napoleon's Insult to a Beloved Queen

June 18 is the centenary of the Battle of Waterloo. That historic nightmare smashed Napoleon's dream of a world empire and at the same time gave impetus to that demand for a united Germany which began with Queen Louise's visit to Napoleon's camp at Tilsit.

Apropos the centenary, Herbert Caxton has written the story of Queen Louise and Napoleon, the latter part of which will appear next Sunday.

By Herbert Caxton.

GERMANY'S Joan of Arc was Queen Louise. Although she did not take the field at the head of her troops to relieve her country's distress, her sympathy with the movement for freedom from the Napoleonic yoke was one of the strongest factors which urged on the patriots previous to the war of liberation, and her beauty and her devotion to the national cause led to her typifying for her countrymen the sacred purpose for which they were struggling. That she earned the gratitude of her countrymen, that her services in their behalf were no less valuable than those of Stein, Scharnhorst, and other statesmen and soldiers of the movement, is established beyond a doubt, and it is something more than sentimental devotion which causes all Germans to look with such reverence upon the noble statue of this queen which graces the Thiergarten in Berlin.

There may be differences of opinion regarding the character of Frederick William III., that sport of fortune; his weakness and vacillation of action may be condoned or condemned; the position in which he found himself was certainly one which would have tried a greater monarch than he; but there is only one opinion of his queen, who never flinched in the most trying circumstances of those dark days, whose devotion to the national cause never wavered, who never deserted her husband's side, and who even went to the length of prostrating herself before the conqueror in the vain effort to save her distressed country.

Even in that dark hour at Tilsit when she saw herself, the representative of centuries of reigning dynasties, spurned by the Corsican adventurer, her supplications rejected and herself turned pitilessly away, she never lost hope that the seed of nationality implanted in her country by the very revolution which had brought Napoleon to power would yet germinate and flourish. She was not to live, poor, humiliated woman, to see its blossoming, but even at her untimely death she must have known that the torch of freedom still blazed and that it was to be handed on to those who would carry it until its light illumined the faces of the whole German people.

At any rate, so enshrined was she in the hearts of her countrymen that since the day at Tilsit she seemed to them to symbolize Germany itself crucified by the ambition of the ruthless French conqueror; to typify the humiliation in which Germans found themselves and to spur them on in a fight which almost any other people would have deemed hopeless.

Republicanism Gains Foothoid.

In the Napoleonic wars from 1804 on the position of Prussia was the most humiliating to its people of any of the states which opposed the French emperor. Austria, too, was humiliated, but at least it can be said that the people and their ruler were one in their policy and ideals. This was not the case with Prussia. Its king, Frederick William III., was an absolutist in principle and practice. He could not be otherwise, coming as he did from the Hohenzollern house which had ruled so many centuries.

On the other hand, a large proportion of the people had become thoroughly imbued with the spirit of the French revolution. That spirit had permeated every state of Europe for a time. Even Catherine the Great had encouraged republicanism at the Russian court, and Leopold II. of Austria was rightly suspected of having liberal ideas at one period of his reign. Republicanism had gained a foothold in Italy even under the Hapsburg and Bourbon monarchs, and in the lesser countries its revolutionary theories were also tolerated. The excesses of the Terror, however, had caused Catherine and other espousers of the new order of things to drop them in horror and to return to laws still more reactionary than those which had before existed. The pendulum had swung to the opposite extreme.

Among the Germans of central Europe, however, republicanism took a firm root. Restive for many generations under the control of drillmaster sovereigns, the impressionable and sentimental nature of the Germans, particularly those of the southern states, furnished excellent soil for the implanting of the seeds of the new freedom. The works of Rousseau and the French encyclopedists and many of the pamphleteers of the revolution had been translated and read not only by the learned classes but by many lesser folk. The university professors passed the word on to the students, and before the authorities awoke to the significance of the propaganda republicanism had a long start.

Leaders Advance New Theories.

German prose writers and poets took up the strain and many new theories of government were presented, modifying the French ideas and adapting them to what the Germans were supposed to need.

Goethe, the Schlegels, Schleiermacher, Tieck, Jean Paul, Novalis, Brentano, Grimm, Uhland, Von Arnim, and many lesser men, each in his own way, sometimes bluntly, at others with subtlety, now polemical, now poetical, helped to awaken the people, to touch their hearts and their minds, and to prepare them for the new day, the light of which was beginning to break.

In novels, in dramas, by essays, by poetry, by pamphlets these men set forth their ideals of political freedom. Many of them were straightforward statements which challenged the old order; others were veiled suggestions and even allegories were used.

Napoleon and Louise

Prussia, although slower than some of the other states in this movement, became inoculated, too, and some of its intellectual leaders boldly sounded the note. This note was that of nationalism. A constitution was demanded for the people, but above all the call was for all Germans to unite. The admirable unity of the French, with its astonishing results, seemed to prove to republicans everywhere that the people were capable of ruling successfully, and that a people really free should demand and receive a popular bill of rights.

Along with the spread of French customs, French drama, French literature, French political theories which were adopted in such widespread fashion, Napoleon had come to be accepted in many quarters as the representative of the new freedom. His martial successes, his erection of new republics and kingdoms, his new law code, and the fact that he was of common stock, one of the people, all seemed to bear out this conception of him. The specious character of the democracy of which he boasted of establishing, the fustian quality of the freedom he gave to the vanquished, the hollow mockery of his paper republics, this, that, and the other, his sinister ambition and ruthless nature were not perceived by these admirers. To them he was the embodiment of the spirit of that revolution which had opened the doors of the bastile, which had proclaimed liberty, equality, and fraternity not alone to Frenchmen but to the whole world, and which had destroyed the French Bourbons, the worst examples of feudal rulers then on any throne.

His thirst for conquest they did not attribute to evil ambition; he was bringing other Bourbons to bow the neck that their subjects might be free. Even his assumption of imperial titles and dignities they regarded as right and lawful. It was only the shrewd diplomats, the Metternichs and the Steins, who saw through his pretense, who recognized what his ambition was and to what it might lead unless he were stopped. They knew the type. He was of the same strain as the monarchs they served except that he was vastly more efficient and his mental powers were apparently on a par with his military genius.

But the admiration for him and for the ideas he was supposed to represent grew apace through Germany. The jealousies of the smaller states against Austria and Prussia caused even the rulers of Bavaria and Saxony openly to espouse the French, and in Prussia his admirers constantly augmented.

Frederick Bargains for Hanover.

Frederick William III., weak and badly advised, early flirted with the French emperor. Coveting Hanover, he refused the overtures of England, Sweden, and Russia in 1804 to join the coalition against France. He evidently considered that the peace of North Germany was guaranteed by the treaty of May 4. Advised by Hardenberg, his minister, he even entered into negotiations with Napoleon to annex Hanover. This was but the first of many double dealings in which he engaged, a course which was to bring Prussia to the lowest degradation as a state and to cover him with shame. He left his natural ally, Austria, to face the French alone. He deceived Francis II. and the czar then and afterward.

Bavaria, Wurttemberg, and Baden threw in their chances with Napoleon. Little Hesse-Darmstadt refused his demand for an alliance with him and cast its lot with Prussia as a neutral. Napoleon sent word to Frederick William that he would retain Cleves, on the right bank of the Rhine, as a buffer between France and Russia, and thus also control the fortress of Wesel, but that Hanover would be Prussia's reward for neutrality. In the war with Austria this neutrality was to be strictly observed by the French. The first thing Napoleon did was to violate it.

The Austrian army was overwhelmed at Ulm, where the incompetent Mack surrendered the greater part of his force. However, the subsequent engagements when Russia came to Austria's aid so confounded the French that Frederick William thought the time had come to turn his coat. The excuse offered was the violation of neutrality when the French marched through Anspach against their foes. But again Frederick William changed his mind. Instead of declaring war against Napoleon, he agreed at the czar's request to forward to Napoleon a demand that Napoleon respect the rights of Naples, Holland, and Switzerland and pay an indemnity to the king of Sardinia. If this demand was refused Prussia would join the allies against him. Frederick William was to furnish 180,000 troops to the coalition.

Even here Frederick William double crossed Austria and Russia, for he instructed his emissary to tell Napoleon that Prussia would remain friendly to him even if her demands were refused.

Prussia in Delicate Position.

What worth Napoleon gave to this assurance may be learned from what happened after the crushing blow he delivered to Austria and Russia at Austerlitz, a blow which robbed the former of 1,100 square miles of territory with 2,500,000 inhabitants and an annual revenue of 14,000,000 florins. Napoleon's alliance with and occupation of the South German states, together with his Austerlitz success, caused Frederick William's minister, Haugwitz, to enter into an offensive and defensive alliance with him. This put Prussia in a most delicate position. If she annexed Hanover, the price of her shame, England might attack her. The terms of the alliance also reduced her to mere vassalage to France. Haugwitz, however, advised the king not to ratify this and not to annex Hanover until England and France declared for peace. Prussian troops were to occupy it, however. Hope of this modified alliance being accepted by Napoleon vanished when he suddenly repudiated the Schönbrunn treaty of Dec. 15 and imposed harder terms upon Prussia than he had done before. He compelled her to cede Neufchatel and Valengin, to renounce claim to Ansbach, to take possession of Hanover, and to close North sea ports and Lübeck to England. This humiliating alliance was accepted and signed by the king without a protest.

England immediately blockaded the Elbe, Weser, and Ems, seized 300 Prussian vessels in British ports, and declared war. Sweden followed her example. Prussia's cup was nearly full when Napoleon in dickering with the Fox ministry offered Hanover back to England in 1806.

Frederick William did not hesitate at this point to conclude an agreement with the czar, who thereupon prevented the Swedes from carrying out their declaration of war on Prussia. He also repudiated a treaty his minister signed with Napoleon, and thus vanished Prussia's hope of peace. Besides taking possession of the fortress of Wesel Napoleon was coveting the rich lands near the duchy of Berg, besides Essen and Werden and the Brandenburg county of Mark. He announced his formation of the confederation of the Rhine.

These tidings, with the news that he was to lose Hanover to England, caused Frederick William great fear for his kingdom. It is said that he was seized with fits of melanchody and that he often wept for hours. He was learning to his great cost how much was the worth of Napoleon's word. He saw Wurzburg occupied by French troops and heard that he was to lose Westphalia and the Brandenberg Mark. By a supreme effort the king summoned his self-respect and mobilized his army.

Queen Heads War Party.

By this time a reaction against Napoleon had set in in Germany. His international aggression caused the scales to fall from the eyes of most of his admirers. They now began to see that he cared nothing, nor had ever cared for, republicanism, and that instead of being the apostle of liberty he was the firm supporter of the worst sort of absolutism. In the meanwhile, however, their mistaken espousal of his cause and the weakness and selfishness of their king had involved the country in a mesh of intrigue and double dealing which caused Prussia to be trusted by no one. The disgrace of the nation was deeply felt and a campaign of renunciation was begun. The pamphleteers who yesterday had been extolling Napoleon as the herald of freedom now vied with each other in denouncing him in the strongest terms. His ambition was denounced to the army by Fichte and Arndt, and Schleiermacher, Yelin, Palm, and others stirred the country to revolt against the Corsican. Palm, who published Yelin's "Germany in Her Deep Humiliation," was shot by Napoleon's orders Aug. 25, 1806. This act of the French maddened the Germans, who now flocked to the army at the king's command. Writing about it from Saxony, Frederick Gentz said: "The war will be a national war in the fullest sense of the word; within a short time all Germany will be involved in it."

The spirit of nationalism now ran higher than ever before, and the unity of the German people was in sight, although it had to suffer defeat and see further humiliation before the end was reached.

Such of the French adherents at Berlin as still existed had now to take a back seat. Queen Louise, who had always espoused the national cause and had unceasingly pleaded with the king to avoid the French alliance, headed the war party. Although the king loved her deeply, he had heretofore not taken her advice, preferring the acquiescence of his pliant ministers in his own mistaken and selfish policy. Now, however, the national movement had gained such impetus that he was carried along in the popular current and for almost the first time he found himself in accord with the people and their cause. All the leading soldiers and scholars were with him, as well as the most influential men and women of the court, nobles as well as commoners.

The army backed up the movement to a man, and what most impressed the king were the meetings of officers and men in which were expressed threats of mutiny when it was feared war would not be declared. These fears vanished when the king refused to demobilize the troops at Napoleon's demand and set Oct. 8 as the time for the withdrawal of the French troops from Prussia.

Napoleon Cheered in Berlin.

It must not be supposed that this weak man came to this decision bravely and without misgivings. Russian aid was doubtful. England at this stage was not to be counted on. Little was to be expected of any of the smaller German states. Frederick William had an army, but it lacked a leader. Meanwhile Napoleon's forces were marching east, and on Sept. 25 he himself was at Mainz planning his campaign. Jena followed. Outgeneraled, outplanned, outwitted, outfought, the Prussian army, lacking a competent commander or thought out design, was cut to pieces. The old Brunswick who was in command fell, and Hohenlohe and Blücher surrendered.

Afterwards the disgrace of the Germans seemed complete when the fortresses of Erfurt, of Magdeburg, Cüstrin, and Stettin were surrendered without resistance. But worse was to follow, for when Napoleon entered Berlin in triumph the populace actually cheered him! He went to the grave of Frederick the Great, stole that warrior's sword and staff, and sent them to Paris.

Prussia was once more tasting the bitter fruit of the defeat brought on by intrigue, selfishness, and obstinacy. Save for a few forts in Silesia and on the Baltic and about 15,000 troops her army no longer existed. The conqueror was in Berlin heaping further insults on the king. The patriots were discouraged, the "French party" exultant.

The king abased himself before Napoleon, but his offers were rejected. The conqueror had harder terms to propose. He demanded the territory on the left of the Elbe as far as Magdeburg, the Altmark, and 100,000,000 francs indemnity. Germany must also allow Saxony and the states beyond the Elbe to join the Confederation of the Rhine. Berlin was not to be evacuated until the French, Spanish, and Dutch colonies were restored, and even then the invaders were to occupy the country to the river Bug, including eight fortresses.

This was too much for the king, who rejected the terms. Napoleon ignored this and pressed on to meet the Russians. After this campaign with its varying results the celebrated meeting at Tilsit took place between the czar, Napoleon, and the king of Prussia, although the latter made but a poor showing in the negotiations. It was here that Alexander and Frederick William agreed to send for the latter's queen to see if she could melt the heart of the conqueror and induce him to soften the harsh terms he had imposed upon her country.

Louise Pleads Prussia's Cause.

This act was quite in keeping with the selfish character of the king. Incapable of asserting his self-respect and of facing down Napoleon, he delegated the humiliating duty of cajolery to his beautiful queen, causing her to abase herself before a man in whose presence no pure woman was safe.

It is related that when she received the summons to go to Tilsit at once she burst into tears and exclaimed that this was the hardest task which could be imposed upon her. Advised by Hardenberg and Kalkreuth to beg for Magdeburg, Silesia, and Westphalia, she set forth for her Calvary. She arrived the first week in July and was invited by Napoleon to be his guest.

In spite of all her fervor and tact she could elicit nothing from him but frivolous talk and compliments. Whenever she broached the subject of her visit, which he, of course, well knew, he parried her talk and gave evasive answers. She pleaded with him tearfully, appealed to what should have been his best emotions as far as her self-respect and dignity would allow. She asked especially that Magdeburg be left to Prussia, but Napoleon said with ill timed mirth, "No, no; Magdeburg is worth a hundred queens." He afterwards confessed that the situation became so embarrassing that he might have capitulated, but at that moment the blundering Frederick William came into the room, saying the wrong thing, of course, and Napoleon was saved.

Queen Louise had two other interviews with him, but the psychological moment had passed. Napoleon, polite but firm, resisted her pleadings, and he handed her into her carriage a defeated and heartbroken ambassadress.

"Indeed, your majesty," he had said, "I lament that so it must be; it is my evil destiny."

And she replied: "Sire, I have been cruelly deceived."

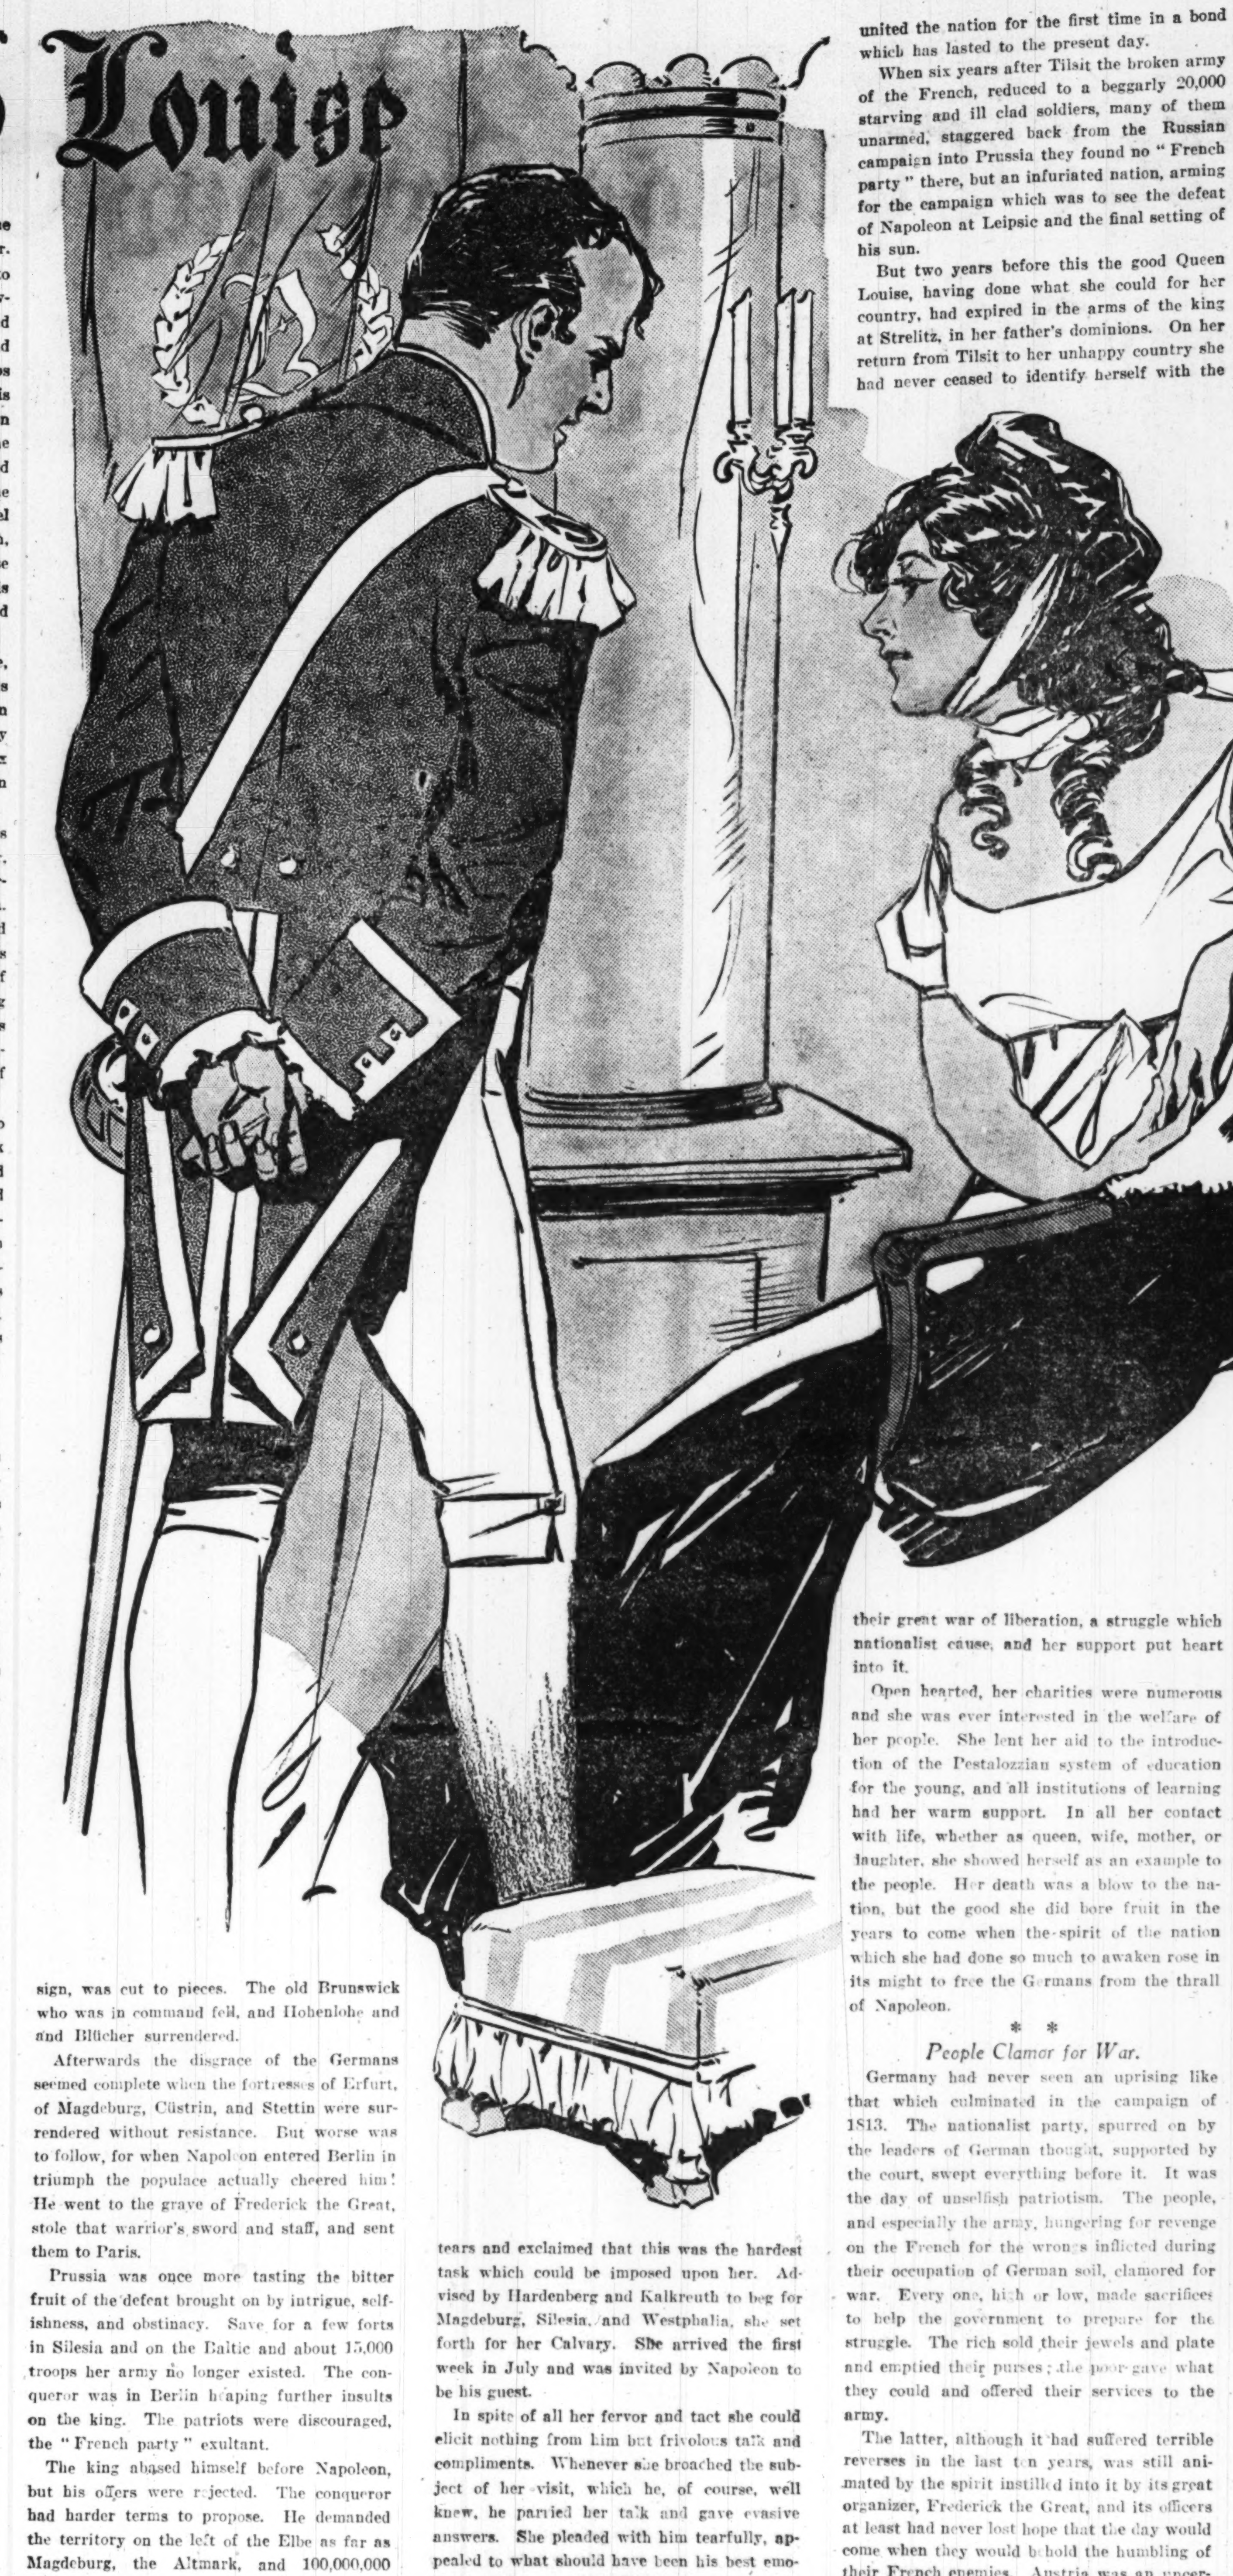
Beginning of German Unity.

This decision of Napoleon's, whether it was the result of his evil destiny or not, was a grave mistake.

Had he conciliated Prussia at this time the fate which overtook him later might have been postponed if not averted entirely, for his rebuff to their beautiful queen steeled the hearts of the Prussians and other Germans at home for their great war of liberation, a struggle which united the nation for the first time in a bond which has lasted to the present day.

When six years after Tilsit the broken army of the French, reduced to a beggarly 20,000 starving and ill clad soldiers, many of them unarmed, staggered back from the Russian campaign into Prussia they found no "French party" there, but an infuriated nation, arming for the campaign which was to see the defeat of Napoleon at Leipsic and the final setting of his sun.

But two years before this the good Queen Louise, having done what she could for her country, had expired in the arms of the king at Strelitz, in her father's dominions. On her return from Tilsit to her unhappy country she had never ceased to identify herself with the nationalist cause, and her support put heart into it.



Open hearted, her charities were numerous and she was ever interested in the welfare of her people. She lent her aid to the introduction of the Pestalozzian system of education for the young, and all institutions of learning had her warm support. In all her contact with life, whether as queen, wife, mother, or daughter, she showed herself as an example to the people. Her death was a blow to the nation, but the good she did bore fruit in the years to come when the spirit of the nation which she had done so much to awaken rose in its might to free the Germans from the thrall of Napoleon.

People Clamor for War.

Germany had never seen an uprising like that which culminated in the campaign of 1813. The nationalist party, spurred on by the leaders of German thought, supported by the court, swept everything before it. It was the day of unselfish patriotism. The people, and especially the army, hungering for revenge on the French for the wrongs inflicted during their occupation of German soil, clamored for war. Every one, high or low, made sacrifices to help the government to prepare for the struggle. The rich sold their jewels and plate and emptied their purses; the poor gave what they could and offered their services to the army.

The latter, although it had suffered terrible reverses in the last ten years, was still animated by the spirit instilled into it by its great organizer, Frederick the Great, and its officers at least had never lost hope that the day would come when they would behold the humbling of their French enemies. Austria was an uncertain ally, but such was the spirit of the Prussian army that even had not Metternich reluctantly joined the allies at last it is quite possible that the Prussians and Russians without Austrian aid would have attempted the downfall of Napoleon.

With remarkable speed the Prussian army of liberation was organized under Yorck, Blücher, and other seasoned and able commanders. The king alone wavered, as he always did. Had Haugwitz been in the ascendency among his counselors instead of Hardenberg it is doubtful if he would have given his consent even to the mobilization, to say nothing of actually declaring war. But Haugwitz was no longer there to tell him how to temporize and to carry water on both shoulders. Popular clamor had caused his retirement, and in his place was Hardenberg, idolized by the nation not only for his patriotism but because that patriotism had caused him to earn the hatred of Napoleon.

Frederick William passed through his usual agony of hesitation, and finally under compulsion of popular pressure and the advice of his ministers he gave a reluctant consent. It is as well for him that he did so, for it is not improbable that had he not done so the dynasty would have been imperiled, so determined was the nation to carry out its object.

The scattered remains of the French army were either driven out of the country or besieged in the few fortresses which they still held in Prussia. French influence vanished from the country and Germanism became almost a cult with the patriots.

Allies Retreat Before French.

So severe had the wars of the past been upon upon the Prussians and Russians that even by April, 1813, with their utmost efforts they could only muster about 200,000 men. Napoleon had brought an equal force to Erfurt. By his superb strategy he overcame the allies on the celebrated field of Lützen and compelled their retreat. Almost immediately after occurred the battle of Bautzen, and again the allies retreated without giving him the victory he desired. The French line by this time was so long and thin that it alarmed Napoleon, who also began to fear the accession of the Austrians to his enemies.

He called for a six weeks' truce. Before this expired he learned that his old marshal, Bernadotte, now crown prince of Sweden and his enemy, had a force of over 100,000 men between the French position and Berlin, which city Napoleon had designed to attack. Also that Blücher with 95,000 men was at Breslau and the Austrians under Schwarzenberg had joined a Russian force, the whole numbering 180,000, across in Bohemia.

This last force he attacked Aug. 27 and defeated. Schwarzenberg, however, managed to withdraw his army in fair order, and for some unaccountable reason the French did not follow up their victory promptly. When they did give chase they were in such inadequate numbers that the pursued turned and overwhelmed them. Almost at the same time Blücher, old "Marshal Forwards," performed the same service to Oudinot and Macdonald near Berlin and the Katzbach.

At this Napoleon lost his head almost for the first time. He seemed at sea and his subsequent movements laid his forces open to attacks delivered by Blücher and Schwarzenberg, both of whom retired their armies afterward without giving him a chance to retaliate. Winter was rapidly coming on and his men were already suffering for want of food and clothing, while they were constantly being harassed by the enemy, who was approaching nearer and nearer each day.

Oct. 15 Napoleon was ready for battle at Leipsic. For three days there was desultory fighting without a decisive advantage on either side. Then Bernadotte, who had retreated, came up and closed the ring about his old commander. The same day the Saxons and Bavarians deserted the French and went over to the allies. Germany was at last united against Napoleon. He ordered a retreat and by sheer bravery the French broke through the line, completely wiping out the particular force in their way. Nov. 5 they reached Mainz, and crossed the Rhine, never to return.

Germany Rid of Foreign Influence.

Such was the "battle of nations," the success of which marked the downfall of French domination in Germany and saw the sun rise on a people never more to be enslaved by foreign power. Prussia and the adjacent states had yet to free themselves from the intriguing diplomacy of Metternich in his attempts to maintain Austrian ascendancy in southern Germany. They had yet to settle many differences among themselves and to form a lasting union for defense. Prussia had even yet by force of arms to deprive Austria once and for all of the right to dictate to the other German states, but that was a task of the future, and it was left to men yet unborn to accomplish.

The history of the Germans during the first twelve years of the nineteenth century is not politically a happy one. They were not a united people. They had a weak and unworthy king. Their interests were often diverse. Their diplomacy was often deplorable. Their social conditions left much to be desired, but they had nevertheless absorbed enough of the best which the French revolution taught, and this leaven never ceased to work within their spirits. Under the most adverse circumstances they nourished it and its influence never died out in the darkest days of their humiliation.

This innate desire for liberty was dearer to them than life itself, and when the pressure of Napoleon's ruthless ambition had apparently crushed them forever, the whole nation, noble and peasant, rose en masse and drove him and his influence forever from the land.

In this fight for freedom no one was more devotedly patriotic, no one actuated by a greater singleness of purpose, than Queen Louise, who even at this day is held up as all that a queen and a mother should be.

HIS LETTERS

This is the fourth of a series of letters written by a moving picture actor to his lawyer friend in Chicago, procured under promise that the author's incognito would be preserved.

The sketches are NOT photographs.

DEAR BOBS: You remember the little verse that Scotch chap wrote about would some power the giftie gie him to see himself as others see him—or words to that effect? Well, the giftie was gi' me the other night and, betwixt us, I don't think much of the giftie.

As I explained to you in my first letter, the principal reason for my having been made into a motion picture actor was that I bore a strange and pathetic resemblance to the star who deserted in the midst of a serial photoplay. My arrival on the scene was regarded in the light of a miracle and I was persuaded to start in where Star left off. I did—and starring under false colors is what I have been doing mostly. However, I have consented to play in several little things known as "one reelers," in which I have featured principally a chef or the man God forgot—or something equally inspiring. In one of these little teasers I was, however, given what I considered a good chance to do some fine acting. I was cast as a sad souled crook; sandpapered fingers and a heart of gold. You understand. And the girl—some girl, Bobs, by the way—saw that there was more to me than the police had ever dreamed of and married me. Get the idea?

Well, I worked to beat the band in that thing. I endeavored to develop subtlety—to arouse sympathy even while I was perpetrating my darkest acts, and while my director did not leap upon my neck and proclaim me the world's greatest screen discovery, he did remark: "I really believe there's hope for you, Carney," which is, I may say, some little concession on the part of the director.

"A sad-souled crook with a heart of gold."

Strange as it may seem, Bobs, I had never seen myself on the screen. An overwhelming shyness gnawed at my vitals any time I was requested to go to the projecting room and watch myself perform a la my predecessor who did the Arab act. An hundred excuses would leap to my quivering lips and I would be numbered among the missing every single time.

But I made up my mind I was too good to pass up in this little one reeler. And in the scenery of my dressing room I confided to my grease paint that I would watch the advertisements and when I saw "A Craftman's Secret" advertised I would sneak away all by my lonesome, steal into a theater, and in the darkness and oblivion of a rear seat see myself with the eyes of my fellow men and sister women.

Not to any one did I breathe a word of my intention. I kept it carefully under my hat, and when discovered by any one in profound study of the motion picture advertisements yawned impolitely and languidly turned the page.

At last one morning "A Craftman's Secret" grinned out at me in bold, black type. "A startling one reel drama!" bragged the "ad," and added in smaller letters "featuring James Carney." (Muh, Bobs—Muh!)

Say, I thought night would never come! I was as fussed over my contemplated excursion to that movie theater as any bride ever was over her wedding journey. I wondered what I should wear. Of course, it didn't really matter, but in case any one should see and—ahem—recognize me as the brilliant young actor whose masterly work had just wrung tears from thrilling hearts—I know you cry out of your eyes—I'm merely using poetic license—I wanted to be tastefully attired, and appropriately. Dark blue with just a touch of vivid color in my tie and socks, etc. Yes, that would be the thing! I took an hour off and acquired the socks and the tie. I wanted to carry a cane so I'd have something to do with my hands in case they should insist on a speech.

Well, at last the night came. I ate a hurried dinner, but it was still so early after I had finished eating that I thought I'd better go up to the room and give myself the O. O. again. I did; decided my tie was too loud—also my sox, and a cane was not to be heard of. Suppose I'd drop it and right in the midst of a witty remark it would fall clattering to the floor to bump the head of a child on the way, said child setting up a scream—heavens no! I would not carry a cane under any circumstances! Then I had to change my socks because they didn't match my tie. By that time it was time to go.

My hand trembled so I could hardly gather up my change after paying for my ticket, seeing which an observing youngster of some five summers remarked to his mother, who stood awaiting my removal from the window, "Look, ma-ma, how him fingerth stutterth!" which naive observation caused me to drop a nickel in the little open mouth. I left him choking. I don't know whether he strangled or not and don't care. Godhepme! Come to think of it, he sat near me all during the show and chewed something, it may have been my nickel, but I have not taken human life yet.

War pictures and educational films revealed themselves to me one after the other. Would "The Craftman's Secret" never come:

O yes! It would! It did! And—Jimmie was there not with his hair in a braid but in more darnfool poses and expressions and impossible situations. Say, Bobs, gee—it was fierce!

Two girls near me kept jabbering.

"What's his name?"

"Carney."

"Mm! Kinda good lookin', ain't he?"

"Yea—but he can't act! He'd oughta pant when he kisses her."

"Uh-hu. Bushwick pants grand, don't he? O, they all have to go some to keep up with Bushwick, don't they?"

From another direction came this choice bit:

"What makes him have that cow-like look when he's supposed to be so desperate?"

"He can't help the way he's made, can he?"

Still more from behind me:

"O, John, no man with such a kind smile could be a crook, couldee?"

"The pen is full of kind smiles, kiddo."

Many more things were said which I shall not tell you. Suffice to say that I did not wait for the lights to go on. I would not risk its chance of recognition. I sneaked out and walked rapidly away, keeping close to the buildings.

Listen, Bobs, do something for me. If "A Craftman's Secret" comes to Chicago look it up and then write and tell me the truth. Am I as rotten as some people think I am? I can't believe it! Yours dejectedly, JIM.

ALICE HOLLISTER

MAY I present Miss Alice Hollister of the Kalem Company? Come to think of it, however, she's been presented to you many times and in many different ways—and you've pretty well liked her in all of them, haven't you? Recently, however, she has essayed adventuress roles with such success that she is known to many of her admirers as "the vampire actress." Miss Hollister is an American of French parentage, and was born in Worcester, Mass. Before going into pictures she lived at home and declares she had "no occupation other than helping make home comfy." Some five years ago, however, she made up her mind that pictures were her forte and she went to work for the Kalem company—with which concern she has been ever since. In height Miss Hollister is five feet four inches. She has black hair and brown eyes and weighs 125 pounds. Her hobbies are fishing, embroidery, and automobiling. Her interests, however, are varied. To quote her: "I dance, I read—and I am interested in suffrage. And I do not believe in official censorship."

Answers to Movie Fans.

Owing to the number of queries received and the somewhat limited space allowed for answers, it is not always possible to print information as rapidly as the writers desire, as the letters must be answered in turn. All, however, receive careful attention.

When stamped and addressed envelopes are inclosed Miss Tinee will be glad to answer personally any letters addressed to her. Address all queries to this department to Miss Tinee, in care of this paper.

Questions that have been answered will receive a reply only when a stamped and addressed envelope is sent.

Questions considered as ridiculous will not be answered.

Questions regarding relationship will be answered to the best of our knowledge, but we are not responsible if mistakes are made.

If you are interested in photo-play writing send a stamped and self-addressed envelope to this department for the information you desire.

CHARLOTTE K.: So far as I know, Earle Williams travels under his own name. Yes, John Bunny is dead. Yes, I think Miriam Nesbit is lovely. Send in just as many votes as you like, lady. Every single vote counts as one, you know.

ANXIOUS: I'm sorry, but I'm afraid "The Diamond from the Sky" cannot be changed to another part of the paper. There are a number of reasons why it must be just where it is.

CONTESTANT N. L.: Twenty-five dollars a reel is the "average market price." If you have not received an offer as yet from the American company I think you will probably not get one and might just as well submit your manuscript somewhere else.

INQUISITIVE: If you think you're a "punk penman" you should just see some of my chirography! If by chance you do, some day, please don't try to read my character by it. I'm much, much nicer than my writing indicates. Wallace Reid is still with the Mutual company. Florence Lawrence was taking a vacation the last I heard. You're welcome.

E. R. AND C. H.: You must not jump at conclusions. Your votes came in and were counted—but—somebody else received more votes than did the man you voted for. Each week the votes are counted and thrown away. Try again.

VIOLET: I think you're mistaken as to the name of the young woman who jumped from the Brooklyn bridge. Her name, as I understand it, is Constance Bennett. She jumped from the Williamsburg branch. I know that at the time she did this she was 19 years of age, but I have no further information about her. You're welcome.

ANXIOUS BLUE EYES: Since you think you could write scenarios if you knew how, I'd advise you to learn by sending a stamped and self-addressed envelope to me for some printed material I have on the subject. Arnold Daly probably would send you his picture if you wrote asking for it and inclosing a quarter. I don't know a single thing about his personal affairs. I'm afraid you'll have to follow the pictures to see who marries who. No'm, I'm not angry. Pleased.

INSPIRED: If you'll send a stamped and self-addressed envelope I'll be delighted to send you the printed material I have on scenario writing and a list of firms that accept scenarios. I'm sure you'll find it helpful.

B. B. B.: In "The Virginian" Winifred Kingston took the part of Molly. No trouble at all.

ZELDA: Max Figman and Lolita Robertson are married. They went into pictures quite recently. Mary Fuller is with the Universal.

JACK: No!

Voice of the Fan

Here's to that brilliant beauty,
Who on the screen does her duty;
She is small, a mite you could say;
But she is dear as any star of today;
She plays with a man who is handsome and tall,
Who loves her as much as do we all.

She lives in the south, far away,
But I hope I shall see her in real life some day.
She is just like a loving friend to me,
And is as dear as any star could be.
So here's to Miss Sisson, the star of the screen,
Who is loved by all where e'er she is seen.

EVA AUSTIN.

Mary Pickford, I select as my heroine, so fair,
She's never been duplicated in the land, here or anywhere.
She hath charming and winning ways, galore,
And, no doubt, those that choose her are many more.

She may be besieged with daring and gallant suitors,
Until she becomes intolerably bored,
However, when it's discovered she's been betrothed,
They meekly turn away in a state forlorn.

She has won multitudinous crowds to her favor,
Appearing in positions where it was expected she'd quavor,
But never was it known that she ever has flinched
In any position she ever played in.

And, alas! Poor suitors still cling to their routes,
For they have become captivated by her magnificent charm.
They even would serve as her little dog, so routy,
And lie at her door, like a shepherd, down on the farm.

These lines partly express the reasons why I think Mary Pickford should have "The Frame of Public Favor." These lines may not be deserving of a corner on your "Right Off the Reel" page. J. R.

Dear Miss Tinee: We are two movie fans and wish to express our appreciation of the splendid work of Ethel Clayton and Joseph Kaufman. We have seen them in many pictures and have never been disappointed or able to criticise them in any way. They are both splendid actors and are always perfectly adapted to whatever part they may take. As lovers they are ideal and we can say, along with many other fans, Kaufman is supreme in the art of love making. Ethel Clayton is a beautiful girl and Kaufman is perfect, every inch, so what more can we look for? I am sure there are many fans who will be glad to see this long overdue praise printed of these movie actors. The picture, "The Blessed Miracle," in which they starred, was, in my mind, the best picture ever released by any company.

ARRANGEMENTS ARE MADE FOR THE LOAN OF THE DIAMOND

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

A bitter feud has existed betwen Col. Arthur Stanley and his cousin, Judge Lamar Stanley. The feud has been engendered in family jealousy over an heirloom, "the diamond from the sky," that was found in a fallen meteor by an adventurer ancestor. The feud is further augmented by the fact that the succession to the Stanley earldom in England may come to an American Stanley. When a daughter is born to Col. Stanley of the eldest branch of the Stanleys in America, and the mother of the child dies at its birth, the chagrined colonel buys a new born gypsy boy and substitutes him as heir. Three years later the gypsy mother, having had no part in this bargain, steals the colonel's little daughter, being reared in secret, and leaves her own son undetected as the rightful heir of Stanley hall in Virginia, "the diamond from the sky," and the prospective heir to the earldom in England. The gypsy mother has also obtained possession of "the diamond from the sky" and a document that holds the Stanley secret of the false heir. She rears the little girl, Esther Stanley, as her own, and grows to love her. When Esther is grown a beautiful young girl, Hagar, now gypsy queen, returns to Virginia with her, hoping she may right the wrong that has been done her by the Stanleys and the wrong she has done the Stanleys in turn. She has a wild plan that Dr. Lee, the late Col. Stanley's old friend, may now adopt Esther, as originally intended. Her hope also is that her son, the supposed Arthur Stanley II., may fall in love with Esther, and thus the innocent girl may become by marriage what she is by birth—mistress of Stanley hall. In all this Hagar, the gypsy queen, sees a fulfillment of all her hopes—her own son master of Stanley hall, possessor of "the diamond from the sky," presumptive heir to a proud English title, and also the sweet girl, Esther, cheated of her birthright, sharing all this good fortune and great honor. Dr. Lee readily agrees to adopt Esther, but also demands that Hagar turn over to his custody "the diamond from the sky." Dr. Lee also informs Hagar that her son, the supposed Arthur Stanley II., is a profligate and not worthy of Esther. But Hagar hopes for the best and with her people departs. Arthur Stanley does fall in love with Esther, and so does his boon companion, Blair Stanley, the cousin who would be the rightful male heir of Stanley were the Stanley secret known. Blair, in endeavoring to steal the diamond from Dr. Lee, causes the death of the old doctor. In escaping from the doctor's house at midnight with the diamond Blair encounters Arthur, who has come to serenade Esther. To avoid the suspicious connection that would be established between his presence and the doctor's death, Blair insultingly infers to Arthur that he has just left Esther's room. Arthur forces him to fight a duel at close quarters, and although Blair treacherously attempts to fire before the signal, Arthur is the victor and tumbles Blair into an open grave. Before he goes, however, he searches Blair and finds on his breast "the diamond from the sky," which he takes. Blair is only stunned, and when he gains consciousness he makes an effort, with the connivance of his mother, to place the blame for the murder of Dr. Lee upon Arthur. The sheriff attempts to take Arthur into custody on suspicion of the murder, but after a thrilling drive in a high powered motor car he eludes his pursuers, only to be thrown from his car into the river after a tragic smashup. His body is last seen floating down the river. Arthur is taken from the river and revived by Hagar, who reveals to him his true identity and upbraids him for his conduct. He goes to Richmond, where, while out of funds, he determines to pawn the diamond from the sky. Blair, too, is in Richmond gambling and living riotously, and he, too, is forced to visit the pawnshop. The two meet and after explanations agree to stand by each other. At a ball to which Blair has invited Arthur and at which a supposed New York society belle is the guest of honor, Blair and Arthur are stunned to find that "the diamond from the sky" gleams upon the breast of the New York visitor. The fair visitor is in reality an adventuress who has secured the loan of the diamond for the evening through the notorious gambler, in whose dive Blair has lost his money. Hagar attends the ball as a fortune teller, accompanied by Luke Lovell. While Hagar is telling the New York "belle's" fortune the latter is choked by a hand from behind the curtains and "the diamond from the sky" is snatched from her breast.

CHAPTER V.

"FOR THE SAKE OF A FALSE FRIEND."

HAGAR'S hands almost touched the diamond from the sky as she clutched at it over the shoulder of Vivian Marston as it disappeared through the velvet window curtains clinched in a strong, dark fist.

As for Vivian Marston, she caught her breath with a great gulping sob, and then she shrieked in wild alarm and pain, for the hands that had so mysteriously throttled her fair neck and snatched from her breast the great borrowed jewel had been no gentle ones.

In an instant the ballroom was in an uproar, and a frightened flunky had run at the first wild report there had been a jewel robbery to the front doorway and had blown three long, fright quavering blasts upon a police whistle.

Outside the Randolph mansion Luke Lovell was scuttling through the darkness with the diamond from the sky.

Idling on the outside and waiting for his mistress, Hagar, the gypsy queen, and Esther, Luke had glanced through the low window only to have his gaze fall upon the blazing jewel.

Never overscrupulous, he always remembered the whispered gypsy gossip that Matt Harding, the dead husband of Hagar, had made his fortune, now possessed by Hagar, by some bold coup among the wealthy gentle folks, a coup of great daring, but one the exact way and why of which no living gypsy now, save Hagar, knew.

But here, thought the desperate Luke, was his chance for fortune. He was quick to follow out the evil impulse. The deed was easy, and he, another poor gypsy, had a fortune in his grasp; perhaps by such a chance as the dead Matt Harding had taken advantage of.

He gained the street with the wild idea to hide the diamond in the first safe nook or cranny, and then to return as quickly as he could to bear the brunt of suspicion and of search.

Inside the ballroom all was confusion and alarm; women screamed and fainted, and the men, foremost among them Arthur and Blair, soon surrounded the hysterical Vivian Marston, listening to her broken story of being strangled and robbed by two strong hands belonging to an unseen thug in the twinkling of an eye.

On the doorstep the frightened flunky blew the police whistle again and again.

One policeman who had been at the portals for some time, but had sauntered away to give an eye to his beat, was heard returning with rapid footsteps in the dark. Far off, in the other direction, another policeman could be heard rapidly approaching and sounding his night stick on the sidewalk as he came.

Luke saw the gleam of brass buttons under a gas lamp not a hundred yards away; he turned, his booty clasped in his strong, bronzed right hand, to flee in the opposite direction. But coming in this direction was the other accursed policeman, making the night hideous with the pounding of his club on the pavement. Luke realized he was trapped. To throw the diamond into the street might mean its finding and his subsequent conviction for its theft. His hand struck something cold. It was an iron mail box on a lamp past. Beneath the lamp post was a circle of shade that masked his action. Quick as thought he dropped the jewel, with its locket and chain, into the mail box and ran toward the policeman pounding the sidewalk, crying excitedly: "He crossed over here and went through that hedge and lawn!"

"O, no, he didn't," said the puffing policeman, giving the sinister looking Luke a glance of quick suspicion. "He ran right into my arms. I got him, Brady!" he added to the other policeman, who now drew near.

Together they haled the protesting Luke to the portals of the Randolph mansion on the front street, and they dragged him in among the excited guests of the ball.

Here Luke told his story with many vehement asseverations as to his own honesty. He said he had strolled to the corner of the house from the front doorstep, and had been astounded to see a tall, dark man leap from the ground floor balcony of a side window, dart across the street and through a hedge and across the lawn on the opposite side, and disappear in the dark. He was making after this fleeing marauder when the policemen grabbed him, he added sullenly.

Hagar vouched for her man and Luke insisted on being searched. This being only fair, the search was made and the missing jewel was not found. But the police insisted on holding the gypsy and he was being led away when, as fate would have it, an even greater contretemps was to occur, an even more unenviable notoriety was to attend Richmond's most fashionable function, Mrs. Burton Randolph's annual ball.

Sheriff Sam Swain of Fairfax appeared in the doorway, accompanied by Detective Tom Blake.

"I want Arthur Stanley over there for the murder of Dr. Henry Lee of Fairfax!" cried the sheriff.

The face of Blair Stanley blanched. "Remember your promise, Arthur," he whispered. "You cannot go to the gallows for me. You must tell the truth if you are tried. But you can save me if you escape."

Arthur nodded and broke loose from the grasp of Sheriff Swain. Blair fought as best he could to aid his supposed cousin, but his now hysterical relative, the chagrined Mrs. Randolph, threw her arms wildly about him and so held and hampered him as she shrieked, "They will kill you, Blair!" that he could do but little. Then, too, Vivian Marston added her efforts to restrain him. It was no time for Hagar to speak. She realized that it were better that Arthur escape, if he could, even under the onus of unjust suspicion.

One of the policemen released his hold on Luke Lovell and came to the aid of the sheriff. Arthur fought like a madman and the struggle surged from the ballroom to the hall and out down the steps to the sidewalk. Arthur was slowly but surely overpowered when Hagar, who hovered near the fighting men, plucked Detective Blake by the sleeve and gave him a significant sign. Such was the mastery of that look and sign that the detective relaxed his efforts in aiding his more official brethren of the law.

Arthur wrenched himself loose and felled the sheriff and the policeman, broke through the ring of cabmen and flunkies, and was gone!

Hagar now realized she should have taken Blake more into her confidence, for all the private detective knew his client had been seeking Arthur Stanley with no good intentions to the fugitive. So, when later on the same day he had located Arthur with Blair, he had given the same information as to where Arthur might be found that night to Sheriff Sam Swain, freshly arrived at Fairfax.

Down the street, the quiet, deserted residence street of Richmond's fashionable residential neighborhood, fled Arthur. Behind him the sound of the police whistles and the pursuit grew fainter. Arthur, in splendid physical trim and spurred by excitement, ran like a deer. He slipped down an obscure alley, crossed by the backs of a half score of mansions, and found himself in a mean street that led down to the railroad tracks. The pursuit was left far behind or else it had gone off in a false scent in another direction.

Arthur slackened his pace and regained his breath. He looked down at himself and saw that he was in evening attire. True, in the struggle his clothes had received some rough handling. His dress coat was torn under the sleeve and his low cut waistcoat flapped apart, bereft of its buttons.

"How will I ever escape in these togs?" he said to himself ruefully. "They'll have my description broadcast in an hour." Yet he did not falter for all that, but hurried on in the night through the deserted streets, and in some fifteen minutes' brisk walk found himself, by rare good luck, in the railroad yards and by a long freight train, just slowly moving out.

With reckless haste he threw himself under a freight car and drew himself upon the brake beam.

The glamour of his self-sacrifice in shielding Blair and thus making himself a voluntary murder suspect passed from Arthur. He saw now that in saving Blair he had only done so to save himself from the open shame and humiliation that would come to him when the searching inquiries of a murder trial, with the evidence that Hagar possessed—evidence he felt sure she would produce to save the life of her son—would result in his acquittal of murder, but would leave him stripped of the peacock feathers of the Stanley heritage that he, the gypsy jackdaw, had worn so long.

He saw in the dust and darkness the baleful gleam of the diamond from the sky. He saw the accusing, fierce gaze of his gypsy mother, and then, like a benediction and a saving grace, he saw, in the dust and gloom, the sweet face and the sad wistful eye of Esther! He grasped the cold iron rod stanchly now. Let destiny deal him what it might, he would stand the buffets and fight on for Esther's sake!

And what of the diamond from the sky?

Torn from the fair throat of Vivian Marston, it lies in a mail box, with no light to gleam upon it and be reflected back intensified. With letters and packages and newspapers folded tight lies the diamond from the sky without a stamp to make it mail of any class.

Then comes the busy mail collector, with his mail collecting car. There is some excitement at the Randolph mansion close by. Police whistles are blowing and a thunder-

The outgoing freight is gaining momentum as Arthur flings himself half into the open doorway, but he misses his hold and would have fallen under the wheels but that two strong and dirty hands seize him by the shoulder and another pair as dirty and as strong grasp him also, and he is hauled into the car like a grain sack to find himself safe on his side and looking up into the countenances of three grinning, grimy knights of the road.

"It's a plant, Strap!" cautions a little rat faced hobo who has skulked in the back of the car and has given no hand in hauling Arthur from the jaws of death.

"Whatcher mean a plant?" asks the one addressed as Strap.

"Can't you see? It's a railroad bull," retorts the rat faced tramp. "Would any gay cat be wearin' the soup and fish?" And he points to Arthur's now dirty and disheveled evening attire.

"Maybe de gink got it handed to him," suggests the other tramp who had assisted Arthur into the "side door Pullman."

"Aw, can't ye see dem glad rags is hissen? Why, dey are doity, but dey fits him!"

"You're right, Scotty!" said the leader of the trio, and without ado he struck Arthur a terrific blow behind the ear that stunned him for the moment, and the next instant Arthur felt himself fighting wildly with the three strong and active outcasts.

Meanwhile, what of the diamond from the sky? Where was it?

Bob Adams had swept it into the mail bag without seeing it, the mail sorter at the postoffice had given no cry to see it fall upon the sorting table and blaze back its sinister gleams to the incandescent light above. Where was the diamond from the sky?

The watchman relieved at dawn on the loading platform outside might have known as he stepped across the mail bags marked "Repair!" But the side of his right brogan just grazed it. The truck driver might have known as he loaded the bags to be repaired, for like many a poor man he held a fortune in his hands for once at least in his poverty stricken life and never knew it.

Held by its clasp in the ravelings of the inner seam at the bottom of the bag, the heirloom of the Stanleys rested in the darkness of the soiled interior of the service worn old mail bag. The truckman held it in his arms and tossed it on top of his load. But his fingers just missed the feel of it. And so he threw away his fortune, perhaps an evil one, and drove on, with his mind upon other matters than fortunes or missing gems of price.

Down the city street from his humble lodging place, in the poorest part of the town, came Quabba, musician and a traveler. And he traveled not alone. With him was his orchestra and his collector of external revenue. True, his orchestra was but a barrel organ and his collector of external revenue a monkey, but the organ was a fairly good one, sweet of tune, and the monkey was a simian of sorts and his name was Clarence.

So it was that Quabba was gay of heart and sung to himself as he trudged along. Only a poor hunchback organ grinder, with his monkey, was Quabba. But his heart was light, his conscience untroubled, and his appetite, alas! only too good. The whole wide world was his and no man was his master, and so Quabba, the hunchback, sang and winked at the monkey, Clarence, as if to say: "We haven't a penny, Clarence, but what an appetite we'll have for breakfast—as soon as we pick up the price of one!"

"Hi there, get out of the way!" shouted a rough voice, and Quabba, roused from his reflections, stepped aside just in time to avoid being struck by a passing truck. A jolt of the vehicle threw an empty mail bag marked with chalk "Repair!" from a pile of those at the back of the truck.

The hunchback picked up the mail bag and called after the driver. But that worthy failed to hear the cry and Quabba waved the old mail bag after him. Then he felt something the size of an English walnut in his hand and under the dirty canvas of the bag. His sensitive fingers felt along the side seam of the bag and he could feel, even through the thickness of the canvas, that the object in the bag was a chain and locket.

The hunchback wheeled into a nearby alley, between two warehouses. No one had seen the mail bag fall from the truck, none noticed him turn up the deserted alley. It was only the work of an instant to loosen the drawstring and turn the mail bag inside out. There, on the inside outside, strung the diamond from the sky, its upper clasp engaged in the seam of the bottom of the bag!

The itinerant musician thrust the diamond and its chain into his bosom and popped the mail bag in a garbage can hard by, then, his heart beating high, Quabba winked to the monkey and ceased to whistle to whisper: "We are rich men now, Clarence!"

And soon out from the alley came a hunchback organ grinder with his monkey, and the hunchback was the possessor of the diamond from the sky.

In the empty freight car as it bowled along the combat was over. Spent, worn, and battered, Arthur lay bound on the floor of the freight car, his hands pinioned behind him by the dirty leathern belt of Mr. Strap McGee, gentleman of leisure.

"He ain't no bull in plain clothes, if dem is plain clothes," panted Mr. McGee as he nursed a swelling eye; "he ain't no railroad dick eider. He's a welterweight champeen," he added.

This also was the opinion of Scotty, the rat faced little tramp whose suspicions had caused the combat, and likewise was it the opinion of Chicago Pete, the bulbous nosed third member of the trio of travelers. For all these gentlemen bore many signs of the conflict through which they had passed. They had conquered Arthur, but at a frightful cost to the allies.

"He busted me snoot," moaned Chicago Pete, "an' jest for dat I'll hand him a shoe full of feet," and, standing over Arthur, helpless and pinioned, the gentleman from Chicago gave him a brutal kick in the ribs.

"An' jest for dat we'll frisk young John L. an' swipe his glad rags, too," asserted Mr. Strap McGee.

They took some $20 they found upon Arthur, for in addition to having lent Blair money to lose in Mr. Abe Bloom's gambling establishment Arthur had generously given him almost all of the rest of the proceeds from the pawning of the diamond from the sky.

Then the tramps stripped Arthur and proceeded gravely to shoot craps for his clothes. They were won by the more fortunate Mr. Strap McGee, more fortunate in the fact that the dice were his and he knew how to manipulate them. Bruised and battered as he was, Arthur could not restrain a laugh at the ludicrous aspect the tramp leader presented in the dirty and disheveled evening clothes, with Arthur's broken silk hat perched jauntily on his head.

The freight stopped at a water tank and the three tramps withdrew with many caustic remarks at parting. Arthur freed himself from his bonds and with some repugnance donned the frowsy garments of the tramp. Then he, too, sprang from the freight car and made through a cornfield across the country. He reflected, with a smile, that the actions of the tramp would be his salvation. He was right in this, for, shortly afterward Mr. Strap McGee, despite his indignant protests and explanations, was seized by railroad detectives and held on a telegraphic description of his attire as Arthur Stanley, wanted for murder.

At sunset a good looking young tramp stopped in the dooryard of Alex Smith's farm and asked for work. The farmer put him to chopping wood for his supper, and so well did he acquit himself and so soon did he gain the good graces of the farmer's wife and the farmer's little baby girl that despite the rags of his attire John Powell—for such was the name Arthur gave—was greeted on the barn floor in the morning, after a restful night in the haymow, with a proffer of steady employment.

That same night, by the wayside, Quabba and his external revenue collector, the monkey, Clarence, camped beneath a tree. Again Quabba showed his companion the diamond from the sky and again he said to the monkey: "We are rich men now, Clarence!" Then he placed it in his breast and the monkey snuggled close to him, and they fell asleep and had such dreams as man and monkey may.

But in the dawn Clarence awoke and gained the diamond without awaking his master, and climbed the tree, at the long end of his tether, to examine his find undisturbed. But an owl in the hollow above the lower branches annoyed Clarence, and when he felt the jerk of his string he stole an egg from the owl's nest and left the diamond from the sky in its place. In Clarence's monkey mind it was a fair exchange and not a robbery.

His irate master on the ground, now wide awake, yanked at Clarence viciously and the indignant monkey dropped the owl egg down into his master's upturned face. Nor would he help the frantic Quabba search high and low upon the ground for the missing jewel of price, so soon found, so soon lost again!

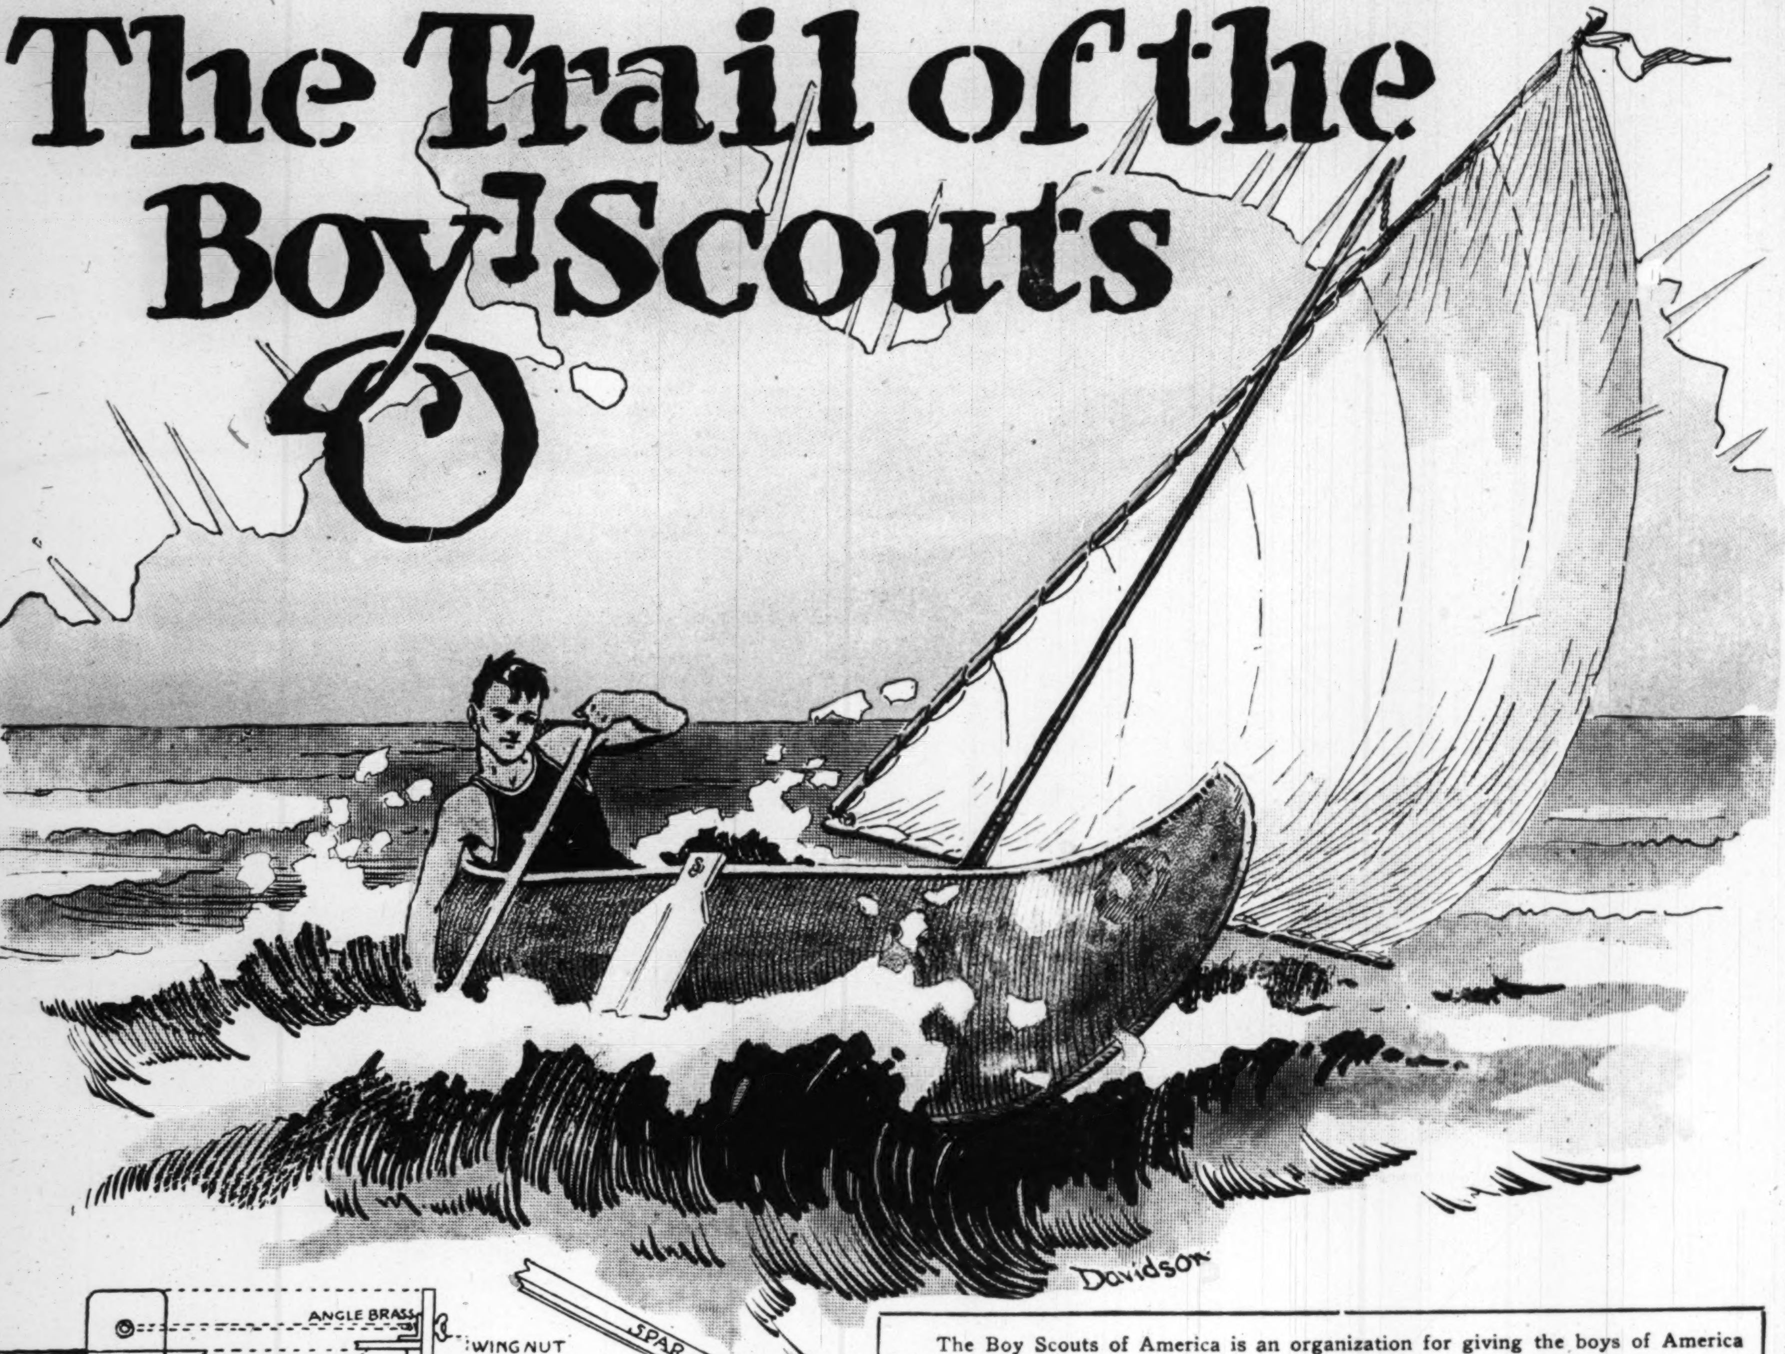
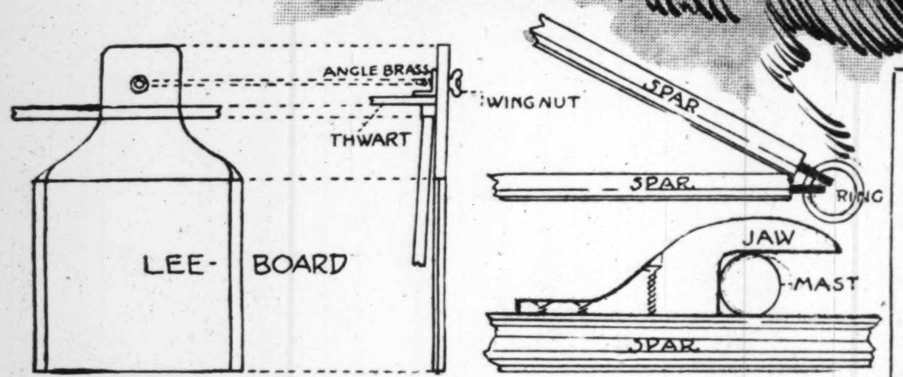
The Trail of the Boy Scouts



The Boy Scouts of America is an organization for giving the boys of America a real good time. There is a lot of study in the work of scoutcraft, but it happens that because its leaders know the boy, all the study is just fun. Boy scouts learn all the wholesome outdoor sports, first aid and rescue work, camping, boating, photography, wireless, botany, forestry, how to make tents and shelters, how to build canoes and yachts—all the things a normal boy yearns to do. The work is made valuable by competent direction. The grown-ups in the scout work are and have to be the kind of men who make chums of the boys. Every effort is made to do the boy good and safeguard him against harm. It is as easy to belong to the boy scouts as it is to belong to a "gang"—and it's a lot more fun. If you want to know about it write the editor of this page.



FITTING THE SAILING CANOE.

CANOEING is about the most thrilling sport on inland waters. Canoe sailing keeps the sailor busier than a Japanese diplomat from the time he leaves the dock until the rig is furled again.

There are as many ways to rig a canoe as to rig a ship. The easiest and probably the safest rig of them all is the "lateen." This requires little work to construct and it can be made amply strong and workable by any boy with ability to handle simple tools.

A short mast, two spars, and a triangular sail, with the necessary hoisting blocks and cordage, make up the whole equipment. It can be put on any canoe, whether it was designed for sailing or not.

Of course this or any other sailing rig requires that the canoe be equipped with a keel, center board, or lee boards. The lee boards are so much more convenient that they are used practically to the exclusion of any other keel attachment. They are necessary to hold the boat on its course when it is running in any other direction than fair before the wind. Without lee boards or their equivalents the sailing canoe would "make southings," as the old salts say when a boat travels sidewise and refuses to answer the helm.

Let us figure that you have a canoe of say sixteen feet in length. The dimensions I will give may be modified according to the length and beam of your canoe, but don't go too far. Remember you are going to sail a canoe, not fly a kite. Every foot of sail area means business when you get into the wind. Don't overdo it.

Let the mast be 5 feet 4 inches in height and about an inch and a half in diameter at the base, preferably but not necessarily turned to a slight taper toward the top.

Get a piece of hardwood not less than a half inch thick and bored to accurately seat the bottom of the mast. This is called the mast step. Screw it to the bottom of the canoe just aft of the forward seat and exactly centered over the center line of the canoe.

The gunwale support can be made of a piece of wood about one inch thick and four or five inches wide, extending the width of the canoe under the gunwales at the point over the mast step. This support or thwart is, of course, bored to receive the mast. The thwart must be placed accurately over the mast step so the mast when in place will be exactly perpendicular to the water line of the canoe.

Cut a smooth hole through the top of the mast at right angles to the keel line to carry the hoist. This hole can either be cut smooth or slotted to receive a pulley block. Then attach a pulley block on a swivel on the top of the thwart, close to the center line. Through this the mains'l halyard runs to the seat where the sailor sits. Be sure that these pulleys run free. You may want to drop the sheet in less time than it will fall some day. This makes the mast complete.

The next thing is to get two spars, each about 10 feet 4 inches long and about one and one-quarter to one and one-half inches thick, also turned to a slight taper. In the base or thick end of each insert a stout screw eye. Bind the end of the spars to prevent splitting, preferably before inserting the screw eyes. Or a brass ring may be slipped over the ends of the spars to the same effect. Open the screw eyes enough to admit a strong metal ring about two inches in diameter, then close them again. The two spars will now be attached like a big pair of compasses.

About three and a half feet from the connected end of one spar fasten a twenty foot length of quarter inch braided cotton rope. This is the halyard. Be sure it is made securely fast. You want it to stay put. Then about two feet, or maybe an inch or two more, from the end of the other spar attach a jaw which will ride the mast. This jaw may be made of a piece of heavy brass, thick sheet steel, or wood, or it can be purchased from a dealer in marine hardware. This can be attached with screws and then lashed to the spar to make it thoroughly secure.

The sail you can make of anything from stout muslin to balloon silk at 40 cents a yard. The seams should overlap at least a quarter of an inch and run parallel to the after edge of the sail, which should measure approximately 8 feet 8 inches. This makes the sail an isosceles triangle with dimensions of 10 feet by 10 feet by 8 feet 8 inches.

Hem the sail along each edge and insert grommets every five inches on the ten foot sides. Lash it to the spars by a running hitch through the grommets and over the spars, then run the halyard through the pulley blocks.

Attach a twelve foot length of rope to the lower spar a foot or two from the free end.

Attach the lee boards, hoist the sail, and push off. You are ready to play Columbus.

The lee boards can be fashioned a lot of ways. The illustration gives you a good line on a simple design. They should extend about sixteen inches below the water line and should be at least twelve inches wide and an inch thick, tapering at the edges to make them cut water. They can be attached to the lee board thwart with springs which will allow them to swing clear on striking an obstruction in the water. They can be attached with wing nuts so that unshipping them is only the work of a moment. In fact the whole rig can be stowed in the canoe easily.

It is mighty good practice to carry an extra paddle stowed under the seats and to sprinkle life preserver cushions about. They may save you a long walk from midlake.

Because of the easy handling of a canoe so rigged it can be sailed with considerable sport on even the small ponds and river back waters.

INTERESTING BOYS

FARMING ON CITY LOTS.

TWO 16 year old youngsters have gone into the farming business in the city of Chicago. They started farming year before last on a vacant lot. Now their "farm" covers many lots and gives them both a busy and profitable vacation season.

These boys are William Buttles and Joe Werstler, both high school students. From their farm they have learned a good deal about marketing, delivery, and collections. The vacant lot farm has given them both an agricultural and business education.

Because of the obstacles to commercial success, crop failures and competition of the grownup truck men and green grocers, the lot farming became something of a game which roused the enthusiasm and fired the determinations of the boys.

"We first got down to business by ordering a flock of seed catalogs," Buttles explained as he leaned on his hoe handle farmer like. "Right away we got foxy. We wrote to the seed houses and got an allowance of the truck gardeners' discount on prices, which amounts to from 5 to 50 per cent.

"We picked up our tools second hand, choosing good ones, and got them at bargain prices. Plowing cost us $10. We planted sixteen varieties of vegetables. When they started to come up it kept us traveling to fight the weeds and keep up with our school work. We tried to get over the garden every three days, doing our weeding in the morning on hot days so the sun would wilt the weeds and scorch them before they had time to take root again.

"We had a hard time getting started to market our stuff. In our suburb most of the families have small gardens and we had to compete with the truck gardeners and stores. But when the people got convinced our goods were freshest and of selected quality we sold practically everything we raised.

"We also found we had demand for things we did not raise, as, for instance, rhubarb, which we bought from other gardeners at about 1 cent a pound and retailed at 10 cents for three pounds."

The summer's work paid the boys a profit of $101 each, more than they would have earned if they had sought work as office boys or store clerks for the vacation season. Also they concluded the summer with brawny arms and a wealth of health.

My Adventures as a Spy

By Lieut. General Sir Robert Baden Powell, K.C.B.

I TOOK a sketch book, in which were numerous pictures—some finished, others only partly done—of butterflies of every degree and rank, from a "Red Admiral" to a "Painted Lady." Carrying this book and a color box, and a butterfly net in my hand, I was above suspicion to any one who met me on the lonely mountain side, even in the neighborhood of the forts.

I was hunting butterflies, and it was always a good introduction with which to go to any one who was watching me with suspicion. Quite frankly, with my sketch book in hand, I would ask innocently whether he had seen such and such a butterfly in the neighborhood, as I was anxious to catch one. Ninety-nine out of a hundred did not know one butterfly from another—any more than I do—so one was on fairly safe ground in that way, and they thoroughly sympathized with the mad Englishman who was hunting these insects.

They did not look sufficiently close into the sketches of butterflies to notice that the delicately drawn veins of the wings were exact representations, in plan, of their own fort, and that the spots on the wings denoted the number and position of guns and their different calibers.

On another occasion I found it a simple disguise to go as a fisherman into the country which I wanted to examine. My business was to find some passes in the mountains, and report whether they were feasible for the passage of troops. I therefore wandered up the various streams which led over the hills, and by quietly fishing about I was able to make surveys of the whole neighborhood.

But on one occasion a countryman constituted himself my guide, and insisted on sticking to me all the morning, showing me places where fish could be caught. I was not, as a matter of fact, much of a fisherman at that time, nor had I any desire to catch fish, and my tackle was of a very ramshackle description for the purpose. I flogged the water assiduously with an impossible fly, just to keep the man's attention from my real work, in the hope that he would eventually get tired of it and go away. But not he! He watched me with the greatest interest for a long time, and eventually explained that he did not know anything about fly fishing, but had a much better system of getting the fish together before casting a worm or slug among them.

His system he then proceeded to demonstrate, which was to spit into the water. This certainly attracted a run of fish, and then he said that if only he had a worm he could catch any number. I eventually got rid of him by sending him to procure such, and while he was away I made myself scarce and clambered over the ridge to another valley.

Spying brings with it a constant wearing strain of nerves and mind, seeing that it involves certain death for a false step in war or imprisonment in peace. The government promises to give no help whatever to its servant if caught. He is warned to keep no notes, to confide in no one, to use disguises where necessary, and to shift for himself entirely.

The matter of disguise is not so much one of a theatrical make-up—although this is undoubtedly a useful art—as of being able to assume a totally different character, change of voice and mannerisms, especially of gait in walking and appearance from behind. This point is so often forgotten by beginners, and yet it is one of the most important.

I was at one time watched by a detective who one day was a soldierly looking fellow and the next an invalid with a patch over his eye. I could not believe it was the same man until I watched him from behind and saw him walking, when at once his individuality was apparent.

For mannerisms, a spy has by practice to be able to show an impediment in his speech one day, whereas the next a wiggle of an eyelid or a snuffling at the nose will make him appear a totally different being. For a quick change it is wonderful what difference is made by merely altering your hat and necktie. It is usual for a person addressing another to take note of his necktie, and probably of his hat, if of nothing else, and thus it is often useful to carry a necktie and a cap of totally different hue from that which you are wearing, ready to change immediately in order to escape recognition a few minutes later.

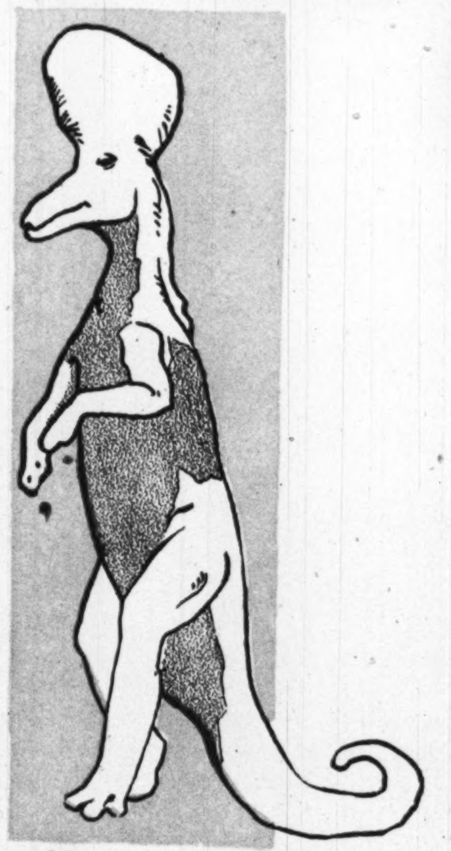
WORLD'S CHAMPION BONEHEAD.

THE world's champion bonehead has been discovered. He lived about 3,000,000 B. C. in the vicinity of what is now known as Red Deer river, Southern Alberta, Canada.

In the towering cliffs above the river gorge a remarkable collection of ancient fossil remains of reptilians has been discovered. Among them is a scientific mystery, a crested dinosaur. It has been named Corythosaurus casuarius. It was an herbivorous monster that waded in the Cretaceous marshes some 3,000,000 years ago. Not only was its every bone imbedded in the rock, but most of its hide, which beats the record of the Siberian mammoth of 50,000 years ago, with skin preserved in ice.

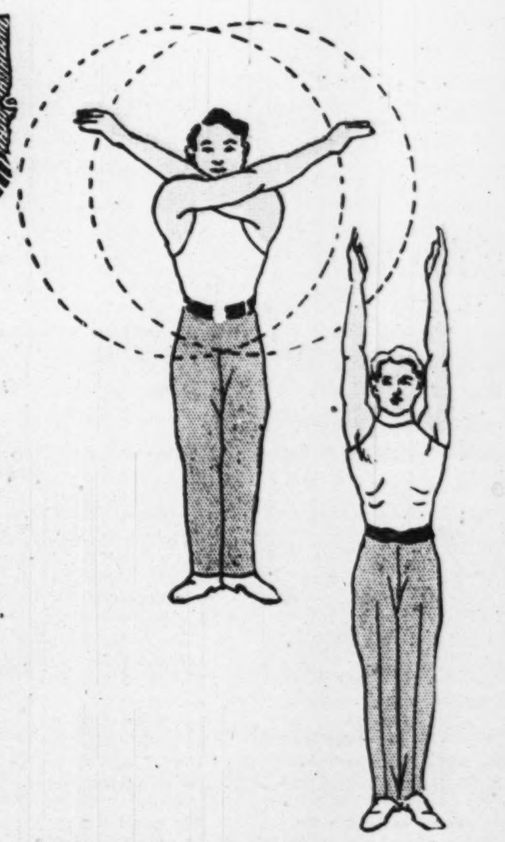
In appearance the crested brute resembled at a distance the modern cassowary, although a closer inspection would have changed matters. He was thirty-five feet long. When standing on his hind, birdlike feet he could lift his head fifteen feet above ground and browse on tree foliage, practically his sole occupation. His structure was light and froglike. On his head was a great crest. His skull was shaped like a Corinthian helmet, and, as it was evidently not meant for thinking, may have been used as a battering ram, like that of a goat now, to butt its enemies and next to break down trees to get at their juicy leaves.



The tall, rounded skull stood thirty inches high above the neck and had a diameter of forty inches. Attached to it was a huge duck bill some twenty-seven inches long. In the big jaws were seventy rows of teeth, arranged in batteries, totaling over 2,000 teeth. The animal was covered with plate scales, some rounded, some squarish, averaging one and one-half inches long and one and a quarter inches wide.

This monster was four times as long and twice as tall as the biggest elephant that ever lived. And he never had an idea.

Be Strong



HERE are two of the simplest and most effective of the very simple series of exercises which constitute the setting-up drill. They tend to keep the shoulders right and maintain the suppleness and elasticity with which every healthy young man is endowed.

Athletic instructors and authorities have long asserted that these general exercises are best for the growing person, rather than the more strenuous athletic match feats which are likely to tempt the young athlete into over-strenuous performance injurious to his main business—the business of growing up strong.

As in figure at right—arms are vertical; movement, bend forward as far as possible without bending the knees, then return to original position. Practice will make it possible to bend forward until the finger tips touch the floor, and extra supple persons can put the whole hand flat on the floor.

As in the figure at left—same starting position as above; movement, circle the arms downward, inward, across the chest, then reverse the movement. Practice this keeping the arms well extended, slightly tensing the muscles to do it. That gets action around the shoulders and helps the muscles that make for erect and correct bearing.

Persistent attention to the setting-up exercises is necessary to gain noticeable development through them alone. It may take months to put on another quarter inch of muscle anywhere, but while the process is going on there will be constant benefit in general results. Keep it up.

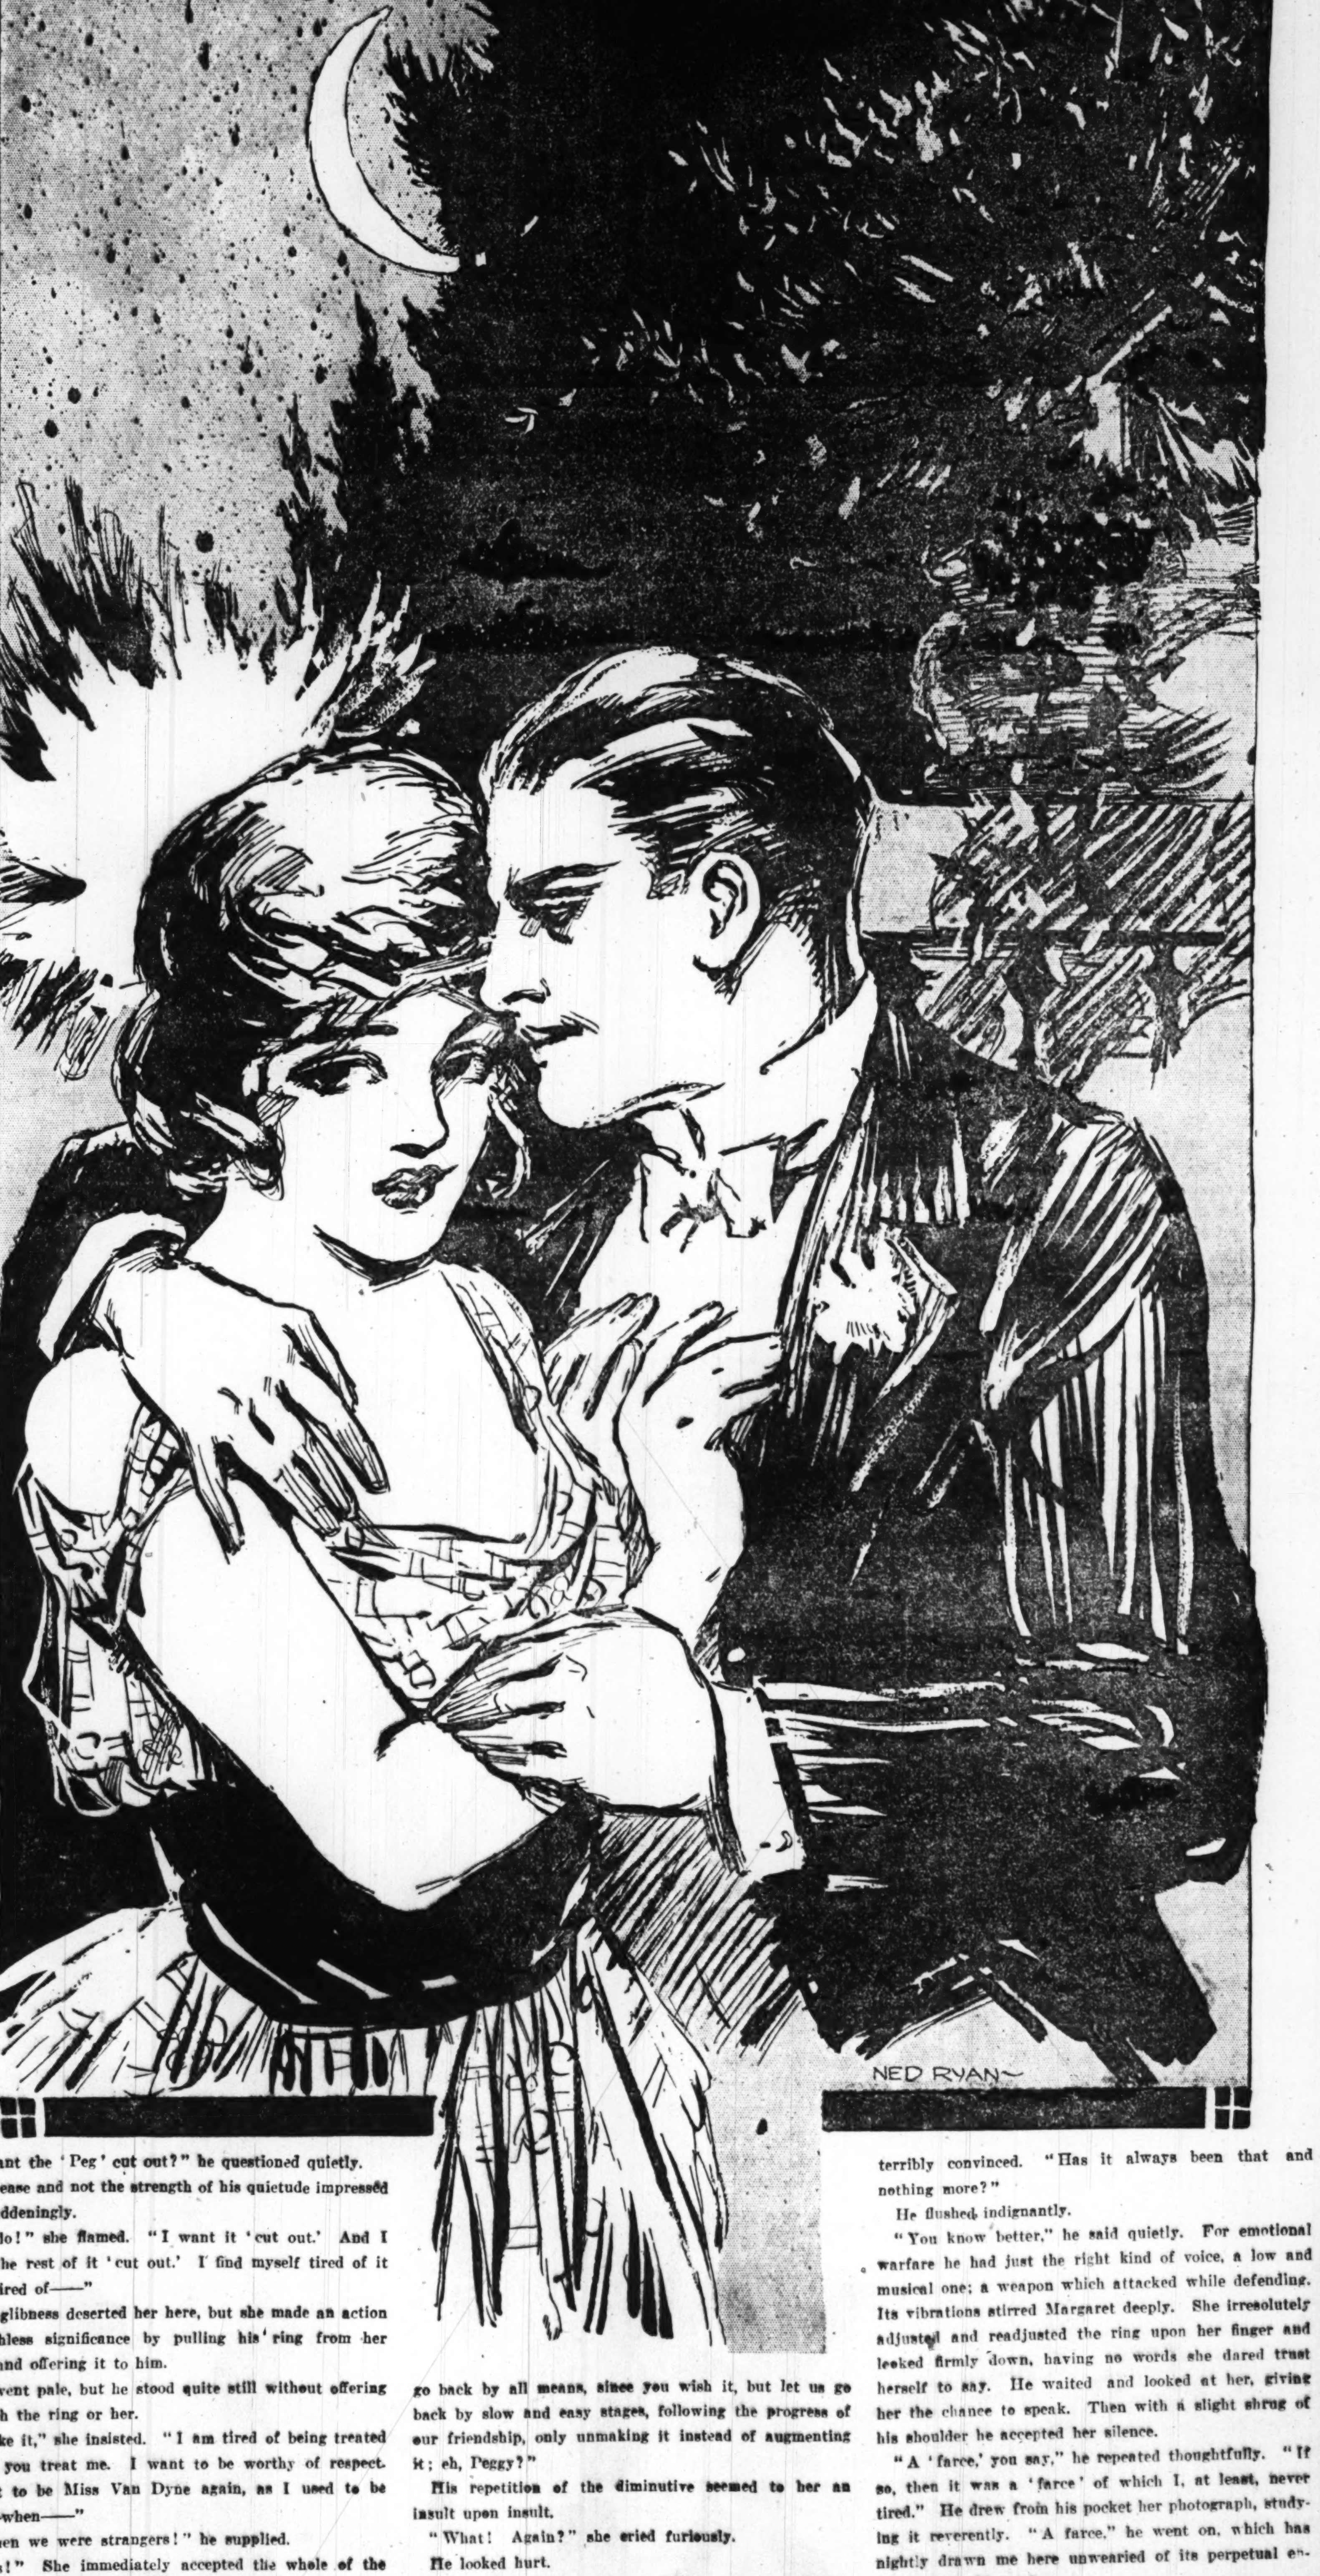
The REVERSED VERDICT

by Marion Hill



He Was Not Prompt. So the Affectionate "Peg" Was an Odious "Pet" Name to Spoilt Margaret Van Dyne When Uttered by the Man to Whom She Was Engaged to Be Married; but When He Raised Again the Barrier of Unacquaintanceship with the Cold Address, "Miss Van Dyne," Her Interest in Herself as "Peg" and in Him as "Charlie" Deepened Perceptibly.

THE big, warm parlor was cozily dim except for the radiant circle cast by its one lamp. In the roseate center of the illumination, and not at all unaware of her decorative background, sat pretty Margaret Van Dyne in a mental state of accentuated pensiveness. Miss Van Dyne had an assured, fresh beauty which did not in the least depend upon the concession of a gown, though she had the gown, too—had it on; and it was beautiful. Also, she was waiting for her sweetheart, Charles Lawlor, a nice chap and particularly well worth the waiting.

But Miss Van Dyne's face harbored anything but that contentment which convention demands of the situation. For one thing, her waiting was devoid of waiting's most delicious flavor—that flavor of anxiety which gives a gambling charm to the period and robs it of tedium. She was not a bit anxious. She knew he would come. He had to. They were newly betrothed, so what else was possible for him—or for her?

Waiting with such dull surety is less entertaining than irritating, and Margaret painstakingly began to consider herself neglected and to get furious in proportion. She was not the kind of a girl who had ever been kept waiting a minute, nor was she in the least the kind of a girl who would ever become used to it. She inclined to put the blame upon her tagged and ticketed condition.

"I wonder why in the world I ever became engaged!" she pondered, eying with cool dislike the solitaire ring on her finger. The diamond, glowing like the heart of love, sent back a score of fiery answering gleams.

"No, he was not handsomer than a lot of other men—not so very much anyhow. And I did not crave excitement. Heaven knows I didn't need it. And I have plenty of diamonds; it wasn't that. Nor was it rainy weather. I simply had no excuse. Well, it has certainly turned out a mistake. Now that I am engaged I do not seem to be as valuable as formerly. Not to anybody. Even the other men have dropped their adoring speechlessness and talk to me as condescendingly as if they were my uncles. The boys used to crawl around almost on their knees for a mere word. Now they chat with me casually when they please instead of when I allow. And he is worse than any of them."

She heard a step in the corridor and straightened expectantly, but shrunk listlessly again when she realized it was Kitty, the maid.

Kitty, staggering under a heap of carriage wraps, came to a standstill in front of her young mistress, looking primly expectant.

"Well! What?" demanded Miss Van Dyne, inconsequentially sharp. Whoever intrudes upon a grievance is never remote enough from the cause to escape a stinging.

"I thought, miss, that you dined out," hesitated Kitty. Kitty was well worth her wages. It takes the cleverest kind of cleverness to know when to be supposititious instead of certain.

"'Dined out'—where?" demanded Miss Van Dyne, indifferently refusing to extricate her mind from the pleasing anguish of revery.

"At Mrs. Brierly's, miss."

The mere name of this honorable hostess seemed to whip an angry color into the face of the expected guest and to give edge to her tongue.

"I was, but I'm not!" she cried fiercely.

"Mrs. Brierly's!" she thought as she watched the imperturbable back of the retreating Kitty. "That is where I met him first. At a dinner, too. I never want to see the place again. I don't have to. There are enough other places! There are enough other men, too—men who would sufficiently prize an opportunity to keep their engagements with me. How late is he now?"

She flung a frowning inquiry at the mantel, where an indiscreet little Dresden clock was exposing the fact that she had been neglected for a full eleven minutes.

Yet, hearing the unmistakable approach of Charles Lawlor's footsteps, the frown on her face deepened instead of lifting. She scored the glad beat of her heart as still another count against the late comer.

A second later, assured of his welcome, eager with the eternal eagerness of the lover, Charles Lawlor stood on the threshold. He brought a sense of stimulation with him. He seemed to radiate the fresh strength of outdoor life—the urge of ambition, and love, and courage. He was all that is best in man and lover; moreover, he was carrying a big bunch of red roses, which he promptly aimed at her listless lap.

"Peg, you darling, how awfully lovely you look!" he cried as the rose shower took her.

But Margaret was attuned for reverence. She rose to her feet.

"Peg!" she accused. "I never want to hear that name again—from you!"

He started at her with excusable curiosity, with more than excusable anger, yet also with a certain generosity of comprehension. She had had high moods before. He held himself chivalrously in hand.

"Want the 'Peg' cut out?" he questioned quietly.

The ease and not the strength of his quietude impressed her maddeningly.

"I do!" she flamed. "I want it 'cut out.' And I want the rest of it 'cut out.' I find myself tired of it all. Tired of——"

Her glibness deserted her here, but she made an action of ruthless significance by pulling his ring from her finger and offering it to him.

He went pale, but he stood quite still without offering to touch the ring or her.

"Take it," she insisted. "I am tired of being treated as—as you treat me. I want to be worthy of respect. I want to be Miss Van Dyne again, as I used to be when—when——"

"When we were strangers!" he supplied.

"Yes!" She immediately accepted the whole of the offered distance.

A long pause followed. His head went up, while hers dropped slightly, as if regret were already dragging at her pride. He studied her attentively. Finally he said: "O, well, have everything quite as you please." Then he clasped his hands behind his back, assumed an attitude of pronounced unconcern, and asked with sarcasm: "Do you think it is strictly logical to jump at once from a state of engagedness to absolute unacquaintedness? This now I know you very well and now I do not know you at all business is unnecessarily wrenching. Let us go back by all means, since you wish it, but let us go back by slow and easy stages, following the progress of our friendship, only unmaking it instead of augmenting it; eh, Peggy?"

"What! Again?" she cried furiously.

He looked hurt.

"Why, no, indeed; not again," he explained with surprised suavity. "If you remember, I said 'Peg' the first time. Don't you see that I have commenced traveling backwards? I have calmed myself to Peggy."

Margaret looked at him, startled. "Calm" was certainly the word for his state of mind. He was unaffectedly nonchalant. He showed himself ready indeed to do her bidding! A real fright began to shake her pulses and turn her cold and tremulous. "Traveling backwards," and enjoying it!

"This is nothing but a farce to you," she faltered, terribly convinced. "Has it always been that and nothing more?"

He flushed indignantly.

"You know better," he said quietly. For emotional warfare he had just the right kind of voice, a low and musical one; a weapon which attacked while defending. Its vibrations stirred Margaret deeply. She irresolutely adjusted and readjusted the ring upon her finger and looked firmly down, having no words she dared trust herself to say. He waited and looked at her, giving her the chance to speak. Then with a slight shrug of his shoulder he accepted her silence.

"A 'farce,' you say," he repeated thoughtfully. "If so, then it was a 'farce' of which I, at least, never tired." He drew from his pocket her photograph, studying it reverently. "A farce," he went on, which has nightly drawn me here unwearied of its perpetual entertainment, Madge."

With a quick, bitter sigh he resolutely put the photograph away from him, shoving it far across the table. He did not look at her, but dropped into a big chair and leaned wearily back, apparently mastered by his thoughts, none too cheery ones.

Margaret flickered another glance toward him, he looked so big, so good, the smooth contour of his face unmarred by any of the telltale lines of malicious living or thinking. He looked so far away! He—who had lately been so near! She shivered a little and covertly pressed to her lips the unresponsive ring.

Slowly, and with apparent unconcern, Lawlor rose crossed over to Margaret, seated himself upon the lounge, and drew her quickly down beside him. His touch sent a wonderful fire of affection rushing consumingly through her. It burned betrayingly in her face. Her lover took her hand, singled out her ring finger and slipped back upon it the fetter of their engagement. She drew a full breath of passionate content and leaned near him.

"You remember the evening when I brought it to you?" he whispered. "That lovely night of stars and moon—the garden with its clinging perfume—the hidden trill of a nestling bird from the dark branches—the music from the ballroom—just you and I in the sweet night world alone—your heart upon my heart—as I slipped this tiny ring upon your finger—my affianced wife!—do you remember?"

Did she remember! Could he ask her that?

"Don't you remember?" he repeated, this time very casually and cheerfully, while his intense clasp slackened. "Don't you, Margaret?"

Then he coolly removed the ring, put it with elaborate care into his pocketbook, and, wandering over to the mantel, toyed perfunctorily with the slender silver vase.

Margaret was trembling. To give her shaking hands something to do, she took up the shower of roses and tried to smooth their crushed petals into seemliness. In her mind the flowers were already priceless as the sole links to her dead happiness. She would keep them forever, and their withered ghosts should lie upon her breast when the grave opened for her.

By the mantel Lawlor covered a yawn; he put down the vase, crossed to the lounge again, and took the flowers from her cold fingers.

"We have gone back, back, away past the time of roses, have we not, Miss Van Dyne?" he asked respectfully. "These blossoms intrude upon the situation; there is only one thing to be done with these." Only one thing, and he deliberately and unfeelingly did it, twisting their poor heads from the stems and casting the ruins at her feet. One small slain bud caught in the lace of her dress—"like a drop of blood from the stricken heart of love," she thought.

Again his glance sought the clock, and this time he started exaggeratedly when he beheld its warning.

"And I am supposed to be dining at Brierly's," he murmured, as if to himself, and reaching for his hat and stick. "Not much time to lose." Here he faced Margaret, showed a composed surface interest in her prettiness, and bowed slightly. "I beg your pardon, dear madam, for so curt a leavetaking, but really I find myself deprived of the pleasure of your name. I am due to dine with Mr. Brierly—at a house where I am to meet the girl whom I hope to make my wife. Good night."

He turned on his heel, strode through the curtains, whipped them conclusively to behind him, and disappeared.

"Charlie!" cried Margaret, rather angrily. Then she bethought herself that she was using a name too familiar for the conditions.

"Charles," she ventured ingratiatingly. Then she had doubts of that.

"Mr. Lawlor——"

But at this respectful point her ear, which had been listening in vain for his returning step, heard now the distant click of the closing front door.

He was indeed gone.

Gone. And gone to meet the girl whom he hoped to make his wife! Now what could he mean by that? And whom could he mean? What girl was to be at Brierly's? Margaret jumped excitedly to her feet. Flying to the bell, she rang instantly.

Kitty was clever, but, not being supernaturally so, she appeared without wraps and was rated for it. The rating kept up even after the wraps had been produced and were being draped about their owner.

"Pardon," murmured Kitty defensively. "I thought, miss, you said you were not going out."

"'Not going out'!" objected Margaret indignantly. "Why, I'm to dine at the Brierlys'."

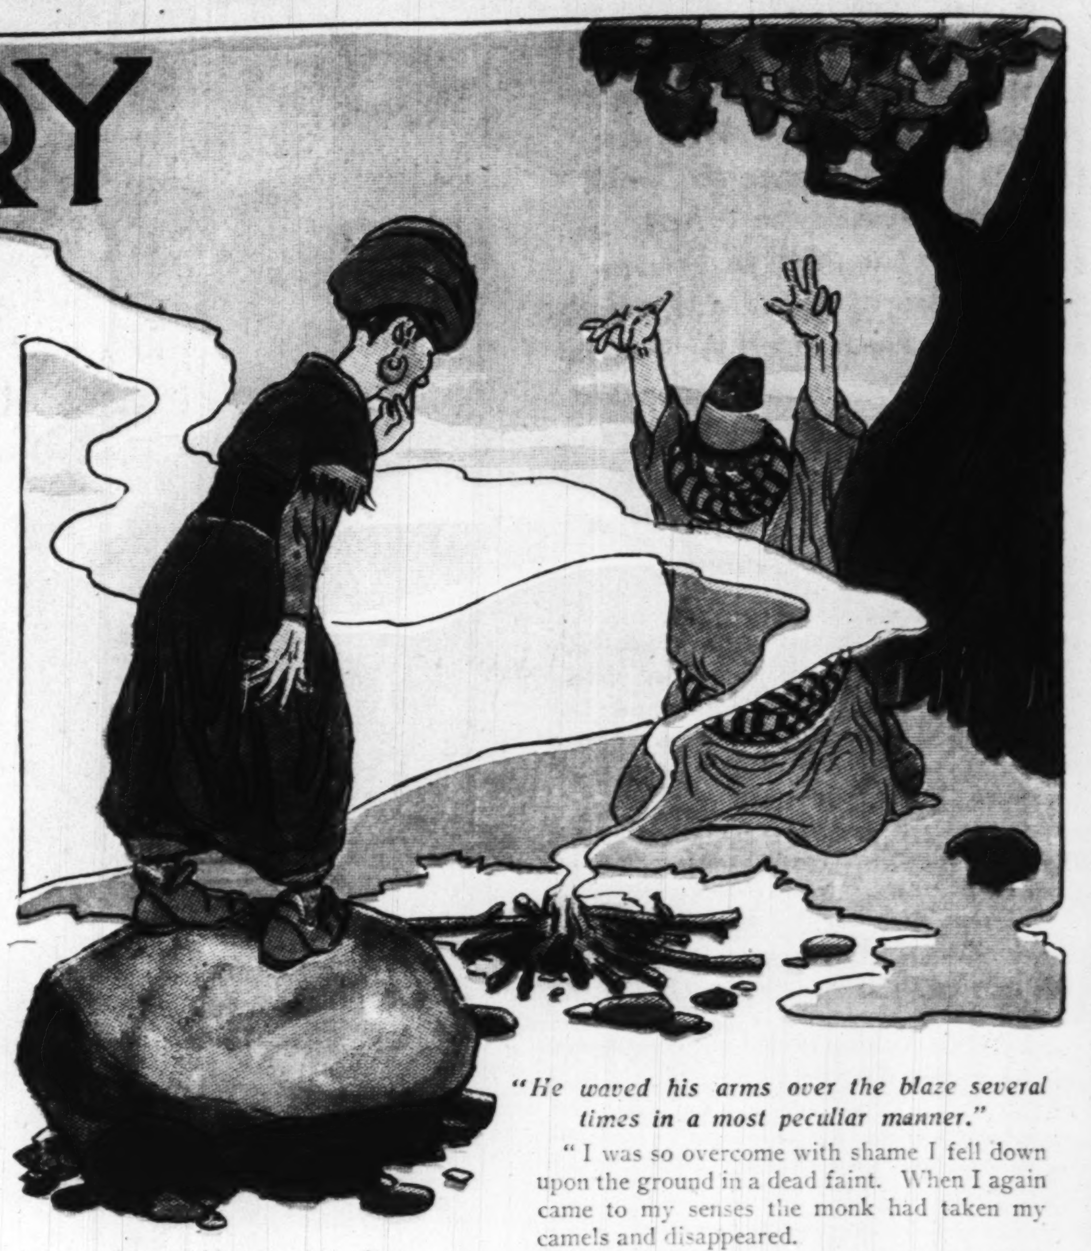
The BEGGAR'S STORY

FROM THE ARABIAN NIGHTS

BY WM. DONAHEY



"He waved his arms over the blaze several times in a most peculiar manner."

A CERTAIN oriental king, who was very fond of disguising himself and strolling around the streets, so that he could find out on his own account whether the people were satisfied with the way he ruled them, one day came across an old blind beggar. The king, pitying the old fellow, took a gold piece from his purse, gave it to him, and was about to pass on when the beggar said, "Please, sir, give me a box on the ear. If you do not I will be unable to accept your gift without breaking a solemn vow."

"This is most extraordinary!" exclaimed the king, giving the old man a slight blow on the ear. "I should love to know why you have made this strange vow."

"If you have the time, sir, I will be most glad to tell you," answered the beggar.

"Come, then, sit down, and tell me the story," commanded the king, as he caught the old man by the arm and led him to some steps nearby.

"Well," said the beggar, "when my father died I found myself with quite a good sized fortune at my command. I bought a number of camels, loaded them with goods, and began to travel around the country, trading at the various cities. One day while traveling between two cities I stopped beneath a clump of trees to eat my lunch. Presently an old monk came along, and, seeing me resting in the cool shade, joined me. During the conversation that followed the monk told me that he knew of a place nearby where there were such great heaps of gold and jewels that if all my camels—I had eighty—were loaded from the treasure the amount would not be missed.

"You can imagine that I was greatly excited, and I at once begged the good man to conduct me to the spot. He told me that he would take me to the place where the treasure was hidden on the condition that when the camels were loaded with as much of the gold and jewels as they could carry I should give him half of them. I was a stingy, tight fisted sort of young chap, and I hated to give up half of my camels, even though I expected to get many hundred times their worth from the treasure. But as there was nothing else to do, I had to agree to his conditions, and after a short journey the monk led me into a valley between two high mountains.

"When we arrived at about the middle of the valley the monk asked me to stop the camels, and then, gathering a pile of sticks, he built a fire. He waved his arms over the blaze several times in a most peculiar manner, and at the same time chanted a queer sort of song. Suddenly a great cloud of smoke puffed up from the fire, and when it had cleared away I saw that the side of the cliff had vanished. A beautiful palace stood in the side of the mountain, and everywhere around us lay great heaps of gold and jewels.

"I was filled with great excitement, and at once began to pack my bags full of the precious things. Soon we had the eighty camels loaded with as much of the treasure as they could possibly carry—in fact, some of them actually staggered under the weight of their great loads.

"After the camels were loaded the monk built another fire and performed over it in the same manner as he had the first time. A great cloud of smoke burst from the blaze, as before, and when it had cleared away I saw that the cliff had closed, leaving the bare rock of the mountain in its place.

"As we had agreed, the monk selected forty of the camels, and when we came to the spot where he had met me he said good-by and took the road in the direction of Bussorah. I had gone only a very short distance when the demon of envy and ingratitude took possession of me.

"'He has the secret of the treasure,' I thought, 'and can get as much of it as he wants at any time. Why shouldn't I have at least ten of his camels?'

"With this unjust thought in my heart, I determined to have them, if I had to take them from him by force. I called after him as loud as I could, giving him to understand that I had something to say to him. He stopped, and when I came up to him I told him that it had just occurred to me that, as he was a monk, and had given up his life to God, I couldn't see what he could possibly do with so much wealth. 'Give me ten of the camels,' I continued, 'and you will still have more than enough for your needs.'

"He seemed rather afraid of me, and at once told me to select ten of his camels. I picked out the ten that were loaded the most heavily, and then, feeling bolder with my success, I asked for ten more. To my great surprise he readily gave them to me. This quite turned my head, so I immediately asked for all of his camels. He told me to take them, but asked that he be allowed one. 'You may take the treasure from its back,' he pleaded, 'only give me one, so I can ride, for I have a long journey before me, and I am very tired.'

"I quite heartlessly refused him and walked away. As I tramped down the road I suddenly remembered that I had seen the monk pick up a small golden box while we were filling the bags with treasure. Thinking that it might have some strange magic charm, I made up my mind to have it; so, turning about, I again called after him. He stood waiting in the road for me, and when I came up to him I asked him for the little golden box. The monk took it from his pocket and handed it to me. I raised the cover, and found that the box contained a yellowish sort of paste.

"'Has this any particular use?' I asked as I raised it to my nose and sniffed cautiously.

"'It has a most wonderful use,' answered the old monk. 'If I should rub some of it around your left eye you could immediately see all the treasure that is buried in the earth. If I should put some of the paste around your right eye it would make you blind.'

"I asked him to put some around my left eye, and when he had applied the paste I found that he had spoken the truth, for I saw countless treasures, and I longed to grasp them.

"It occurred to me that if the paste had the power when applied to the left eye of showing me this wealth, it certainly would, when applied to my right eye, put the treasure at my disposal.

"'Put some on my right eye,' I cried, for I thought the monk was not telling me the truth and was trying to hide something from me.

"He refused, telling me again that I would become stone blind, but I was determined to have my own way, so I drew my knife in a very threatening manner and ordered him to proceed. He dipped his finger in the box and slowly rubbed it around my right eye. Instantly everything became dark, and I knew that he had spoken the truth.

"'Is there nothing that will restore my sight?' I cried, rubbing frantically at my eyes.

"'Miserable wretch!' answered the monk. 'You have what you deserve. The blindness of your mind was the cause of the loss of your eyes. I will take the wealth that might have been yours and give it to men not so ungrateful as yourself.'

"I was so overcome with shame I fell down upon the ground in a dead faint. When I again came to my senses the monk had taken my camels and disappeared.

"Fortunately, on the next day I was picked up by a party of merchants and carried into Bagdad. As there was nothing for me to do but to become a beggar, I made a vow that, for the punishment of my selfishness and greed, I would ask all who gave me alms to also give me a box on the ear, so I would never forget my wickedness or the goodness of God."

"My poor man," said the king, "as you are repentant, you will not need to beg any longer, for I will give you enough money each week to keep you from want."

The beggar, clasping his hands, raised his sightless eyes toward the sky, and in a trembling voice he cried, "O, how wonderful is the goodness of God!"

The TEENIE WEENIES

BUILD A BUNGALOW

by Wm. Donahey

"PARDON me, General," came a voice from the half opened door of the teenie weenie library. "I—I—I—we—pardon us, but may I—we—speak to you a minute? I—that is we—have something very important to tell you."

"Why, certainly—yes, yes, certainly," cried the General, putting on his glasses and swinging around in his chair to look at the Teenie Weenie lover who came shyly into the room, leading his blushing little sweetheart by the hand.

"Well, now then, what can I do for you?" asked the General, with a kindly smile at the couple.

"W-e-e—why—please, we—the truth is—we want to get married," stammered the lover.

"Well, this is important, sure enough," cried the General, as he closed the door and placed chairs for the lovers. "Now sit down and be comfortable while we talk it all over."

The lovers were with the General for some time, and when all three finally came out of the library it had been decided that the young people should be married just as soon as a house could be built for them.

All the other Teenie Weenies were greatly excited over the news of the wedding, and every one was very much interested in the plans for a house for the lovers. The teenie weenie ladies, led by the Lady of Fashion, started in at once to sew. Every teenie weenie sewing machine was brought out, and the house hummed like a hive of bees, and their tiny fingers fairly flew for days as they made pretty dresses, hemmed sheets, embroidered towels, and did all the other sewing necessary for a bride.

In the meantime, the men folks discussed the new home. Since the burning of Hat House, the Shoe House had made the little people such a comfortable home that everybody decided an old baby shoe could be built into a cozy, delightful home for the young couple.

The Cow Boy and the Indian scouted around for days, and finally found the very thing. Then came days of hard work. The shoe had to be brought up under the yellow rose bush, near the other house. The General had it jacked up on heavy boards and then rolled on lead pencils to the place where it would stand. It was a hard task, but the Teenie Weenies all worked with a will, for everybody was interested in the "Love Bungalow," as the Old Soldier had named the new home, and every one wanted to do something towards building or furnishing it.

How to be Pretty on your Wedding Day

By Antoinette Donnelly

In the carrying out of her work, Miss Donnelly will be in consultation with Dr. W. A. Evans, health editor of "The Tribune." All matters relating to personal hygiene and physical culture will have his advice. The formulas and recipes will be submitted to him. He will not allow anything harmful or any habit forming drug to enter into them. If you have any problem of beauty, personal hygiene, and physical culture upon which you wish advice or need help, write to Antoinette Donnelly, "The Tribune," Chicago. Miss Donnelly will be pleased to answer you personally if you will inclose stamped envelope for reply.

[Copyright: 1915: By Antoinette Donnelly.]

Give him a good, fair trial if you want to be pretty on your wedding day!

He has no rival when it comes to chasing away the tired lines that result from hurry, worry, and anxiety!

If you will give him a week's trial I guarantee he will send you to your wedding day provided with a dowry of quiet nerves, bright eyes, a happy expression, and a thoroughly rested body.

Provided with these assets, of course you will be pretty.

It is really a duty you owe yourself, your fiancé, your family and his, and your combined acquaintances to be pretty on your wedding day.

It is your duty, therefore, to let this get beautiful quick doctor administer his treatment to you in as large a quantity as your time will possibly permit.

If you can possibly arrange it keep the week before your wedding day entirely free from obligations of a social or work nature.

With a little forethought and planning you can have your clothes in perfect readiness before that time.

If friends suggest giving social affairs in your honor tell them frankly you would like to keep that last week free.

No sane woman would take offense at this request, and outside of the family dinner there is no function that cannot be given before the last week.

If you rush about from one party to another right up to the last minute, a lusterless eye, a pasty complexion, and a tired heavy body will advertise on your wedding day that pretty brides aren't made that way.

And, of course, as long as luncheons and teas are given in your honor you will have to eat some foods that you have not been accustomed to and in every probability will not agree with you.

So a week before the wedding day is an absolute necessity to get your digestive apparatus in good working order again.

To offset the bad effects of the indigestible foodstuffs during that last week take a long walk every day, rain or shine.

Take a walk twice a day if you can. If you take one in the evening and make it long enough to induce a good, healthy tire you'll sleep just so much better.

Sleep just as much as you can during that period. Don't limit yourself to eight or nine hours.

Sleep fourteen hours if it takes you that long to get thoroughly rested.

If it is absolutely necessary that you stay up late any of the evenings of that special week make up the loss of sleep the next morning or some time during the day.

The amount of actual sleep you need is that which will provide for complete recovery from previous fatigue or previous loss of sleep.

If for any reason you cannot give seven days over to recuperating your strength, give as many as you can.

If you can only give a day, count that day a distinct gain. And stay in bed as much of the day as you can.

Make it the day before the wedding day. A whole day in bed is wonderfully relaxing to the nerves and freshening to the body.

Massage your face and manicure your nails the day before the ceremony. A few minutes' brushing and toning up on the day of the ceremony will revive the "new" effect of the massage and manicure.

The dressing of your hair should be the only last hour duty of this sort.

Don't attempt elaborateness of coiffure. Simplicity is the keynote to bridal loveliness. Nothing destroys this note like a coiffure that has been built up by one who has not been in the habit of dressing your hair.

Don't try out a new style of coiffure. Dress your hair in the way you know to be the most becoming, no matter how simple the arrangement.

Try out beforehand different arrangements of your wedding veil and wreath or whatever you will wear in your hair.

Be careful about the wearing of jewels, even though they may be heirlooms. Unless jewels are in perfect harmony with the simplicity of the veil and gown they should be left off.

A girl of my acquaintance changed herself from a demure little Quaker miss into an oriental siren by being forced into wearing heirloom ear hoops. They looked perfectly ridiculous with her fluffy tulle veil and wedding dress of billowy chiffon.

If your dress has a train practice walking about in it beforehand. Trains are a little bit hard to handle, but, gracefully handled, are wonderfully effective.

ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES.

BELL: Use a good grade of rice powder and apply cold cream before putting on the powder. I shall be glad to send you my formula for cold cream if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

MARIE LOUISE: You can rid your face of blackheads by using the green soap treatment. It is the best cure I know of in addition to a careful diet. If I were you I should consult a skin specialist about the rash on your body. It may be caused from indigestion. I shall be glad to send you formula for green soap treatment for blackheads if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

SCHOOLGIRL: Where the bone is large there is nothing that will reduce it. However, you can make your hands plump and make the knuckles less noticeable by massage. Each night massage the hands with a good skin food. See that your nails are nicely manicured and kept in good condition and I am sure your hands will be made attractive.

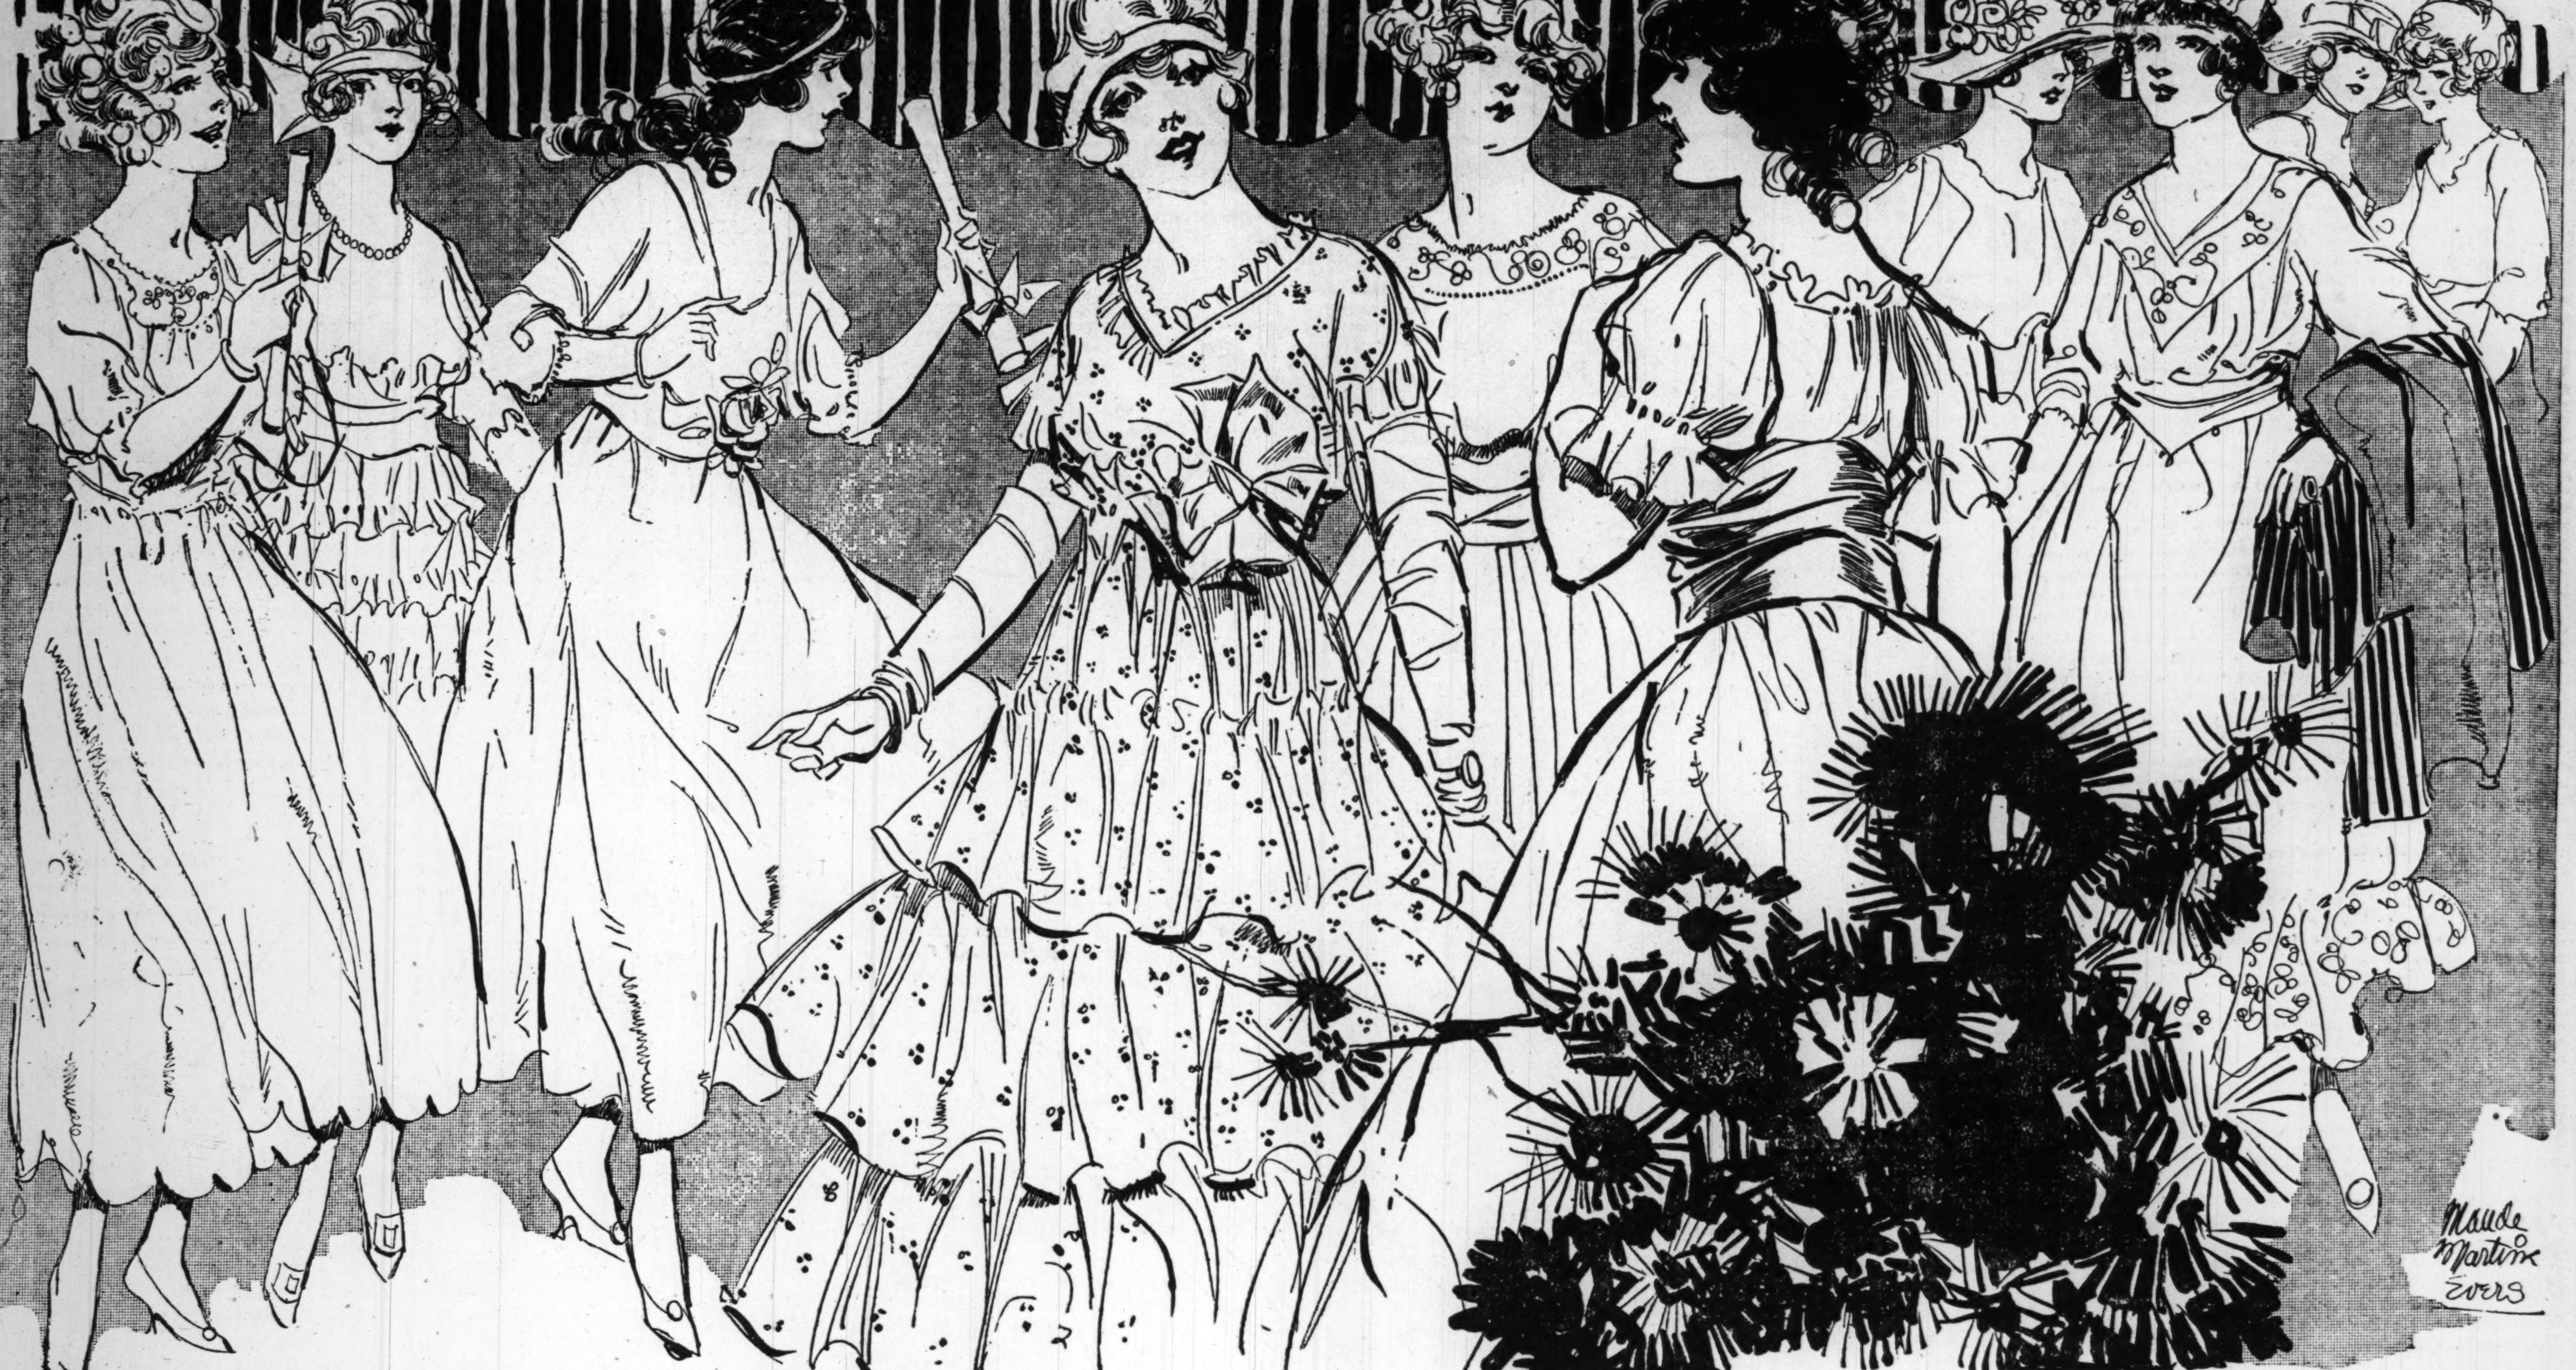
says Louise James



1. An ultra simple frock this, of fine white lawn. The skirt is daintily scalloped, the waist inclines to plainness, and the neck is properly round.

2. Ruffled from waist to hem is the skirt of this sheer organdy frock. Even above the line of the belt rises the diminutive peplum which forms the major part of the bodice trimming.

3. Here a U neck marks this frock as strictly 1915, while the skirt could be no fuller for style nor the waist more simple.

4. Again has come into favor the demure dotted Swiss of old, with its skirt abundantly ruffled and its girdle wide and crushed.

5. Embroidery trimming was never more appropriate for any type of frock than for the sweet girl graduate costume, and here it is applied simply and attractively to a sheer dimity dress.

6. A broad girdle, a round neck, and some short sleeves make up this graduation dress of white net.

NO one this year is really luckier than the sweet girl graduate in the matter of clothes. It seems indeed as though the styles had almost been made for her, so appropriate and harmonious are they for her needs.

This is a season when that which is simple and that which is frilly and ruffly and infinitely beflounced are all in the running. And the graduation dress for the girl in her teens must be a combination of both these extremes. The waist of her frock must be simple. For a bodice simplicity is one of the marked features of these dresses. All frivolity, all assertiveness, all ruffles and flounces are made to adorn the skirt. There are of course exceptions to this rule. But they are exceptions. Demure must be the waists. Sometimes this demureness is escaped by a frivolous collar, which is high and flaring, but these strikingly high collars are not nearly so prominent as they were a few months ago. Flat collars are more in the running. Some of them are so deep that they recall nothing so much as the days of the Puritans, and others are narrow and lie up closely against the neck.

There are many materials which are eminently suitable for the girl who is about to graduate. Muslin is now the most popular, perhaps, because it is not only serviceable and dainty as young girls' frocks must be, but it is also adjustable to the present frilly styles.

Nor is there any reason why expensive trimming should be applied to a frock of this kind in order that it be pretty. Formerly women were of the opinion that in order to have a lingerie frock " possible " it had to be adorned with elaborate hand embroidery and handsome inset lace. Now, self-trimming has reached a point of tremendous importance. In a dozen ways it must be used. In diminutive tucks, in tiny frillings, in ruffles and flounces and shirrings, in bandings and in bindings it may be self-trimmed most attractively.

Organdy is a goods which is extremely dainty and fluffy, but it is not overly serviceable. It possesses a sheerness which no other material can own to, but is too frail for the ordinary girl. Net or voile, batiste, linen lawn, or mull are all more designed for service than this organdy, and can be made to flare prettily and properly by the use of ruffled petticoats. Crinoline underskirts are a rather radical means of achieving this skirt fullness and rather extreme for the young girl.

The skirts of these frocks are for the most part topped by belts that are more snug than were in style last year. The waistline is decidedly marked, the bodice often drawn in above it and below it frills perhaps a tiny peplum, all brisk and agog with its own importance.

As for frills and ruffles, they run every way imaginable on these skirts. There is really no way they may not run. They may run up and down the skirt, or diagonally, or around and around if the person is not too stout. They may trim the skirt from waistline to hem, or they may be put on in sections between panels. Then, too, they may be scalloped, in round, pointed, or square effects, and applied straight or put on upside down.

But a skirt may be without ruffles and still be stylish. If the wearer is really stout there is no reason in the world why she should be forced into wearing a beruffled, beflounced frock. For this particular type net is suitable. It falls in pleasing folds, not too full, and may be practically untrimmed, as far as the skirt goes, and still be dressy and pretty.

As for the waists, they may have for a neckline a round neck, a V neck, a U neck, a square neck, or even a high neck. So, whatever fashion of neckline the young girl may have, she is sure to find something which is stylish.

Nor is there any less of a variety possible in sleeve styles. For the girl with the pretty arms there is the shortpuffed sleeve, the frilled sleeve, and the bell sleeve. For the girl with the long, thin arm there is the long sleeve, a little full now at the top and then brought into a narrow cuff at the line of the wrist. Again, these sleeves may be of net even though the frock in question is a lingerie one.

Just lately I saw an exquisite gown of dotted swiss, that old fashioned dotted material so much in use in our grandmother's time, but which has been disregarded of late years, made up from an imported Paris model. The sleeves were long and of net, while the skirt was shirred about the hips and then scalloped about the hem, the edges of the same scallops being bound with the swiss. Nothing could have been quainter nor more properly old fashioned looking than this little frock.

It goes without saying, of course, that white taffeta is stylish for graduation frocks. The only objection is that it is not a tubable material. On the other hand, many of the goods which are supposedly quite washable look much better and stay much dressier if they are cleaned the first few times instead of washed, and for this reason white taffeta is not as impractical as it sounds.

Sometimes net and taffeta combine prettily on a dress. A skirt may be composed entirely of white taffeta ruffles, and below each ruffle a tiny edging of net may be allowed to show.

Coincidences in My Life.

He Needed This Coincidence.

Near my home is a deep pool of water—an old excavation that had never been filled in. Last Sunday, in high hat and Sunday frock, I started out for church, and as I walked along I got to thinking of an old school chum of mine whom I hadn't seen in years. I must have thought deeply, for I never watched where I was going and the first thing I knew I was floundering in the water.

I couldn't get out, because the sides were so steep and slippery. I howled for help and presently I saw a man on the bank rush away. When he returned he threw me a rope and hauled me up.

And it was my old chum! He was a traveling man and just happened to be "laying over" in my town Sunday.

INEZ LITTLE.

She Couldn't Explain.

I once wrote an article concerning domestic relations of husbands and wives generally, in which I illustrated my meaning by relating an imaginary incident that led to a disagreement in the home. Before the magazine had found it convenient to use my contribution the incident I had described actually took place in a neighbor's family. They saw the article and resented it. The coincidence of its appearance soon after what had happened in their own family took place, although I had imagined it all beforehand, never dreaming anything like that would befall people I knew, lost me the good will of the entire family.

Great Scott, the Coincidence!

Mrs. Frances Scott was a widow with one son, John. Mr. John Scott was a widower with two children, Frances and John Jr. In the course of events Mrs. Frances Scott and John Scott were married, thus bringing into one family two Frances Scotts and three John Scotts Mrs. Scott's son, John, fell in love and married a girl by the names of Frances Aldrich, thus adding another Frances Scott to the group. As the two families of Scotts were in no way related the matter of names was a mere coincidence.

It Happened Thus.

My second and happiest marriage was the result of a series of coincidences. Shortly after I met Henry we discovered that each was born on the same day, confirmed, joined the church, and graduated on the same dates. We had married on the same day and my husband and his wife had died on the same day. After commenting on the strange coincidence Henry said: "Let's get married again on the same day, how will tomorrow do?" Although it was very sudden I agreed and never regretted it.

Some Tactless Remarks.

Called Her "Public Menace."

It was at a picnic. On a thin stage which had been erected but temporarily a fat but kittenish woman was singing a song. Every time she sang loudly the stage sagged and seemed on the point of breaking. I turned to the young woman to whom I had been introduced but a few moments before.

"I should think," said I, "that when women get so fat that they are a menace to public safety they'd stay at home and tend to their tatting."

The next moment was the most miserable of my life, for the young woman informed me that the fat woman was her mother.

Groom Was Paperhanger.

The newlyweds were showing us about their newly furnished flat and seemed real proud of it. So did I, for that matter, except that I noticed the wallpaper was put on faultily in spots. Thinking that maybe they hadn't noticed it, I said: "I don't think much of the job the decorators did. You could have done better yourself." Later, when the groom spoke of his ability to paint and remodel, I realized what a tactless remark I had made, for I knew then that he had been the paperhanger.

F. L.

What was the most tactless remark you never forgot? Maybe you made it yourself. Maybe you heard somebody else make it. Maybe it "got you in wrong," or maybe it got some one else in the same predicament. Everybody either makes or hears tactless remarks made. What was yours? Tell us about it. "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published. Write on one side of the paper only, make your anecdote short, and address it to the Tactless Remarks Editor, "The Chicago Sunday Tribune." No manuscripts will be returned.

RED SPOTS ON BOY'S FACE

And Head. Itched Awfully. Turned Into Sore Spots. Hair Came Out. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. Head Perfectly Well.

804 Vermont Ave., Kansas City, Kan.—"There appeared on my brother's face and head little red spots which itched awfully and he scratched. Always after awhile these red spots turned gradually into bigger sore spots covering all his head. They were kind of whitish on top. The hair came out on the sore places and he was awfully cross.

"At first we used ——— salve and ——— but they seemed to do no good. I read the Cuticura advertisement in the paper and sent for a free sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment. They stopped the itching a little and seemed soothing so we went to a drug store and bought some more. He washed his head with Cuticura Soap and then smeared the Cuticura Ointment on and after using them for three or four weeks his head is perfectly well and he is getting nice new hair." MARION HARLAND'S HELPING-HAND

By MARION HARLAND

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

"I WONDER if any of the Cornerites have a doll and buggy which have been discarded by a child of the family. I have five children—the eldest is 8 years old—and as my husband is not in regular work, I find it all I can do to pay for rent, food, and clothes, without purchasing toys. Yet my two little girls are always begging me to buy them a doll and doll carriage, and so I thought that perhaps some of the readers of the Corner had a toy or two that is not in use. We all know with what longing a child will look at the toys of another child. Also I have been wondering if in the clearing up after dressmaking any reader would find a few odd pieces of materials suitable for my little fellows' rompers. I should so much appreciate them. Here are a few hints which may be useful to readers: To get rid of black beetles, sprinkle powdered borax over the infested places. Bee stings are painful and the poison of them can be destroyed by applying a little oil of cinnamon with a straw or a small brush. Baking soda should be kept in the house, if for no other reason than as a quick and handy remedy for scalds and burns. Apply cold water to the burn first, then sprinkle thickly with soda; add more water and soda until a thick crust is formed. The relief is immediate and the after effect all that could be desired, as the burn will heal without a scar. This remedy is used in many hospitals and is highly effective. I have discovered that a good plan, before putting apples into the oven to bake, is to cut slightly around the center of each apple. Then, instead of bursting, the apple will rise, and as a consequence look much better when sent to the table. Oily medicines can be taken much more easily from a spoon that is heated than from one which is entirely cold. Linoleum will look much brighter if two tablespoons of coal oil are put into the water it is washed with.

"MRS. H. W."

This letter is so full of valuable suggestions which are bound to be helpful to some housekeepers that I am most sorry that the writer gave no signature beyond that of Mrs. H. W. She gives the name of the town, but that is not sufficient to supply to any one who may have the doll and doll carriage or the pieces of cloth for rompers. I hope most sincerely that Mrs. H. W. may see this letter and write, giving her full name. This will not be published, as a matter of course, but sent to any one who writes for it with the desire of giving the articles she wishes to have.

I regret also that I cannot use the remedy she sends for colds, but we do not print medical directions in this Corner. May I add a caution relative to washing linoleum and say that as little water as possible should be used, that each portion as it is wiped off with a wet cloth should be gone over with a dry one immediately? If too large a quantity of water is employed it gets under the linoleum and rots this as well as makes the floor damp and insanitary.

Of Value to Teachers.

"In the Corner I observed the statement of a correspondent that it seems a pity to throw away magazines, accompanied by an offer of the same. I agree heartily with the correspondent; it is to me almost a cardinal crime to waste what may be of use to some one else. As a teacher of European history I find the magazines often a source of valuable information and material. That which serves my purpose I take from the magazines and bind each article in a separte cover, so that students can use it. That is why the offer of B. E. W. interested me immediately. If the magazines referred to are not wholly story magazines, and if they have not already found a home, I should be glad indeed to have them. I will gladly pay the cost of transporting them to my home. Of course if any one wishes them who has no access to other magazines, I would not want to deprive such a one of the pleasure. L. S."

Again I must express my regret. The magazines offered by B. E. W. had 'found a home" before this letter was received. I don't know what they were, but I am sure that some of our readers have periodicals and reviews which would be of use to a teacher and would be glad to put them where they would be appreciated and would prove a genuine service. The suggestion of taking out and binding the portions wished is worth following by others besides teachers.

Music for Beginners.

"I would much like some music that some one has finished with. I want music for a beginner on the piano. I am a widow with a large family, and I wish to arrange for my little girls to take music if they can get the pieces and exercises. I am not able just now to buy these things and I thought that perhaps there might be some one who had some that they no longer care for. MRS. F. E. B."

In many homes there are just such pieces of music as this and I hope some of them may find their way to the possession of the correspondent who craves them. I will be glad to give her address to any one who can supply her need.

Glasses and Truss.

"I saw by the paper that some one had a truss and a pair of glasses to give away and I write on the chance that I may get them. My husband has had a truss, but it is worn out, and we are unable to get another one just now. The glasses I need for myself. My husband is large, so I think that the belt offered would fit him. We would greatly appreciate your kindess in this matter. MRS. B. S."

The correspondent does not give the signature of the friend who made the offer and in ordinary circumstances it would be most difficult to identify her. But this time so many applications have been made for the articles named that I am able to say, with much regret, that they have been given away. Is it possible that some one else can comply with the desire of Mrs. B. S.? And may I ask that when Cornerites write asking for glasses or offering them they will state whether the lenses given or requested are for short-sighted or far-sighted persons? This would simplify matters for those who wished them or had them to give away.

April and June Birthstones.

"Can you tell me the birthstones for April and for June? And is there more than one for each month? I had been told there is a choice between such stones, and I am anxious to know, so in case one is costly and the other cheap I may be able to get something suitable and not expensive beyond my means. A. F."

There are two birthstones for April the diamond and the aquamarine—and two for June—the pearl and the agate. You see, these fulfill the requirements you suggest and will meet your desire to make your choice between a precious and high priced stone and one which will serve the purpose and yet cost less.

Loves the Violin.

"If there is a Cornerite who has a violin that is not in use and will kindly pass it on to me I will do anything in my power in return. I am not able to purchase one for myself and I am out of school on account of my eyes. I feel sure that I could learn to play. A violin has always seemed like a thing of life to me—how it can gurgle and sob! I am a girl of 15 and I really believe that if I had a chance I could become a violinist that people would listen to. HOPE."

Has some one the violin desired? I wish she might have her chance to see what she could do with the instrument. At the same time it is well to bear in mind that a love of music and a desire to produce it are not all that is required to make a musician. Months and years of steady and tiresome practice are demanded to compass even a little skill, and for a long while the exercises and rudimentary work are all that can be accomplished. Still I hope the violin may be sent to Hope and I will gladly supply her address to any one who can aid her with the violin or with music and the counsel she would need for beginning.

An Offer and a Request.

"Your Corner has been a great help to me and through you I have made some dear pen friends that I shall always prize and that have been such a help to the children and to me. Now I come to you with an offer and also with a request. I will gladly send canna lilies or chryscarna lilies or chrysanthemums (plants) to any one who will send postage, or I will try to find for the Cornerites any wild flowers that they want, as we live almost in the woods, among the hills. As to my request: Has any one pieces suitable for patchwork which she can spare? My little girls and I are trying to earn a little by quilt making. The children are learning to sew and to put things together with good taste. C. M. S."

This is a tempting offer and I am sure it will be met with enthusiasm. I trust the response and the gift of the quilt pieces may be as prompt and as cordial. At this time of year, when dressmaking is going on, there are sure to be pieces and remnants which will work well into quilt making. I must not omit to say a word of thanks for the cordial salutations which I value none the less because I do not put them on the printed page. They are recorded on my heart.

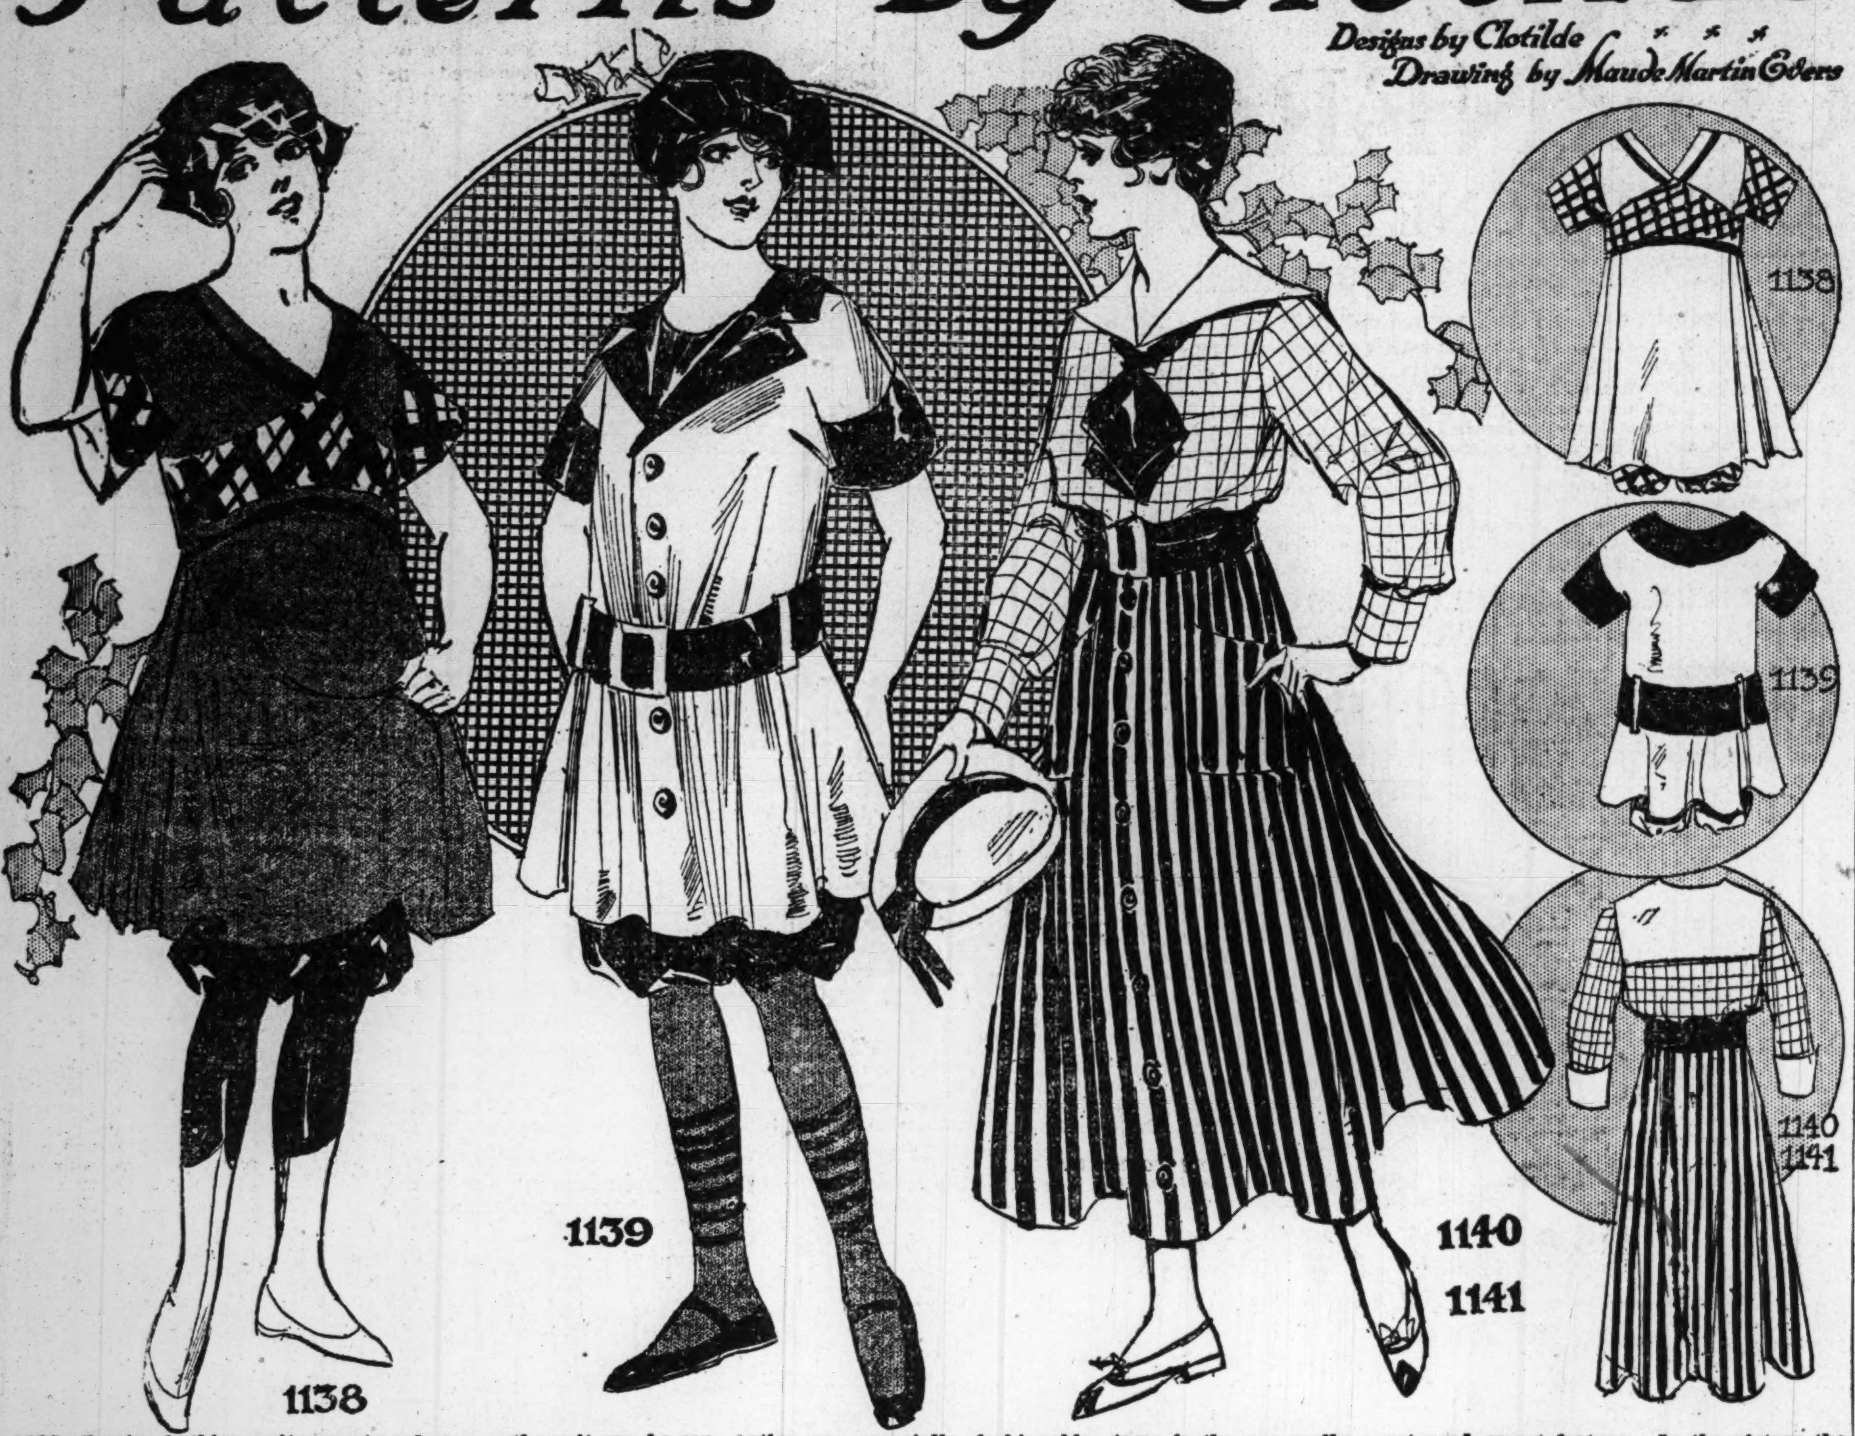
Patterns by Clotilde

Designs by Clotilde

Drawing by Maude Martin Evers



1188—Empire bathing suits are fashionable and also much liked by swimmers and real devotees of the sea. This one is accompanied by separate bloomers. In the illustration it is made of blue salt water satin, with trimming of black and white plaid, and the contrast makes an exceedingly smart effect. The satins and silks of the season are in every way practical, they are light of weight, they shed water, and are to be found in a variety of colors, and they are durable. But, as a matter of course, the suit can be copied in mohair and in any preferred color. The pattern No. 1138 is cut in sizes from 34 to 40 inch bust measure.

1139—Simple bathing suits are the ones in greatest demand. This one is made with the body and skirt in one, held in place by means of a belt and with the bloomers beneath. There is a shield also that is buttoned into place, and all the materials that are liked for bathing suits can be used, but the taffetas and the satins are especially fashionable, and here white taffeta is trimmed with blue, and the effect is a most attractive one. White always has the great advantage of having no color to lose, and the blue is said to withstand all tests. The cap is made of blue rubberized cloth, the shoes are of blue, and the hose of white silk. Besides being smart and comfortable, the suit is easy to adjust. The pattern No. 1139 is cut in three sizes, 34 or 36, 38 or 40, 42 or 44 inch bust measure.

1140 and 1141—The outing costume is the one really great need of the summer vacation. It means genuine pleasure and real sport, outdoor activity, and all that contributes to health and happiness. Here is an excellent model. The shirt waist is a perfectly plain one, with a sailor collar that is becoming to almost every woman, and the sleeves are just moderately full, with straight cuffs. The skirt is cut in three pieces and is buttoned down the front, the edges being hemmed. The pockets are a practical as well as smart feature. In the picture the skirt is made of striped linen and the blouse of tub silk, but there are many materials that are equally appropriate. Among the latest novelties are to be found skirts of flowered cretonne, with blouses of white handkerchief lawn showing collar and cuffs of the skirting material. The pattern of the blouse No. 1140 is cut in sizes from 34 to 42 inch bust measure, and the skirt, No. 1141, in sizes from 24 to 34 inch waist measure.

How to Order Your Clotilde Patterns.

In ordering a waist the size should be determined by the bust measure. Give the bust measure. In ordering a skirt the size of the hip is more important than the size of the waist, but give both the hip and the waist measure. Ten cents for each waist, coat, or skirt.

In ordering misses' patterns the age should be stated—12, 14, 16, or 18 years. Ten cents for each waist, coat, skirt, or dress.

In ordering children's regular patterns order them by the age of the child. Ten cents each.

Clotilde's patterns are made in New York exclusively for THE CHICAGO SUNDAY TRIBUNE and may be obtained through no other service. It is requested that customers allow one week before making complaint for nonreceipt. An extra 2 cent stamp will allow for letter postage and thereby hasten delivery.

Of all garments which should be designed and made up primarily for practical purposes the bathing costume and the outing frock are in the lead. No other part of the summer wardrobe is likely to get such hard and constant use as these two garments and for this reason they should possess, like the vicar's wife, those "qualities that wear."

This is especially true of the bathing suit, since it is exposed not to the sun and the wind alone but to the ravages of the water as well.

In her designs today Clotilde has met this primary requirement of the water garb. Both of her bathing suits shown achieve every line of style and fulfill every need of service. They are ultra simple and they are ultra smart. The Empire cut is fashionable and much liked by women to whom it is becoming. The line of the long waisted model, while it is not flagrantly so, is fairly loose and straight and is as comfortable a garment as it is chic and stylish.

There are a number of accessories to worn with the bathing suit and all of these same accessories may be had in great profusion and in charming variety this season. Bathing shoes, for instance, have undergone a big improvement. They are to be had both in satin and in canvas, high or low. The high laced ones come laced in front, on the side, and even in the back, and can be had in bright and vivid hues.

Sometimes the shoes when they are white have colored lacings and even ornamental feather stitching. These high shoes will doubtless be worn a great deal despite the fact that they are not overly comfortable after they are wet nor overly easy to remove. Low slippers for bathing and swimming are the most practical, though one might include a pair of the high in one's outfit for special occasions.

These low slippers as well as the sandals come in canvas, in satin, or in sateen. They may match the bathing suit or they may contrast with it, and the stockings may be plain or plaid or striped or check, entirely according to the individual woman's desire for conspicuousness in attire.

There is a big selection of bathing caps, too, from which to choose. Usually of rubberized silk, they are much more trimmed this year than in preceding ones, and as all of these trimmings are of the same rubberized goods no woman needs to be afraid of indulging in them for fear they are too impractical. They come in nearly every imaginable shape and are offered at such reasonable prices in the store that it would be hardly wise from a standpoint of economy of time and effort to make them at home.

As for the outing costume, it is as sensibly simple as it should be for style and for practical purposes. It is an absolute need of the summer vacation. The skirt may be made up in cotton gabardine, in linen, in pique, or in serge, while lawn, voile, crêpe, or tub silk would serve well for the blouse.

As for the material which might be used for the bathing suits, taffeta, satin, mohair, and serge are among the most popular.

How I Keep My Hair.

Lined Up Unruly Eyebrows.

I had the most distressing eyebrows. They began all right, but ran off to a point in the center and scattered all over my forehead. I laid out a pair of becoming eyebrows and with tweezers removed the superfluous hair. Then with crude vaseline I promoted the growth of that remaining and I now have as pretty eyebrows as any one could wish to see.

Makes Beautiful Waves.

While in the country I learned from the girls to soak quince seed in water, dampen the hair in this solution, and do it up on kid curlers. This method is perfectly harmless and makes beautiful waves which will last two and three days in wet weather.

L. K.

How do you keep your hair from falling out? By brushing, clipping, and singeing? How often do you do this? Do you clip and singe your hair within a certain phase of the moon? What shampoo and hair tonic (other than proprietary articles) have you found best? Do you massage your scalp and how? Do you know a way to wave your hair without the use of curling irons? Have you found something to make your eyebrows and eyelashes grow? "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on "How I Have Helped My Hair." Address Antoinette Donnelly, care "The Tribune," Chicago.

Prevents Hair Turning Gray.

My hair is long and thick, only slightly tinged with gray, and I am 65. Once a month a rub a little vaseline moistened with kerosene into the roots and once a week I shake dry salt thickly on my scalp. It is excellent for the hair, prevents it from falling out, and I believe it prevents it from turning gray.

A Note to the Teacher.

My little daughter had a habit of crying and twisting around so that it was almost impossible to wash her face. I tried story telling, whipping, etc., to no avail. One morning, when she had been unusually trying, I said, "Now, when you quit crying and stand still, I will wash and dress you, but if you continue crying until school time, you will have to go with a dirty face and dress, and I will send a note to your teacher explaining that you cry until it is impossible for me to wash you." I then began to write the note. She continued to cry for quite a while, but finally saw that I was in earnest about the matter, and from that time I have had no more trouble.

Care of the Mouth.

My boy was a delicate baby, raised on a bottle. For months we despaired of finding the right food for him. In spite of this he never once had a sore mouth.

Six or eight times a day I wound a piece of absorbent cotton around my little finger, dipped it in a boric acid solution, and swabbed his mouth thoroughly. I kept this up all during the process of teething and until he was able to handle a tiny toothbrush.

If you have had a valuable experience in the matter of child discipline, child diet, the physical or mental development of your child, in the correction of bad habits, both mental and physical, in the care of the baby's skin, hair, or any other part of the child's anatomy, nursery furnishings, baby's bath, teething difficulties, effective emergency remedies, children's clothing, games and friendships, manners and punishments, write them in to Mothers' society, care of "The Chicago Tribune." For every letter printed "The Tribune" will pay $1. Write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned.

He has a strong set of teeth and the dentist says it is mainly due to the good care I gave his mouth the first three years of his life.

Training Two Boys.

My boys used to spend too much time preparing for bed. It would often take them a half hour to undress. No amount of persuading was of any avail till I made the rule that when it took so long to get to bed they would have to go so much earlier the next night. Now they can be in bed in five minutes. One of the boys had a habit of bolting his food, then asking to be excused from the table, till I told him that in the future he would not be excused till the rest of the family were ready to leave the table. He decided there was nothing to be gained by fast eating and now takes more time to eat.

Uses Bath Spray.

My husband made a bathtub seat three times the regulation size, on which I soap the baby and then use the bath spray on her. This method is much better than a bathtub and is also cleaner, as you use running water all the time and in this way can get baby used to cold showers gradually.

Before and After Marriage.

Two Cry Babies.

About three weeks before we were married I decided to test my future husband's fidelity. Just as he was leaving one evening I told him in deep earnestness I did not love him, so it would be best to break the engagement. He sat down on the porch and cried and cried. Feeling sure he loved me I told him I was only teasing. A few weeks after our marriage I began to notice his lack of attention to me. In about two months he had scarcely a word to say to me. One evening I told him so, but he scarcely lifted his eyes from his paper to listen to me. Finally, throwing down his paper, he said disgustedly, "It's fine to have a cry baby for a wife."

One of the Other Kind.

Is there no one who will say something good about the poor, unfortunate husband? All you read is how they disappointed this or that fair lady. Are there no good husbands at all? Did they all turn out badly? Won't you let me speak for my husband? He was a courteous and considerate lover and I am happy to say he has not changed a bit, or if he has it is for the better. There never is the slightest courtesy that he omits, and I assure you I am happy on account of it.

Do you not think that some of the complaints might bear investigation? Do you not think that probably the girls did something that brought on this falling off of courtesy? Why not let the husbands answer? Let's be fair.

Would beg of you to print this, just to let our worse half know that there are some of them that are good.

2 Drops of "GETS-IT," Out Comes the Corn!

It's the World's Wonder; Never Fails.

You'll make goo-goo eyes at your feet after you use "GETS-IT," and you'll find the places where those blankety corns used to be just as smooth as your cheek. There's no corn or callus among the millions of feet in the world that "GETS-IT" will not remove—there's no escape. "GETS-IT" is the new way, the simple, common sense, sure way. It does away with greasy ointments, salves, pads, cotton rings, harnesses, knives, scissors, razors, files, and the limping and the painful pigeon-toe walk of so many corn pestered people. All you do is put 2 drops of "GETS-IT" on—the corn shrivels up—and good-by. Nothing else in the world like "GETS-IT." Millions are using it. There's no pain, no trouble, no changing shoes because of corns.

"GETS-IT" is sold by druggists everywhere, 25c a bottle, or sent direct by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago. Sold in Chicago and recommended as the world's best corn cure by Economical Drug Co., The Fair, Siegel Cooper & Co., Home Drug Co., Ashland Drug Co., W. A. Wiebold & Co., Independent Drug Co., Buck [illegible]

Is Truth Stranger Than Fiction?

Haven't you found truth to be stranger than fiction? Hasn't there come within your experience some romance about which you have said: "That's stranger or more romantic than any story I have read." Perhaps not a romance in your own life, but in the life of a relative, a neighbor or an acquaintance. It may have been the restoring of a broken family tie, a sacrifice made on the altar of love, or a story more full of heart interest than the best seller you have read. If you know one, write it out and send it in at once. Address Doris Blake, "The Tribune," Chicago. "The Tribune" will pay $5 for every letter published. You do not need to mention names—it's the story we want. It doesn't matter about the spelling or grammar as long as it can be read. Letters will not be returned.

My "Puppy" Love Affair.

Her Carl a Poet.

Of course every girl falls madly in love at 16; if she doesn't she misses half her life. My 16 year old affinity was the son of a prosperous man engaged in the express and moving business. But Carl had no use for such an unromantic business; his ambition was to become a great poet. Never could a man make love more poetically or look more soulfully at a girl than Carl could. Some misunderstanding broke up the match, however, and in due course of time I married. As I stood in my new apartment waiting for some of my furniture to be brought home in walked Carl with my cedar chest. Grimy streaks of toil replaced the soulful looks, and a half-suppressed "damn" had taken the place of poetry.

They Planned an Elopement.

At 16 I had what I then believed to be a serious love affair. We meant it to be a secret, but I now believe every living soul in the village knew it by our manner toward each other. While unconscious that our "secret love" was worn on our sleeves for all to see, we yet feared that our parents would separate us until we were older. So we planned an elopement. At midnight I was to climb down a ladder placed beneath my chamber window.

This plot must have been overheard, for the clock was turned ahead so that I was ready before the time set; and when I stepped from the ladder on to terra firma I found myself in the arms of my eldest brother, who carried me screaming and struggling into the house, where my parents took charge of me. Meanwhile my younger brother had donned some of my apparel and descended the ladder at the correct moment into my lover's waiting arms. Not until he had bestowed a hasty kiss upon my brother's cheek, thinking it was me, did he discover his mistake. Then he fled in the darkness.

He never came back! I waited and booed, while my trusting young heart nearly broke. Then I became resentful, and when at last I met him by chance I merely gave him a cool bow. We drifted apart after that. And many a time since then I have wondered how I ever came to imagine myself in love with one who had so little stamina that he permitted the frustration of his first plans to thwart his purpose entirely. In my heart I have often thanked heaven and my resourceful brothers, whom, by the way, I did not speak to for several weeks, for their interference.

MRS. C. M.

Of course you loved violently, passionately, and intensely, and perhaps secretly, at 16. When you met that puppy love ideal years later did you have to smile at the idea of his or her ever having inspired blissful and roseate dreams in your romantic young head? How did he or she turn out? Tell us about the evolution of that first absorbing love if it turned out funny. Address Doris Blake, "Chicago Tribune." "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published.

For and By BUSINESS GIRLS

Mary King.

Miss King will be glad to help business girls solve their problems. If you want a personal answer send a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Address Miss Mary King, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

The Saturday Holiday.

ABOUT this time many firms that do not close their offices on Saturday afternoon throughout the entire year start giving their employés the half holiday for the summer months.

No matter how the holiday is spent, it is enjoyed and appreciated. Some girls feel that the holiday should be spent in amusement, going to a matinée, taking a walk through the parks and going somewhere for tea afterward, or spending the afternoon at the art galleries. Others welcome it as a time in which to accomplish tasks that are so numerous that they would spoil Sunday if left until then. I know several girls who have formed a Saturday afternoon walking club, not just to be a part of a holiday throng of promenaders but to go in for real healthful exercise. Rain or shine, they walk several miles every Saturday afternoon. Their idea is a good one, I think, as people who work need out of door exercise.

For the girls who do not live at home and who do not know men who could act as escorts in the evening Saturday afternoon is the only time they have to go to the theaters. It is their only play time.

The girl whose employer thinks it is a waste of money to give his employés the half day to themselves, or who is too inconsiderate to arrange his work so that he could let them off when he might easily do so, feels that she is badly treated. To her Saturday is the bluest, most trying day in the week. It is hard for her to work when other people are playing. Most people when Saturday comes feel the need of a rest and welcome anything that is a change from the regular routine of their work. Even the girl who spends her half holiday at home sewing for herself or doing any one of the countless small tasks she finds to do would miss it terribly if she were deprived of it, and it is as much of a holiday to her as it is to the girl who goes to the theater or to a party.

It seems a pity that all firms that could easily give their employés the half holiday do not do so when it means so much to them. It is hard enough for the people who work for concerns that have to keep open on Saturday afternoon, but those who are employed in places that could close if they wanted to seem to feel worse about not having the holiday.

There are, happily, only a few firms that do not give vacations to their employés, but there are some men who carry economy so far as to refuse to allow their employés to remain away from the office for a week or two during the year. I know a girl who has worked for one company for four years and has not had a day's vacation. Her employer does not believe in giving his help anything that he is not obliged to give them and figures that giving vacations is too expensive.

He is not what I would call a clear sighted business man or he would realize that he cannot get the maximum amount of work out of tired and nervous employés. Neither does it occur to him that the only people who are willing to work for him are those who cannot get work elsewhere. The girl I know who works for him is afraid to leave for fear she might not be able to secure another position right away, and she cannot afford to be idle for any length of time. She has never worked anywhere else and is timid about applying for a position with some other firm.

The considerate employer usually has the most efficient office force, and so it seems to pay him to be thoughtful and considerate of his employés.

The Tribune Cook Book

by JANE EDDINGTON

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

M. J. D. writes: "I wonder if you would be so good as to give us a little talk in your column about some suitable, nourishing dishes for a liquid diet? I have gall stone trouble, and a physician advises such a diet until I am relieved. As I am working downtown every day the dishes would have to be simple ones. I am so tired of oatmeal and soup, and I am getting thin."

It is hard without getting fairly waterlogged from the excessive quantity of liquid taken to get enough nourishment from a purely liquid or diluted food diet—in which I should not include oatmeal—to provide energy for a day's hard work and have some besides to make the needed repairs. The general term liquid diet means nothing except that by using such the digestive avenues will most likely be kept clear. This can be accomplished by drinking plenty of water and eating an abundance of fruit, most of which is at least 85 per cent water of a far better sort than that used to dilute real foods. Liquid diets are properly for those ill in bed, and in too many cases not enough nourishment is in them for the weakest.

Whatever M. J. D. does she should avoid monotony, the foe of proper nourishment. She should also eat a substantial breakfast. A custard is particularly nourishing and in real character as liquid as a soup, for many good soups jelly when cold. Barley water is considered one of the most nourishing of liquids. The liquid foods prescribed for fevers and sore digestive canals that are supposed to be least irritating and least likely to cause delay are: Milk (sometimes flavored with coffee or tea), strained gruels (such as oatmeal strained), broths and strained soups, milk whey, buttermilk, slips, soft cooked or raw eggs, barley water, and specially prepared invalid foods which are not palatable enough for a worker, if they are for the sick.

M. J. D., if I knew your exact address I think I should try to call on you and give you a little start on the study of the physiology of eating. It's blind work trying to eat right when you do not understand the physiological meaning of foods. In the meantime, if you can get it, read from page 503 to page 506 on "Diet in Gallstone," in the book "Diet in Disease," by Friedenwald and Rurah. One of their final statements is that "in few diseases are there so many contradictory opinions concerning diet as in gallstone."

Barley Water.

Stir one-half cup of pearl barley into two quarts of lightly salted boiling water. Cover the kettle, clamped down covers are best, and put over the simmering burner to cook for three hours. Stir it once or twice toward the last. Strain off liquid, which will jelly when cold. This is good hot with a little butter, and remember that butter yields a great deal of energy, so use as much as you can. Or you can add cream. Or beat up an egg yolk which contains a good deal of fat as well as other nourishment, and add it to a cup of the hot liquid, stirring it in but not allowing the whole to boil. Or cook some vegetables cut up fine in a little water and add these to the barley water with butter and seasoning.

Whey.

There are several preparations on the market for doctoring milk and it is worth while to use them for a change. Or buy junket tablets and follow directions for making junket. Or make a good blancmange. Or eat cottage cheese seasoned to taste. Or heat a cup of milk in a double boiler and add to it the juice of a lemon. Cook until the curd separates and then strain through a cheesecloth and drink the liquid hot or cold and sweetened to taste. About two tablespoons of sugar to a cup is generally used. This is excellent not only because of the whey but as a way to get fruit juice. Fruit juice with barley or rice water or any of the cereals makes them less perfect as foods, although more palatable perhaps.

Rice Water.

Throw one-half cup of well washed rice into a quart of boiling lightly salted water, cook at a gallop for twenty minutes, then strain off water and flavor to suit as in the case of barley water.

French Salad Dressing.

Use one part lemon juice or vinegar to four of olive oil. There are nourishing substitutes for olive oil. Put a seasoning of onion juice instead of pepper in the bowl and add a little salt, then the lemon and oil, and whip these together until thick with an egg whisk or wire spoon. Pour immediately over a mixture of oranges, pineapple, etc., or over a green salad. Almost all salad material may be mixed first with a French dressing before the cooked or mayonnaise are used. This is called marinating. A little tomato juice makes a French salad dressing more palatable.

Fish and probably meat, or at any rate, liver, kidney, and sweetbreads, and all foods which cause indigestion should be avoided. Eat less of anything that in quantity will cause discomfort, but in small amounts does not hurt, especially if it is one of the nourishing foods.

Styles in Clothes.

Any question about styles in clothes, whether for babies, girls, boys, women, or men, will be gladly answered through the columns of "The Tribune" or by mail. Address Miss Louise James, Chicago Sunday Tribune.

MISS S.: You may follow your own choice in the length of your wedding gown. The ankle length one is stylish this season, but there is nothing so picturesque as the wedding frock with a train. Some brides use the detachable train suspended from the shoulder in the back, so that afterwards the gown may be worn either way. The veil may be worn with a train even though the dress is short or it may be worn the length of the dress or even shorter than the dress if preferred.

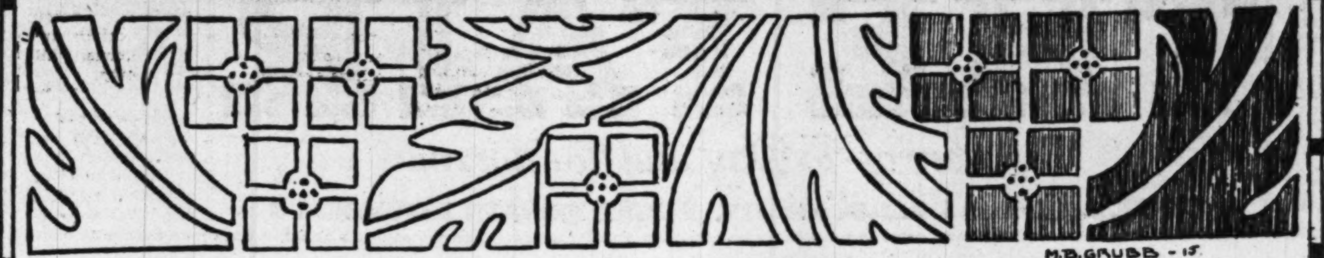
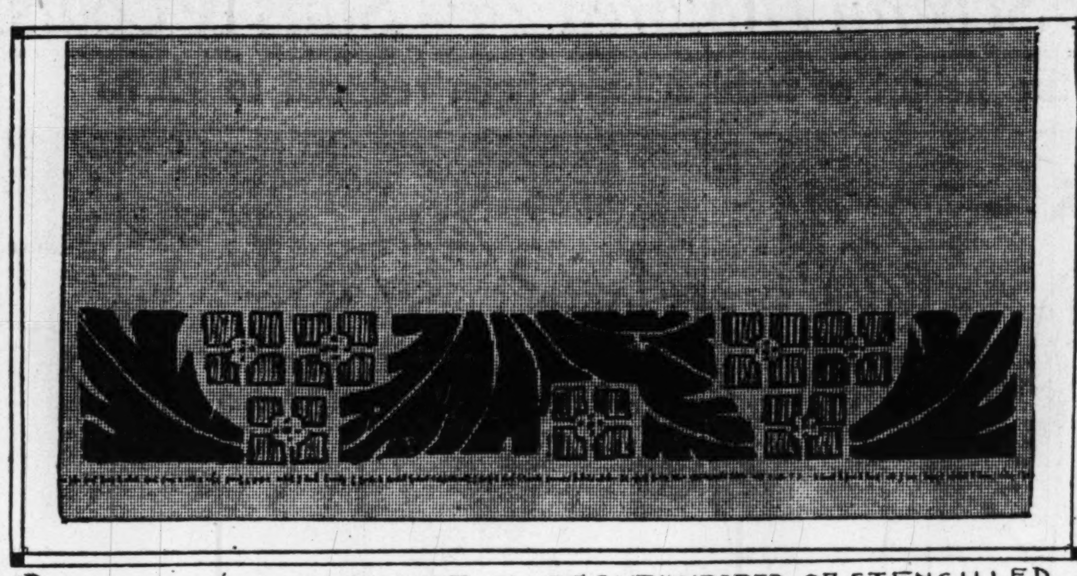
MRS. M. B.: Why don't you use your marquisette for the sleeves? They could be slightly full and caught in snugly with either ribbon or velvet. About the neck you might employ the same marquisette in surplice fashion, making a V effect at the line of the neck. The width of the skirt is perfectly correct for present wear. I should not try to belt it unless I used crushed velvet or ribbon model. The plain fitted waist is quite stylish now.

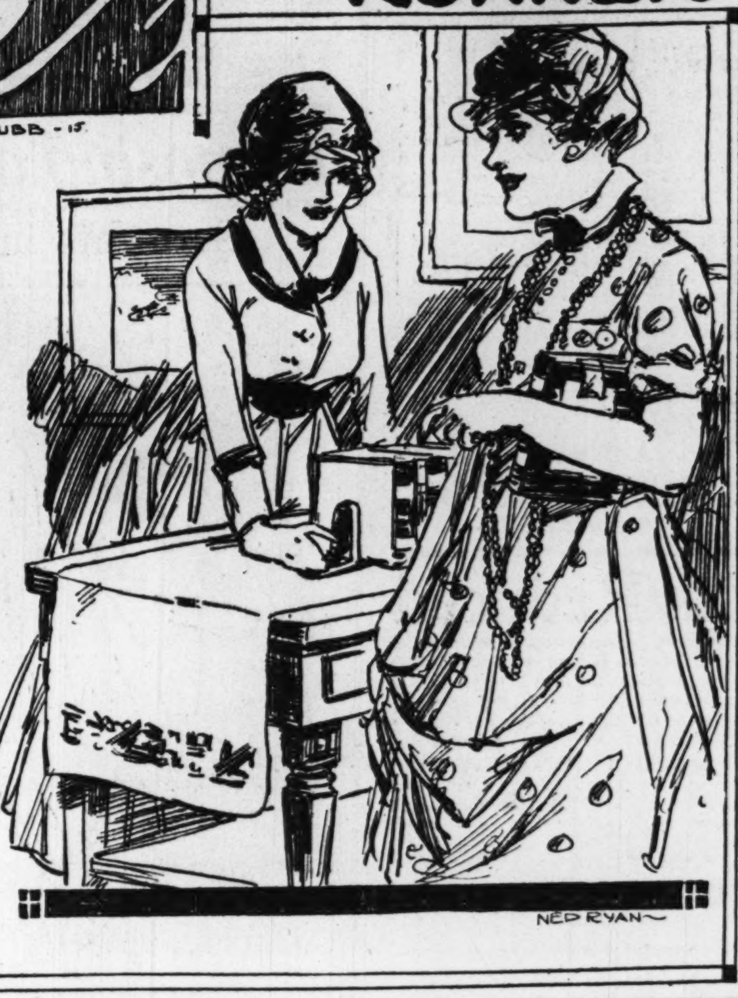
R. S.: The high flaring collar is not the most fashionable collar any longer. It is still worn, of course, and will be for some time to come, as it is a becoming style to women whose necks incline to length. And, furthermore, it is much easier to wear than that which is now ultra smart, the collar which fastens at the base of the throat showing the neck in the front and concealing it in the back. This particular style of collar seems a compromise between the high collar and the low one and the chances of its leading in the fashion race for long do not seem good, as it is almost universally trying.

EMBROIDERED OR STITCHED DESIGN FOR TABLE RUNNER





DESIGN FOR SCARF OR RUNNER—TO BE EMBROIDERED OR STENCILLED.



This design embroidered in rose and green or in any color desired on a cream or gray linen makes a charming border for a table runner. It will go particularly well with the embroidery or stencil design for a pillow which has already appeared in the paper. It might also be stencilled with good dyes or with oil paints diluted with turpentine.

Love Letters

Giving Him Up.

My Dear, My Dear: It's a lonely, sad little widow who starts today on her trip around the world, sick at heart for the love she cannot take and for the joy of just once being in your strong arms, but, boy, dear, that cannot be.

Up to yesterday who thought of me only as the friend who visited the family so often she seemed part of the household. Then suddenly I saw the love light flame in your eyes and I became your heart's desire. You'll never know the joy it gave me, for I'm slipping away from the most precious thing in the world, but it is all I can do.

I'm 34 and you are ten years younger, ten whole years barrier, dear. That's why I cannot let you tell me of your love; that's why I am stealing away, with an ache in my heart and a hurt in my life, to the uttermost ends of the world.

I'm not strong enough to face you and say no, but, thank God, there'll never come a day when you will wake up and blame my love and years for having burdened your life. And ten years from now, when you are in your glorious prime and I am 44, you'll kiss my hand and thank me for saving your life, even at the expense of my heart.

The woman who loved you enough to say good-by. K. C. B.

To a New Baby.

Dear Sig.: Pardon this familiarity on the part of your bachelor uncle, who merely wants to tell you how glad he is of your safe arrival and asks you to convey his heartiest congratulations to your proud parents. I dare say the noble city of Chicago is scarcely able to contain them, but I don't blame them at all. From all reports I've heard of you, their pride is fully warranted.

You, too, are to be congratulated on your wise selection of parents. Just to show you what kind of people they are, they have known me intimately for years and are still willing to be my friends.

Even though I didn't write immediately, I've been thinking about you all week. A baby in the family of his intimate friends always sets a bachelor to thinking—but scarcely anything more. Your parents will tell you that I am a busy man, particularly about the time I ought to be writing letters.

Your mother is apt to begin to assume a new dignity. That is all right—but don't let her go too far with it. You see, I've known her ever since she was a child herself, and a sweet little girl she was, too—but not always the angel that she might try to make you believe. In fact, it isn't so many years ago that she was flitting around here, coquetting with me and half a dozen other boys. All I hope is that you inherit enough of her disposition to be as good a little sport as she was—and still is, for that matter.

As for father—well, if you don't always agree with him, you'd probably better keep your views to yourself. You see, he's pretty husky and well set up, and for a few years at least will still be able to handle himself in an athletic manner—and you, too. A quiet little tip from uncle is that if you want to get around him, just watch mother for a little while and try her system. It looks like a safe bet, for I think she always wins. She doesn't openly oppose him—no break like that from wise little mother. She just softens her eyes and her voice, calls him a few loving names, and slips her arms around his—well, you just watch them yourself some time, and after that you'll know how to wind dad around your tiny fingers.

It is probably close to your lunch time now, so I will stop. Sorry I can't be there to greet you personally, but I'm afraid there isn't much I could offer in the way of practical help. May your parents' fondest hopes for your future come true is the wish of your UNCLE BILL.

ETIQUETTE

by ELIZABETH VAN RENSSELAER

Any question on etiquette will be answered if you write to Elizabeth Van Rensselaer, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply inclose a stamped, addressed envelope. Please write on one side of the paper only.

THE proper place for a woman in her own automobile, or carriage, or box at the opera is the right hand corner. People in this country are not so particular about this as are English and continentals, but it is a point worth observing by those who wish to give form and elegance to the daily conduct of life. Ceremony and punctilio can be carried too far, as in India, where the laws governing the manners and practices of the various castes are complicated to an exasperating point. But a society entirely devoid of etiquette is apt to be crude, rude, and ungraceful. To draw a line between that ceremonial which makes it a capital offense for a subject to look at the lama of Thibet and the mannerless state of a mining camp is a perfectly possible achievement.

S. B.: A nice luncheon for four people, if you live alone and have no maid, is first a little plate of half a dozen strawberries ranged around a neatly molded pat of powdered sugar. Leave the hulls on the berries so that you guests can hold on by the stem ends and dip the berries into the sugar. If you have a chafing dish, cook in this some curried eggs and serve with rice, which you can boil before your guests come and keep warm until ready to serve. Then have some nice salad—tomatoes or asparagus—and some cold meat, which you can buy sliced thin in any delicatessen shop. Then have some black coffee served in small after dinner coffee cups, and have with this some crackers and cheese. This is a simple, inexpensive, yet dainty luncheon, one easy to prepare and serve.

MOLLIE B.: No, don't give the boy you have only met once or twice a present. And wait still a little while before you ask him to come to see you. Find out something about him. He does not sound quite trustworthy.

ELIZA: No, my dear, it is never chic, or elegant, or attractive to chew gum in public. If you are incurably addicted to the habit, chew in the privacy of your home; but avoid the custom on the streets, in theaters, shops, or cars.

A. W.: If you live simply and plainly in a small apartment, then entertain your friends in a manner in harmony with your home surroundings—that is, simply and plainly. If they are of the right stuff such entertainment will please and gratify them. Any straining after effect is apt to mar the spirit of a party. Because Mrs. B. with an income ten times yours has so many courses for luncheon or dinner is no reason why you should.

"BLONDY": It would be quite proper to give a woman teacher flowers on graduating from high school, and thoughtful, too. It depends on the meal and on the fruit whether fruit is served first at a meal. Fruit is usually the first course at breakfast. Grapefruit, melons, fruit salad, and sometimes strawberries are suitably served as the beginning of luncheon or supper, but not at dinner. If you have to sneeze, be sure you sneeze into your handkerchief and say "Excuse me" to the company. Also try to sneeze as quietly as possible. Some people seem to explode with a roar. Let the woman, at a theater, follow directly after the usher. The man brings up the rear. The guest should express his thanks for and appreciation of an entertainment when he says good-by to the host or hostess. Let both the girls in a party of four enter the theater first, the two boys bringing up the rear. But in seating yourselves one boy should go in first, then the two girls, and then the second boy. As to who should carry the tickets, that you should decide between you. If one lad is older than the other, let him carry them. It is quite proper for two young people—a young man and young woman—of about 19 to exchange photographs. Eat from the individual dishes as they are set before you. Don't "dump" their contents on your plate.

S. I. A.: If it is an older woman who comes up to your table it is polite to rise when she stops to greet you and shake hands with you. Otherwise remain seated. I am sorry that I am not educated in chiromancy sufficiently to interpret your character from your handwriting. If I should hazard any opinion it would be that your chirography indicated an enthusiastic, rather excitable, disposition, and I should advise you to cultivate repose and self-control.

Doris Blake Says

"The poverty that starves is poverty of love."

Have you a perplexing love affair in which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care "The Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply send stamped and addressed envelope.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

WERE you born on June 6 or 7? Then you are a rather deep thinker and you love justice, truth, and harmonious surroundings. Your force and energy sometimes cause you to leap before you look, especially in business enterprises. You are intuitive, but these intuitions do not always prove a safe guide. You are sometimes difficult to please, but you can be wonderfully comforting in sorrow and can forget your own troubles in the exercise of this activity. You are pure and clean in thought and purpose, but apt to be wretched if your ideals are shattered. Help others when these times come and you will forget yourself. You are capable of the deepest love and are faithful to your friends. You would make a successful clergyman, tutor, inventor, or musician.

If your birthday falls between June 8 and 10 you are even more forceful and determined in your views. You are shrewd but just. Your determination is apt to get you into difficulties with other people and your feelings will be hurt, but if you will only remember to go ahead more slowly, the right time will come for you to act. Just be sure you are right, then follow the rest of the old motto, "Go ahead."

Never be discouraged if a first attempt fails. Don't give up "if the walls of evil do not fall down after you have marched around them six days." They will fall on the seventh day, just as did Jericho's. Your lesson is patience. You are a good talker and make friends easily. Keep busy, but do not go into business alone, for your talents work better in coöperation with others.

Persons born between June 11 and 13 have all the preceding characteristics but more highly accentuated in every respect. If you were born during this time in the Gemini sign, you are proud, energetic, fearless, and ready to fight if occasion requires. You act quickly and impulsively. Your intuitive powers are developed to such an extent that you are inclined towards spiritualism. If your natural religious beliefs do not deter you, remarkable results may come from this quality which is well worth cultivating. You are demonstrative in your affections, sensitive, and have a remarkably idealistic nature.

You have many friends and some bitter enemies. The latter have usually been acquired at those rare times when you have let your disturbed condition get the better of you. Be careful of those times and also of your "down spells."

You have, on the whole, a happy makeup, which is combined with a love of poetry and music. You will be most successful as a clerk, salesman, attorney, or jurist.

You will find true, helpful friends in Virgo (Aug. 24-Sept. 23) and Aries (March 22-April 20), but marriage will be happiest with one born in Libra (Sept. 24-Oct. 23), Aquarius (Jan. 21-Feb. 19), or your own sign, Gemini (May 22-June 22).

Those Interfering Parents!

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl of 20 and am in love with a young fellow of about the same age, but my parents don't like him very well, and don't want me to keep company with a young fellow. He asked the other night to walk home with me. I'm anxious to know what to do about the matter. Please give me your thoughts about it. C. E. M."

There must be some reason for your parents objecting to the young man. Why don't you ask them why they don't want you to have anything to do with him? Parents usually know best, my dear.

Does Woman Ever Propose?

Did you ever know a woman who proposed? "The Sunday Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published. Your name will not be published. Address, Doris Blake, "The Tribune," Chicago.

Her First and Last.

I was trying to brighten the lives of some of the ward patients in one of the big hospitals. I had taken soups, jellies, and other dainties to a young Chinaman, all of which were gratefully received, until I took some flowers to him. When he saw them he ordered me, in a rough manner, to "take away!" When I insisted upon leaving them he sprang from the window (his room was on the first floor) and ran down the street, pursued by an attendant. I afterwards learned that in China a woman presenting a man with flowers is tantamount to a proposal of marriage. That was my first and last proposal; that yellow man discouraged me. H. C.

Just to Surprise Mother.

He had been going with her for about six months and one day while they were walking down the street he said: "Today is mother's birthday; I would like to do something that would surprise her." "Why don't you marry me? That would surprise her," was the girl's quick reply. They did get married that day and are happy. K. J.

Picked the One She Wanted.

In my opinion a woman generally does the proposing. I know a girl that made up her mind she would be married before the year was out. She even made a bet with me, and she wasn't keeping company with any man; in fact, most men kept shy of her, she was so quiet. Nevertheless she picked out the man she wanted, got introduced, made herself so perfectly congenial that he only called three times when he asked her if she would accept a diamond ring as a present. She gladly assented and said, "When will we set the date?" She has been married three years and they are happy. MRS. J. M. D.

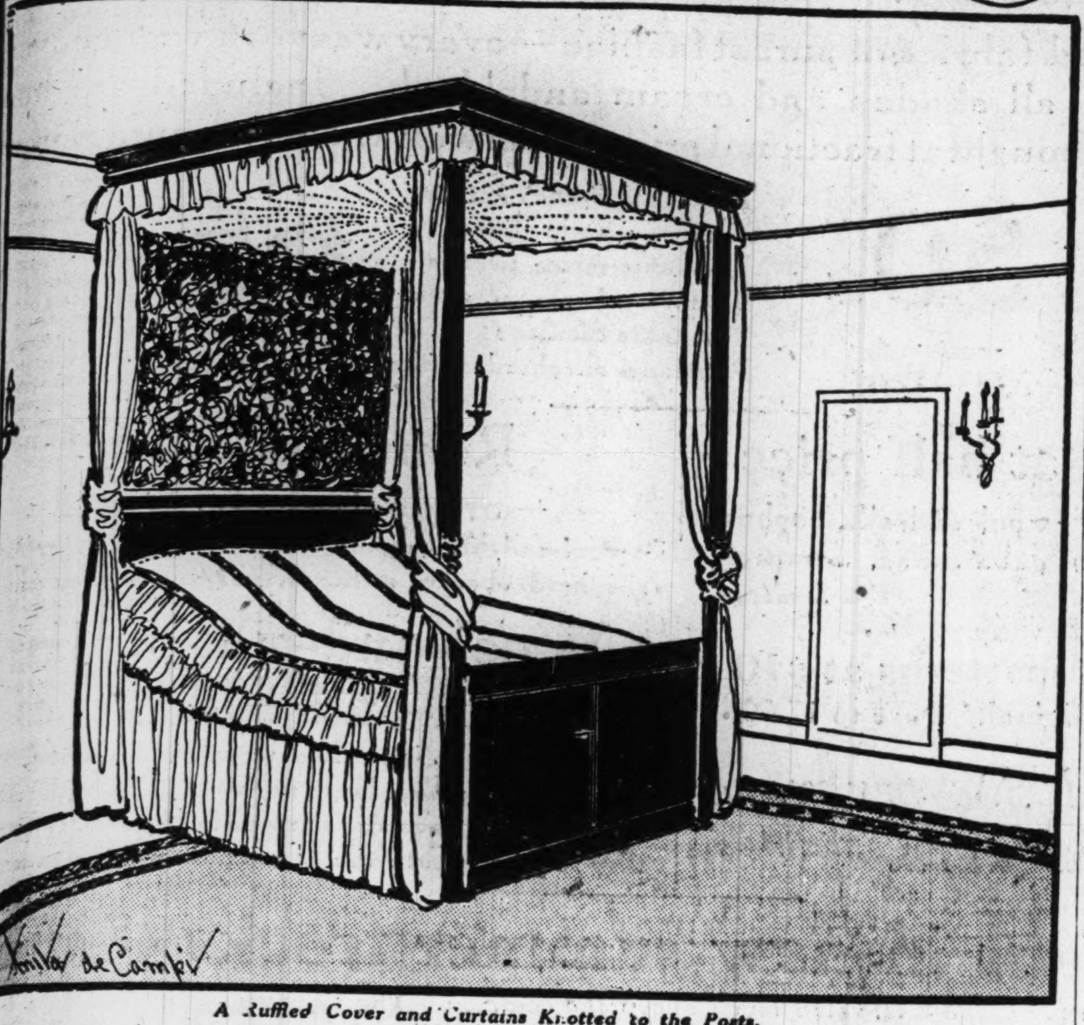
The Home Harmonious

Decorative Schemes for Bedrooms

Anita de Campi



A Ruffled Cover and Curtains Knotted to the Posts.

Miss de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to interior decorations. Address your letter to Miss Anita de Campi, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. Inclose a stamped, addressed envelope if you wish a personal reply.

NOW that ruffléty curtains are coming so strongly into favor again, designers are contriving innumerable novel bedspreads to accord with them. Trimmings of all sorts are to be used in abundance as well as riots of color and confusions of materials.

In most instances the spread is generously large enough to cover the pillows, which are allowed to lie "in their natural position." Is that clear? They are not patted upright, or rolled in bolster shape, but just laid innocently side by side and the spread demurely drawn up over their gentle protrusion.

The newest thing in furniture is a double bed. It is a bed outmeasuring in width any hitherto made, and has all the appearance of being twin beds. The headboard is in one piece, but the footboard in two. The effect is much the same when twin beds are drawn close together and have one large spread covering both.

The decorator has to have the combined facility of modiste, colorist, and milliner to successfully cope with the latest demands for covers, some of which are actually trimmed with artificial flowers. It sounds fussy and extreme, but the effect in some cases is not as atrocious as might be imagined. For instance, one white enameled wooden bed, copying many details of the Louis XVI. period, has cane insets at the head and foot, with little festoons of delicately colored flowers carved in wood (made of compo really), crossing the caned parts. The spread for this bed is of light toned taffeta, with a deep side flounce of the same. The flounce is applied under a wide scalloped outline, headed by a narrow chiffon ruching, with tiny flowers mingled in the ruching.

While flower trimming will never be prevalent, little crisp ruchings, quillings, and plaitings of silk are already accepted.

A bed that depends for its effect on its hangings and that does not allow a glimpse of its wooden frame work has a covering of chintz in bright colors. It is lined with pomegranate sateen and trimmed with pomegranate colored ruches of pinked out taffeta.

Another such bed, devised for a young girl's small room, is in reality merely a box lounge. It has a separate mattress on it for the comfortable tucking in of the bedding. One end of the lounge is placed against the wall to form the head. Above this, at the height of the picture molding, a wooden shelf has been placed on brackets. The wall space from the shelf down to the lounge is covered flatly with chintz. The shelf is covered and has a twelve inch ruffle of chintz hanging across the front of it, while a long, narrow chintz curtain hanging from each side of the shelf inclosed the head of the improvised bed.

The couch cover with a ruffle touching the floor clear around it is also made of chintz, trimmed with a little taffeta ribbon quilling. The side curtains and valance are lined with silk. It is a charmingly simple girl's bed. As the room is small, space had to be economized.

Instead of a dressing table, a wide shelf has been secured to the window sill; this is covered with chintz, and has a chintz flounce hanging to the floor around it. On the shelf is a small mirror made into a little piece of furniture known as a shaving stand. A white curtain back of the mirror, hanging close to the window pane, gives light enough to dress by and secures privacy. The inside curtain of chintz matches the bed curtains. The whole arrangement is practical, attractive, and inexpensive, giving as it does the convenience of toilet table and clothes press, with the least possible infringement of space.

The illustration shows a new style four poster bed. Upright space at the head is covered with printed linen, of geranium pink flowers and geranium green leaves, closely covering a black ground. The encircling valance and the corner curtains that are knotted at the posts are of geranium green sunfast. The bed cover is of geranium pink, with a double blade plaited ruffle of dull green over a wide flounce of the same. The strips on top are of embroidered black velvet ribbon.

It is remarkable how one little detail in a room will call for the complete revolutionising of the entire decorative scheme. A woman who had a room painted dull blue and furnished in fumed oak had a frieze above the picture molding in a design of upstanding conventionalized tulips traversed by an arabesque scrolling, ornate in design, but subdued to blue in color. On the walls were several framed photographs, and one rather posterlike picture, divided into small panels, in bright colors. She had a brass bed and a Marseilles quilt.

Some one who was creative artist enough to undertake a psychological experiment gave her a fine simple Japanese print (blue sky, a bird silhouetted against a full moon, and cherry blossoms), and seeing that she was crudely incognizant, said in giving it, "You will see a great deal in this after a time." She brought it home and put it on the wall of her little blue room, and in the morning when her eyes were lifted to it she saw, first of all, that the worried scrolling of the frieze wouldn't do.

She thought she would cover "that horrible arabesque" with plain Japanese matting. The owner didn't object; she would take it down when she moved. The poster paneled picture had a cheap look. She would hang that in the hall. What about the photographs? A folio—or drawer—might hold them. The brass bed seemed positively glaring. A plain wooden bed should replace it.

Then that very day, in passing through a rug department, she spied a rug from Japan. It was made of folded strips of felt about an eighth of an inch wide, in shades of blue from bluish white to navy, crossed in and out like the mat work children do in kindergarten.

When the clerk assured her that this soft hand woven mat would wash without running, she bought it as a cover for her bed. She took down the figured curtains in her room and left only plain white muslin ones hung close to the glass. And in the morning when her eyes lifted again to the Japanese print she saw in dwelling on it—O, I could never begin to tell you, so much was revealed to her contemplative inner eyes while her vision rested, undisturbed by scrolls and brass and posters, on the fluttering bird, the disklike moon, and the cherry blooms unfolding their petals to the night blue sky.

Answers to Queries.

MRS. J. F. C.: Since you have no door between the dining room and kitchen, I would suggest the use of a screen rather than a curtain. It would be less in your way on going in and out, particularly when carrying a tray. Get a drop leaf table for your dining room and no formal dining room set. Have several chairs of different sorts and make it a comfortable lounging room. If space allows, have a sofa in it, or settee of some sort. Keep to light colors for your bedrooms. Just what painting are you to have done in your bedrooms? I do not understand whether you mean to paint the woodwork or the walls.

MRS. M. M.: For a large bedroom, if the light is north, use a yellow flowered cretonne. If south or west, a gray flowered cretonne would be better. There is no objection to an invisible stripe on the side walls used with figured cretonne. If you apply to the gas company it will give you all particulars as to the possibility of gas floor lamps, but kerosene lamps are always available and are just as attractive as the electric lights. I should like any of the furniture which you describe better than the leather and would particularly desire a border painted with apple blossoms on it. Potted plants in the windows are lovely. In doing decorative work be careful not to paint realistic flowers. Conventionalized motifs are far more correct.

MRS. S. E. E.—It is an entirely feasible plan to use your dining room and living room as one room. Give to your dining room all of the character of a library by placing your sectional bookcases there. If you could do away with that slight obstruction that you have between the hall and the living rooms the hall could be included in the general living room effect. Do not have anything in your dining room that will rob it of the appearance of being a library. Dispose of the buffet, and keep your dishes, silver, etc., in the pantry. One type of the long narrow table that adapts itself well as a combination library table and dining room table is the Jacobean. It is made with a shelf that slips in at either end, instead of having adjustable leaves, so that when it is closed it makes a good sized center table and when open it is long enough to accommodate a number of people. Many adaptations of antique furniture, well made and of good material, are preferable to exact reproductions, inasmuch as they do not necessitate absolute fidelity of the same detail in any other article in the room. Many good models are in the market that suggest Jacobean furniture without being too precise. If you prefer to have accurate adaptations of any period pieces, be sure that everything else in the room conforms to accuracy. Davenports are being placed anywhere in the room except against the wall. Place your upright piano in such a position that a singer standing near it may face the full length of the two rooms.

K. D.: Tan on ligh gray is a good color for your living room. If you wish the checkerboard decoration, have it in brown and cream on the tan or in deep gray and white on gray. In the room where you are to use your cherry set, have the wall light greenish gray. The checkering is often done by stencil. You could easily do it yourself.

WOMEN SHAVE UNKNOWINGLY

When women are so unwise as to use so-called hair removers, they actually shave unknowingly because such preparations stimulate hair growth after each removal.

The proper way to remove hair is to devitalize it. It is impossible to accomplish this result with pastes and rub-on preparations because they only remove hair from the surface of the skin. DeMiracle, the original liquid depilatory, devitalizes hair by attacking it under the skin as well as on the skin.

Imitations of DeMiracle are as worthless as pastes and rub-on preparations because they lack certain ingredients that DeMiracle alone contains which give it the power to rob hair of its vitality—its life sustaining force.

Buy a bottle of the genuine DeMiracle today and you will get the original liquid hair remover. Others are worthless imitations—refuse them. Remember, you are not asked to buy DeMiracle on a mere promise of your money being refunded. DeMiracle is the only depilatory that has a binding guarantee in each package which entitles you to the refund of your money if it fails.

DeMiracle is sold at all good stores, including the Public Drug Company and Buck & Rayner's five stores. The truth about the treatment of superfluous hair mailed in plain sealed envelope on request. DeMiracle Chemical Co., Dept. D, Park Ave. and 120th St., New York.—Advertisement.

The GARDENER AT WORK

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

The Garden Editor will give expert advice on planning gardens, organizing garden clubs, and planting flowers, vegetables, or shrubs. Address The Garden Editor, "The Tribune."

THE GLORY OF THE GARDEN.

"WANTED: Flower missionaries." This sign stared at the residents of a suburban village from every post. It was an easy going town of grassy yards and women complaining of dullness. By and by it was known that a newcomer who loved flowers had printed the signs and every one gossiped, and a garden club was formed.

Flower missionaries are needed everywhere. Many yards have some flowers, but few know how to make the most of the soil. It is an art to arrange flowers in good taste and to keep a succession of bloom from spring until frost. A gardener studying a lot, looking at pictures in garden books and magazines, making lists of hardy and annual flowers at date of bloom, will become an expert. A woman at home or a busy person with only a few hours to work in the week will find a pleasure that grows with a lifetime. The flower missionary calls on home gardeners to wake up.

A small fenced yard offers a fence background for vines, shrubs, and perennials. There are the ramblers, Dorothy Perkins, Lady Gay, and Seven Sisters in pink, the white Baltimore Belle and the yellow rambler. A Japan honeysuckle climbs for spring, a wistaria for June, a clematis paniculata for autumn. Shrubs fill up corners, tall foxgloves, delphiniums, aquilegia, golden glow, and rudbeckias like a fence background.

Hollyhocks should be planted for a succession of bloom. Clumps of iris and peonies are flanked by cornflowers, calendulas, calliopsis, mignonette, candytuft, nasturtiums, asters, pinks, and the poppies that flower all summer. Think of the color when planting a seed. Distributing feathery foliage plants and white blooms among the colors adds to the glory of the garden.

FLOWERS IN THE PARKS.

Pilgrims to the parks are on the lookout for the peonies white and pink, the iris purple and gold, and the splendid blood red oriental poppies now in their prime this first week of June. After the rains they suddenly burst into glorious masses of color. The pansy beds in the parterres at Lincoln park are a tapestry of many hues. Gardener Higgins is happy over the flowering of his "grandmother's garden," in which there are perennials brought by visitors from every part of the world. Among the tradescantia (widow's tears), or spiderwort, are fine blossoms, royal blue and snowy white, those from China being more opulent than the wild American sort.

The perennial border and rose garden at Humboldt park are opening flowers. The west park president says these are second to none in the country. Peonies, columbines, dicentra, lupins, and pyrethrums are in bloom.

In Garfield park the fern houses, with an aquatic display of tropical water lilies and orchids, rival the formal gardens out of doors. By the middle of June the best herbaceous plants will be in flower.

Douglas park makes a show of blossoming shrubs.

This week the flowering locust will perfume the atmosphere everywhere in the park system. The mock orange is making a show of its sweet scented blossoms.

For roses, the Wooded island in Jackson park ranks first. In Washington park and wherever there are masses of the rosa ragusa pink and white flowers are open. Yellow roses are also showing their sunshine against the sweet briers.

Wild geraniums, shooting stars, mertensia, or blue bells, and wild heliotrope are found in the suburbs. The wild dogwoods are adorned with bunches of creamy flowers. After the warblers have come the martins and swallows. Orioles and many small birds like to sip the nectar in the flower cups. The martins are feasting on the insects brought by the damp spell.

REPLIES TO QUERIES.

MRS. HENRY—The fleur de lis (German iris) is the old standard flag bearing majestic flowers of three upright curled petals and three drooping petals. It is distinct from the Japanese iris (Iris Kaempferi) of orchidlike form. The Japanese species is hardy. It will succeed in almost any mellow soil. By selection a succession of blossoming iris can be had to hold over the summer. June is the chief season of bloom. Certain species prefer moist places, others dry, and some are tall and gorgeous, while others are dwarf, but still pretty.

AMATEUR: Think of your plants as pets or children and treat them with consideration. Try to put yourself in their place and ask yourself what you would want. Successful gardeners remember plants are living things. Only by so doing can you be happy in a garden.

F. L. P.: Cannas may be planted now. Ask for the orchid in shades of red and yellow at $1 a dozen. The named sorts cost more.

YOUNG GARDENER—Sweet Williams set now will stay in your lot for years. June is their month.

ELSIE E.: Scales on house ferns must be picked off by hand or take a paint brush and treat with fir oil or kerosene.

My Most Embarrassing Moment.

Into the Cactus.

"The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on the subject "The Most Embarrassing Moment of My Life Was When ——." Address Embarrassing Moments Editor, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. Write on only one side of the paper. No manuscripts will be returned.

My most embarrassing experience was when I was thrown from a horse and landed on top of a giant cactus that grew in my sweetheart's yard. I had been bragging about my riding ability till everybody was tired of hearing me, so one Sunday my girl's brother hired a horse at the local livery stable and had him on hand when I arrived.

I was soon mounted and staging a miniature wild west show. At the end of a terrific charge I pulled the horse upon his haunches and, turning in the saddle, carelessly placed my hand just in rear of the saddle. The horse made one stiff legged jump which unseated me, and into the cactus I sailed. As I vainly tried to pick the cactus spines from the small of my back my embarrassment and humiliation can be imagined. W. R. B.

Love Letters of a Lonely Girl

This is the conclusion of the series of "Love Letters of a Lonely Girl" which have been appearing in "The Sunday Tribune."

DEAR YOU: Tonight I'm so excited! Since writing you this morning I have been in a police court! Yes, truly, I have. No, not arrested myself, but I had some one else arrested, although I didn't know that was what I was doing until afterwards. I missed my business appointment, but I'm not a bit sorry about it. When I ran for the car this noon, being late, I saw a man midway of the street, beating his horses, horribly—not with a whip but with a shovel! Enraged he had cut the tendons of their back feet—their blood was covering the street.

First it sickened, then frightened, and then angered me so that I ran across the street, and grabbing the man's arm, demanded what he was doing. With an oath he glowered back at me and shook himself free of my hands. I was too angry to be afraid of his oaths.

"How dare you—you worse than beast," I cried, snatching at the shovel in his hands. Easily he swung it out of my reach and raised it to again strike the poor, quivering animals. Then I think I "saw red," as the boys say, I rushed at him, might and main, to push him away. He toppled over and rolled in the street—the unexpected onrush and the uplifted shovel unbalancing him. He sprang up and at me with a torrent of abuse when a very quiet, deliberate voice said: "That's enough now—come here." The man fell back sullen but subdued. It was the big policeman on our beat.

"Do you want me to run this fellow in, Miss?" he asked.

"Yes," I said, angry still, "run him anywhere, after that"—pointing to the bleeding hoofs.

"Lead those horses and follow us," he commanded.

As we walked down the street the policeman told me I would have to "testify." I thought he meant to some society or agency for protection against such things, but instead it was a police court! The judge was a tall, thin man with a very red nose and eyes that lighted up with a twinkle as he looked at me.

"How was it, little lady?" he asked—and I told him.

The fellow who had beaten the animals whined out a denial, but the big policeman said: "The horses are outside the door, your honor—see for yourself." And the judge did see, and came back looking very stern. He ordered the horses, in mercy, to be shot, and sentenced the man for sixty days somewhere or other—a workhouse, I think—with contemptuous brevity.

"Are you a member of the humane society?" the judge asked me.

"No, sir—no society at all; I was just angry and wanted him punished."

"Be seated and wait," he said to me and took up the telephone.

In a little while a big automobile rushed up and a lady entered the courtroom. The judge beckoned me.

"Here, Mrs. L., is a little lady deserving of training for your humane work. I'll turn her over to you that in future she may know a better way to help such cases than to appear herself." Then briefly he told her about the horses. The lady smiled, leaned over and pinned a little white button on my blouse, saying, "That will make you a regular worker."

Then she brought me home in her machine and explained to me how to get help from the society in such instances. That I was too young to be in police courts alone. She was very dear and sweet about it.

But, dear, dear You, I am always "too young" or too inexperienced, or "too something or other" for any particular circumstance or work that may arise, it seems! Little Me! And a big disapproving world, even of my best!

Well, never mind. If the message of the white rose be true, You will approve of me and the world won't matter—then. I'm almost afraid to say good night, fearing to dream of a street fight and bleeding horses. And do you, will you like a girl with such an awful temper? Please do, for most times I'm good—and the poor, dumb suffering things couldn't talk for themselves or fight either—that brute man.

For your good night cup—my heart filled with love.
BETH.

DEAR YOU: I just want to say good morning, thank you for the white rose messenger, and to tell you that I'm going to wear it this day for luck because of a dream I had last night.

I thought I was walking through the twilight, when suddenly out of the sky came softly towards me a beautiful star. It approached nearer and nearer, poised itself before me, then settled within the heart of the white rose I wore; a thousand rainbow colored lights shimmered from it over me. O, it was a wonderful, wonderful dream, dear You. I take it for a good omen and so this day will wear your rose.

Wellington Holme, if he were here, would have some poetical interpretation of that dream! I think of him this morning, dear You, because the newspapers are filled this day with accounts of his "exquisite masterpiece, called 'Sisters,' on private exhibition at one of the down town galleries." The critics give it unstinted praise. How I wish I might see it.

I am wondering when he painted "Sisters"—who posed for it—and most of all I wonder what has become of the picture for which I posed so long—the Great Madonna; I mean Magdalene, as it turned out to me. He never spoke to me about a picture called "Sisters." I thought the picture for which I posed was to be his "masterpiece"—in effort at least! I must telephone Janet Dorr and ask her to get me a ticket to see this picture called "Sisters."

The maid interrupted me with a letter, a special letter, that is, it was sent special but there is no letter in it—only a ticket which reads: "For the private exhibition of the masterpiece of the artist, Wellington Holme, called 'Sisters.'"

O, dear, dear You, please forgive me if I leave you right now. I must go—at once—and pardon the disconnected scrawliness of this letter, too—I'm terribly excited—I'm going to see the picture! But I'll take You—and the white rose with me. Bye—au revoir until evening.
BETH.

DEAR, DEAR YOU: For months I've been walking in the twilight of loneliness and aloneness. But the beautiful star has descended from the skies and bejewels the white rose of my womanhood—the dream was prophetic!

When I slipped into the gallery this noon to see Wellington Holme's masterpiece, the "Sisters," Fashion had already preceded me—the place was filled. I slipped into a shadowy corner to wait until a lull should come in the processional stream of folk and comment. I felt I must be alone when I looked upon his—no, our work. For the premonition was strong upon me that the "Great Madonna" and this picture were somehow the same. At last I was alone. Fashion had gone for its luncheon and gossip.

Slowly I walked toward the picture. Awe and reverence and astonishment flooded me; understanding gripped me; forgiveness of my petty fancied insult swept over me; humility of not having understood the man almost brought me to my knees before that marvelous work.

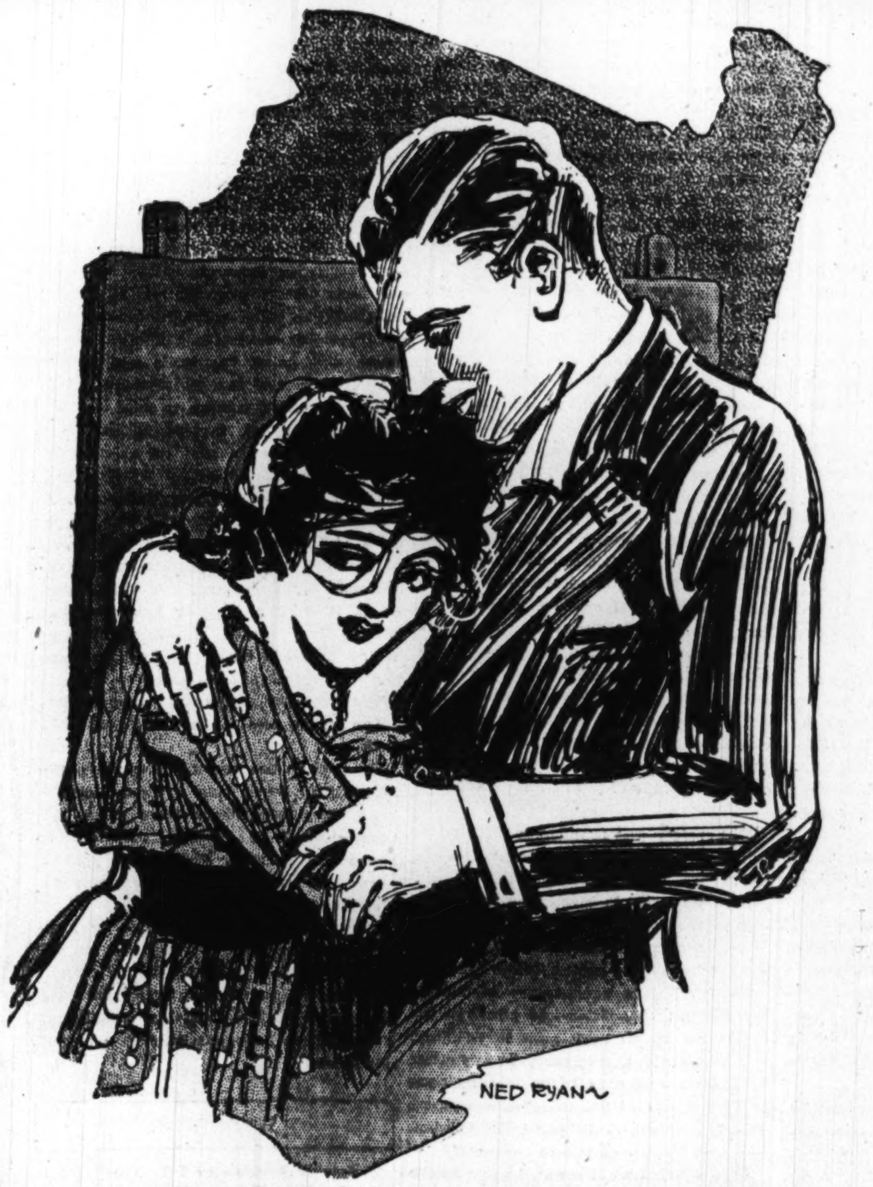
A white, enthroned, shadowy Christ, with eyes of infinite compassion and love; upon his left, kneeling, covered, with a diaphanous mantle of blue, her head under His hand and against his body was Mary, the Madonna! To the right, her face uplifted and under the ray of the nimbus about His head, kneeling also was Mary of Magdala, her hair a golden outspread veil. And the hands of the two Marys were clasped at the feet of the Christ! Sisters, indeed! And the faces of both Marys were—my own!

Tears sprang to my eyes for love of the sheer beauty of the concept. Reverently I took my white rose and laid it upon the picture—and knelt.

"Beth—my flower woman," a voice said.

I felt myself raised again by strong arms. Again I heard, "Beth, my little Beth—do you forgive me, now—do you understand?"

Mutely I surrendered. Mutely I understood—at last. And You, dear You, after all, stood enfolding me; no longer alone, nor lonely, nor seeking, my destiny outlined, my dreams "come true." My star of hope had descended and kissed my lips. I am content. No longer will loneliness attend. Some day when Time and Love will allow, these letters of loneliness will I show to my own dear You—my Wellington Holme. "God is in His heaven—all's right with the world." Love reigns supreme.
Your happy
BETH.



"I felt myself raised again by strong arms. Again I heard, 'Beth my little Beth—do you forgive me, now—do you understand?'"

By Mme. X.

We play, we plan, we fill our lives with the usual daily routine of duties and pleasure, just as we did a year ago, but under what a different sky! There is hardly any one who has not some personal connection with those engaged either in fighting or succor in that vast and terrible war zone.

Few have more widely separated interests among the various European contestants than Mrs. Louis Huck. Her three stepdaughters, children of the late Louis C. Huck, are, by their marriages, closely identified with three different war fronts. They were born and brought up in Chicago, and passed their youth in the now closed and disheveled house on the southeast corner of Grand avenue (formerly Indiana street) and Cass street, a residence which was a fine one in its day. Their mother was a beautiful German, with a lovely voice. She used to take part in special operatic performances. There were four children—Freda, Daisy, Albertine, and Henry—all extraordinarily good looking.

Freda married Baron Kunowski, a Saxon. Her only son, a youth of 19 or 20, was killed fighting the French in the first months of the war. Her husband is in the ranks opposed to the Russians. He has won the Iron Cross. She and her only remaining child, a daughter, are living at their country place near Dresden.

The second daughter, Daisy, married an Italian of an ancient and historic family, the Marchese Spinola. Her only child, a son, Carlo, aged 21, is in the same regiment with his father and both have been sent into active service.

The third daughter, Albertine, is married to an Englishman, Maldwin Drummond. Although her husband is not in active service, her heart is at the front with young Henry Field, her son by her first marriage to the late Marshall Field Jr. Mr. Field is driving an armored car conveying British officers to and from between the trenches and the rear, a service not without its peril, as a description in one of his recent letters of the explosion of a bomb directly overhead proves.

With what sadness must the three lovely sisters realize how widely they are separated! Their brother, Henry, is an invalid, but their half brother, Louis Huck, who is a student at Cornell, alarms his relatives by announcing that he is a loyal American and in case of any trouble between us and any foreign power would immediately enlist under the stars and stripes. As in our civil war there must be thousands of cases of members of families fighting on opposites sides.

Two well known Chicago girls, whose foreign marriages have brought them into direct contact with the war, are the former Miss Julia Grant and the former Miss Helen Goudy.

Miss Grant's marriage to Prince Cantacuzene, member of a distinguished Russian family, was an international event when it took place about twenty years ago. Prince Cantaçuzene went with his regiment into active service at the outbreak of the war and was desperately wounded early in the campaign. It took him months to recuperate enough to don his uniform and return to the front. He was not, however, sufficiently restored to take as active a part as before and now chafes in the more restricted duties of an aid on the Grand Duke Nicholas' staff. Probably his wife bears with greater equanimity than he this transference from the firing line to grand ducal headquarters.

After nursing her wounded husband all winter, Mrs. Gerard Leigh, who was formerly Miss Helen Goudy, has recently once more bade him farewell on his return to his regiment, fighting in Flanders. Early in the war he was slightly wounded and was nursed back to health in a field hospital. A few weeks later, a second set of wounds proving more serious, he was invalided home, where it has taken many months to enable him to pass the surgeon's muster and return once more to that terrible, long drawn out battle line.

The principal social doings of last week were the large club dinners at the Saddle and Cycle Wednesday and Saturday evenings, and the regular weekly luncheon there on Thursday and dinners given Thursday evening by the John Bordens, the John Carpenters, and the Ray Athertons—dinners which combined later in the evening at the Casino for dancing.

The William Monroes gave a spring fête Thursday evening, when spring poems, songs, and dances filled the program. A "spécialité de la maison" at the Monroes is a delectable punch brewed by the host himself from a secret formula.

The most notable event on the social calendar for the coming week is the suffrage dinner to be given at the Hotel La Salle Tuesday evening by the Chicago Equal Suffrage association in honor of the delegates to the meeting of the executive council of the National Woman's Suffrage association.

This meeting brings to Chicago most of the famous leaders in this movement, headed by the redoubtable Dr. Anna Howard Shaw. Mrs. Stanley McCormick, Mrs. Raymond Brown of New York, Miss Lucy Stone Blackwell, and a lot of others all arrive today and tomorrow for what will probably be one of the most important conferences ever held by suffragists.

The hostesses for Tuesday night's dinner expect about two hundred and fifty guests.

The two speakers of the evening will be the Illinois secretary of state, Louis Stevenson, who represents the governor, and Prof. W. I. Thomas, who fills the chair of sociology at the University of Chicago. Mr. Stevenson is a son of the late Adlai Stevenson and comes up from Springfield just for this occasion. He is a brilliant speaker.

Prof. Thomas has an international reputation as an authority on sociology and ethnology. His book on "Sex and Society," which was published a decade ago, is a widely known and popular work. Of late years he has been making a special study of our immigrants. He spends nearly half the year investigating them at the sources whence they come to this country. The other half he devotes to investigating in this country, noting the effect of the change of environment, climate, and conditions on them physically and mentally—a most interesting and important mission.

Dr. Shaw and many of her coadjutors will also make short addresses. The evening promises many points of view and much enlightenment.

Mrs. Cyrus H. McCormick is chairman of the reception committee. Miss Suzette Ryerson is chairman of the entertainment committee. Mrs. James W. Morrison, president of the C. E. S. A., will preside at the speakers' table, which will be on a raised platform and will seat about twenty guests.

Among those interested in the occasion and getting up tables are Mrs. Tiffany Blake, Mrs. Cecil Clark Davis, Mrs. Charles Hamill, Mrs. A. S. Peabody, Mrs. William H. Hale, Mrs. Mitchell Follansbee, Mrs. Paul Welling, Mrs. William P. Sidley, Mrs. William Monroe, Mrs. Richard Connell, Mrs. F. C. Letts, Mrs. Catharine Waugh McCulloch, Mrs. Dunlap Smith, Miss M. J. Rozet, Miss Cornelia Conger, and Miss Virginia Pope.

The occasion will be quite a foregathering of suffrage and society notables. The latter will include, besides those already mentioned, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Aldis, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh McBirney, Mr. and Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Elting, Mr. and Mrs. Julian Mason, George Porter, John McCutcheon, Arthur Heun, Horace Oakley, and Frank Hamlin.

With no blowing of trumpets or beating of drums one of the most touching, appealing, and humane of the many benevolent societies which beautify our community has recently obtained an abode on the north side, which enables it to carry on a part of its work with greatly increased facilities. The organization is the Illinois Society for Mental Hygiene and its main object at present is to help those who are in that sad, strange, unchartered borderland between the mentally efficient and those so mentally deficient as to need institutional care.

There is many a one headed for some of our state hospitals for the care of those of unsound minds who, if given a helping hand and a sympathetic word at the psychic moment, could be returned to the ranks of normal, self-supporting mortals. It is to these that this society with the long name addresses itself.

Among those far seeing, public spirited citizens who started it are Dr. Henry B. Favill, Sydney Kuh, Samuel Alschuler, Samuel A. Harper, Judge Harry Olson, William J. Calhoun, Harry Pratt Judson, Mrs. H. M. Wilmarth, Miss Jane Addams, and Miss Julia Lathrop. Mrs. William Monroe is its president and is giving herself heart and soul to the work. Judge Olson, Mrs. Wilmarth, and Dr. Favill are the vice presidents; Stephen T. Mather is treasurer and Miss Mary Rozet Smith is secretary.

Through the financial support of Mrs. Cyrus McCormick and her daughter, Mrs. Emmons Blaine, the society was able to rent, furnish, and equip a house at 157 East Ohio street in February. Here they give shelter, instruction, and a noon meal to many unfortunate fellow beings—men, women, and young girls—who, but for this well directed interest and encouragement, would be left behind in the rush of today, left behind to drift into the dreary, hopeless routine of public institutions.

This society was founded in 1910 and its articles of incorporation describe its object: "To coöperate with public and private agencies in improving the condition of the insane; to aid in the aftercure of patients discharged from the hospitals for the insane; to secure data regarding social conditions provocative of mental breakdown; to publish and circulate information which may help in avoiding mental disease, and to carry on any other proper work tending to secure and conserve the mental health of men, women, and children, and to enlist the interest and coöperation of others therein."

They started what is now known as the social service department of the County Psychopathic hospital. Their chief aim is, however, to try to prevent mental breakdown. They have had referred to them from fifty-one different agencies 5,013 cases clearly not institutional. Suitable occupation in a harmonious environment is the cure for many a seeming derelict.

The old house in East Ohio street has been fitted up and there basket weaving, sewing, embroidering, hand weaving, knitting, crocheting, silversmith work, carpentering, and other handicrafts are taught and fostered with the patient, loving care these not quite normal, completely equipped people need. The product of their labor is sold and the net proceeds, after the cost of the materials is deducted, is given to them. To many the help has come just in time to return them to the ranks of the normal and for these permanent positions have been found. Some take their work home with them. Others work at the society's home and have a midday meal, for which they pay if they can afford it. Otherwise they don't.

The organization gave two afternoon teas—one last Thursday and one the Thursday before—when the house was thrown open and the handiwork displayed. Such pretty, dainty things and such vivifying accounts of the workers and their victory over mental and physical disability! Bed quilts, garden aprons, silver jewelry, and boxes, baskets of every shape and color, rag mats and lovely drawn work, and lace pillows are a few among the articles there on sale.

A one armed girl, 18 years old, has been taught to make scarves on a knitting machine—for the society's work is not confined to the mentally deficient. A Hungarian silversmith, who was out of work and friendless, has a display there of really beautiful bracelets, necklaces, and pins, and a stunning box which looks as if it were a Magyar heirloom, but you by Mrs. Monroe, Miss Elnora Thom- which he made entirely. Regular work has now been found for him.

The house and its contents grip your ants.

To enable the society to receive the sympathies when they are explained to generous contributions from Mrs. McCormick and Mrs. Blaine, its executive board has to raise $6,000 each year—a great task in these times of many demands from all sides.

The promoters of the Marie De Page memorial fund have raised all but the last thousand of their $20,000 for a flying field hospital for the Belgian forces. Mrs. George Isham, Dr. McArthur, and George Porter have been particularly active in this work.

MRS. STANLEY McCORMICK

MRS. JAMES LEES LAIDLAW

Three of the women who are interested in the suffrage conference which opens today in Chicago are Mrs. Stanley McCormick, who is first vice president of the National American Woman's Suffrage association; Mrs. Medill McCormick, who besides being on the national board of directors is chairman of the congressional committee, and Mrs. James Lees Laidlaw, who represents New York in the conference.

By Inez Travers.

THE outlook for the suffrage convention which convenes in Chicago today is, to say the least, auspicious. When Mrs. McCormick first thought of calling the convention there were the usual criers of ill omen before the answers came flooding into her office. Not only have the delegates rallied to the cause, but also the local women who are interested are doing all in their power to make the conference a success.

The convention really began yesterday with a meeting of Mrs. Antoinette Funk, Mrs. Laura Puffer Morgan, Mrs. Helen Gardner, and the local members of the congressional committee. Mrs. Funk, Mrs. Morgan, and Mrs. Gardner are from Washington.

At the dinner which will be given on Tuesday evening at the Hotel La Salle by the Chicago Equal Suffrage association to the delegates to the national conference of the National American Woman Suffrage association the speakers will be as follows:

The secretary of state, Louis G. Stevenson.

Prof. W. I. Thomas of the University of Chicago.

Mrs. Grace Wilbur Trout, president of the Illinois Equal Suffrage association.

Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, president of the National American Woman Suffrage association.

Mrs. Harriet Burton Laidlaw of the New York woman suffrage party.

Mrs. Frank M. Roessing, president of the Pennsylvania Woman Suffrage association.

Miss Alice Stone Blackwell, president of the Massachusetts Woman Suffrage association and editor of the Woman's Journal.

Mrs. Gertrude Halladay Leonard, from the same association.

Mrs. Susan W. Fitzgerald of the Political Equality union of Massachusetts.

The dinner will be given in honor of the presidents of the campaign states—New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and Massachusetts—where the question of woman suffrage will be submitted to a vote of the people in November of this year.

Mrs. James W. Morrisson will preside at the speakers' table.

Tables have been engaged by Mrs. K. W. McCullough and Miss Harriet Vittum of the Woman's City club, and two tables have also been engaged by Mrs. H. Ward Cooney of the Chicago Woman's club. The Woman's club has offered its rooms to the convention for conferences or the entertainment of guests.

The reception committee for the convention is composed of the presidents and representatives of various clubs. Mrs. Cyrus McCormick is chairman, and the members are Mrs. H. Ward Cooney, representing the Woman's club; Miss Mary McDowell, for the Woman's City club; Mrs. Willis McRea, Chicago Equal Suffrage association; Mrs. C. W. Thompson of the Political Equality league; Mrs. Charlotte Rhodus of the Woman's party; Mrs. Catharine Waugh McCulloch, Mrs. Grace Wilbur Trout, and Mrs. James Stevenson.

On Monday at noon the Illinois Equal Suffrage association will give a luncheon at the Hotel La Salle for the national board, and on Tuesday Mrs. Medill McCormick will give a luncheon also at the La Salle for the visitors.

The Chicago Woman's club offered its rooms for the entertainment of guests or for conferences.

Some of the delegates are being entertained as house guests during the convention. Mrs. Pattie R. Jacobs and Mrs. A. M. Taylor are stopping with Mrs. W. G. Hale in Astor street; Mrs. Charles Passmore is the guest of Mrs. G. C. Prussing, and Dr. Anna Shaw is the guest of Mrs. Morrisson.

NEW YORK SOCIETY

With the Death of Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish and with the Vanderbilts in Mourning, the Social Season in Newport Is Blighted.

by Mme. Y.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—New York society is sad. It would seem tha Newport this year might not be gay, with so much of death and disaster hovering in the background of the lives of those who flit away their summers there. With the four hundred's leader, Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, dead and the entire Vanderbilt connection in heavy mourning, the summer capital of America cannot be quite so happy as customarily. Still preparations have been going on there for a grand reunion of all the branches of the smart set, everybody who customarily goes abroad is planning to join the summer colony of Newport, and the gayety of wholesome spirits is sure to assert itself.

Meantime the only activities of the week centered round the Vanderbilt memorial service and the burial of Mrs. Fish. Both were solemn and impressive, leaving a burning memory in heart and mind. The white depths of the palace of the Vanderbilts were like a cathedral in its hushed splendor when the service was read for Alfred, the late head of the house, who died in the wreck of the Lusitania in his thirty-eighth year. No hint was made of the way he met his death except that the service embraced the prayer for the burial of the dead at sea. The service was held at 10 o'clock at the residence of his mother, Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, at 1 West Fifty-seventh street, and was attended by about 200 relatives and friends.

The service was conducted by two rectors, the Rev. Dr. Leighton Parks and the Rev. Dr. Frederic Goodman of St. Mary's church of Newport, which Mr. Vanderbilt attended when at Oakland Farm. Although invitations were sent out, the family seemed to make no objection to the presence of any casual friend who dropped in to pay his respects to the son of the house. A squad of uniformed detectives was on duty outside the house, and obviously several detectives were present.

The service was most impressive. It was held in the large vaulted hall of marble on the Fifty-seventh street side of the palace, and the hall was transformed into a chapel. There was an altar at the west end of the hall, where lighted candles burned against a background of roses and palms. In the dim light a cross of pink roses glowed brightly against the wall, and it had made into it a smaller cross of white roses.

At a few minutes before 10 o'clock the members of the immediate family entered, dressed in deepest mourning. His little son, William H Vanderbilt, by his former wife, was with Mrs. Vanderbilt. Mr. and Mrs. Reginald and Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Vanderbilt, Mr. and Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, and Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt Jr., with her two children, were those present who bore the family name. The dead man's sister, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, with her husband, were the other members of the immediate family, and Mrs. William Douglas Sloane. As they came in a quartet of singers on the mezzanine balcony of the grand marble staircase sang "Lead, Kindly Light." "Peace, Perfect Peace," "I Heard a Voice from Heaven," and "Abide With Me."

The hall filled rapidly, and to accommodate the overflow William Fitz Hugh Whitehouse threw open the big door into the suite of rooms on this side of the house. From the chapel one could look through that door at family portraits of the Vanderbilts and their ancestors. Rich tapestries relieved the dead whiteness of the Gothic walls, through which spread a solemn stillness whenever the music ceased. The dim lighting of the candelabra cast long, vague shadows. It was sobering and led the grief stricken circle to awed reflections on life and death.

Very different indeed was the funeral of Mrs. Fish, which was attended by almost all of the four hundred. It took place from her husband's estate at Garrison-on-the-Hudson, and might almost have been from its character a continuation of an entertainment she was planning to take place there next week, as a gay opening for her social season.

This great hostess, who got up more wonderful spectacles than some of the professional managers of the country, had long ago planned some of the details of her own funeral, and they were not somber. In accordance with her design, she was covered with a blanket of bright red roses. The services took place in the little church at Glenclyffe, with a chancel covered in bright spring flowers. Those who had been invited to her fancy entertainment for next week went up in a special train for the services.

The coffin was carried into the church by employes of the estate, who had borne it with uncovered heads through the hilly and tree lined paths from the house. Many old friends and townspeople lined the walk near the entranceway as the coffin, covered with its bright blanket, passed. At the door it was met by the clergyman and the choir boys who sang "Lord, Let Me Know Mine End." The body was laid to rest in a quiet corner of the churchyard under an embracing elm. Thereupon the vast throng of her sorrowing friends returned to the noisy city, in whose life, civic and social, she had taken so large a part, and they said to one another that it would miss her kindly, cheering influence for many a day.

No one knows what disposition will be made of Crossways, the summer residence of Mrs. Fish at Newport, where so many of the world famous entertainments of the four hundred have been given. Within the last two years it has been made over and equipped with a fine Louis XVI. ballroom. Some one was saying the other day that Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt might buy it. They have never owned a residence at this favorite watering place of theirs, but have year after year rented Beaulaau, an estate there which is very pretty but inadequate to their needs. Mrs. Potter Palmer had it one year.

Oakland Farm, the Newport place of Alfred Vanderbilt, has changed hands. By his will it goes to his eldest son, whose mother is Mrs. Elsie French Vanderbilt. The boy is about 9 years old. Alfred, with his wife and two children, made it their official residence while in America. One of the children was there at the time of his death. Mrs. Alfred says she will return there no more.

The TRIBUNE'S WEEKLY ALMANACK

JUNE

A Slice of June.

OVER a bit of marsh red winged blackbirds fly. Three sit motionless, like elder statesmen, on stout reeds. In the junipers on a firm bit of ground two scold at the human who has invaded their precincts, moderating their displeasures occasionally to run into a trill of notes indicating that all happiness was not destroyed by the invasion.

A bit of lake beyond the firm ground reflects the afternoon sun. There is a bank of wild columbine. An oriole flashes in and out of the light, preens and makes his toilet, cheating the eye by extending himself to twice the dimensions of his modest normality and thus becoming a thing not only of radiance but of startling proportions.

In a small juniper a little tangle of white, cottony material gets casual observation, which, becoming interested observation, discovers a half built nest. The water gently touches the rocks above which the columbine grows and the murmer and warmth coax restlessness to restfulness.

Overhead, suspended from three twigs, is an oriole's nest and above it the father of the family that is to be perches to sing to the partner of his joys and sorrows who sits through the ecstatic tedium of hatching.

Sun and song invite to the oblivion of lotus eating. In and out of the small junipers goes a timid bit of yellow, insists upon being noticed, is obviously distracted. A lazy glance following the flash of yellow sees a finch. Another lazy glance finds a bit of white cottony material in the bill of the finch. A lazy mind gradually comprehends that there might be a relation between the half finished nest and the finch with the little piece of building material.

Intrusion is brutal; withdrawal only decent. The last backward look sees the finch in the nest.

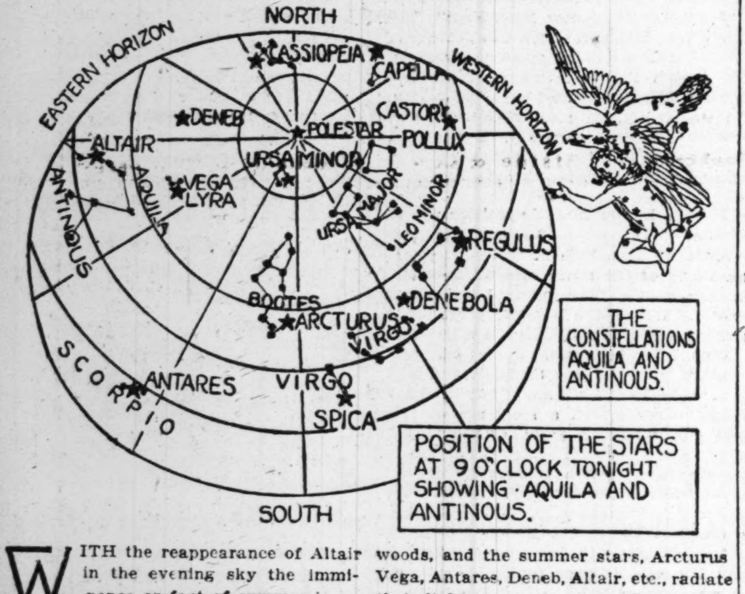
ASTRONOMY.

ALTAIR BACK IN THE EVENING SKY.



POSITION OF THE STARS AT 9 O'CLOCK TONIGHT SHOWING AQUILA AND ANTINOUS.

WITH the reappearance of Altair in the evening sky the imminence or fact of summer is established. The summer sky is filled. The winter sky has gone. The false Solomon's seal has its buds ready; the wild rose is swelling; fledglings are in the nests; young green corn is up; the wild geranium modestly flecks the woods, and the summer stars, Arcturus Vega, Antares, Deneb, Altair, etc., radiate their light across the space of their light years upon the northern earth in foliage.

Altair is a near neighbor. Only fourteen light years, two steps in the distances of the universe, separate it from the earth. It is a sun for sentimentalists. The choicest legend of the skies concerns it and the great and brilliant Vega. On earth Altair was the Shepherd Boy and Vega was the Spinning Damsel, lovers, of course. A cruel father and both were transported to the skies, one on one side of the Milky Way and one on the other. The cruelty was not uncompromising. Once each year, on July 7, they might meet if they might find a way to bridge the Milky Way. For this kind service magpies were ordained. They were to form a bridge across the Way and thus permit Altair to cross. If it rained the Way was swollen and the magpies could not complete the span.

The legend is of the far east and in Corea and Japan children stone a magpie that is found about its accustomed haunts on the day it ought to be performing its duty toward the lovers. If it rained the night of July 7, it was known as the Rain of Tears. The magpies could not make the span.

Altair is the bright star of the constellation of the Eagle, Aquila, the eagle that Jove employed on his errands and sent down for Ganymede when Hebe stupidly stumbled and spilled a bowl of ambrosia. The companion constellation, however, is a representation of the time of the Emperor Hadrian, who lost a favorite, the beautiful boy Antinous, in the Nile.

The shoulder of Antinous is one of the famous variables of the sky. It is eight degrees below Altair and is known as Eta. It varies from the third and a half magnitude to the fourth and a half magnitude and changes every seven days, four hours, fourteen minutes, and four seconds. It is yellowish and can be followed by the unaided eye.

Altair is the third nearest first magnitude star visible in northern latitudes. Sirius and Procion are nearer. It sends out ten times more light than our sun. It has two companions and the three somewhat resemble the belt of Orion, but are not so bright. Altair is the middle star.

With Vega and Deneb it forms a triangle, Altair being in the apex.

TABLOID BOOK REVIEW

by FANNY BUTCHER

The Author of "Open Market."

FROM New York comes this note, which is so pleasant as well a illuminating to read that I quote it intact. It came especially opportunely, as Mrs. Bacon's latest book, "Open Market" (Appleton), has just appeared.

I had a most delightful lunch with Mrs. Josephine Daskam Bacon on Thursday at the Colony club. Mrs. Bacon was once a townswoman of mine, and all my life I have been told of the wonderful things she has done and could do, until I confess I was not prepared for any surprises on Thursday. But I was all wrong. You never could know the last interesting thing about that remarkable woman.

She is just 39 years of age, a fact she willingly admits. But no wonder—she looks 29 or younger. There doesn't seem to be a thing domestic that she cannot do, yet her childhood days were filled with the greatest freedom from feminine frills and fancies. Dolls bored her, but her babies, three of them, are her real and chief pleasure. Housework was never taught her [I suppose she was never in the house long enough], but she manages successfully to superintend the entire work of her large country place at Pleasantville, N. Y., where she not only attends to buying every pound of butter and every lump of sugar, etc., used on the place but every pint of gasoline, every bit of harness; even every little pup on the place receives the personal attention of the mistress of Beech Hill.

She is the most versatile and energetic woman I have met in many moons, but to look at her and to hear her talk one would get the impression that her life is absolutely free of anything like detail, and it is hard to believe she ever does much else than play. She has written no less than twenty-one novels and any number of short stories and a great deal of poetry.

The deah of Rupert Brooke, the young English poet-soldier, brings sadness to the hearts of the many Chicagoans who met him when he was here two years ago. He is the first of England's poets to give his life for his country in the great war, and the manner of his death seems especially ironical to those who remember his amazing vitality. Any one of us might have been slain by "the arrows of Apollo." Sunstroke is such a trivial seeming disease. And yet the man whose vigor of body and mind made meeting him an experience long to be remembered has been taken away thus casually. In the Isle of Lemnos he lies buried now. For his own epitaph he wrote: "If I should die, think only this of me: That there's some corner of a foreign field that is forever England." Twenty-eight he was, and now he is no more. There remain of his work two volumes of poetry. The second volume is not yet off the presses in England. It is to be called "1914 and Other Poems." One can but hope that some American publisher will take over both of the volumes.

Kobu in Frances Little's "The House of the Misty Star" (Century) is the first Japanese detective to appear in American fiction, it is averred. You remember "The Lady of the Decoration," don't you? Frances Little wrote that, too. And, by the way, her real name is Fannie Caldwell Macaulay.

Annie S. Peck is well known as a mountain climber and a pioneer. Her latest book, "The South American Tour" (Doran), attracted much commendation. She has gone into a new field now. She's proving that living well isn't an insurmountable mountain at all, and that the cost of living isn't modified in every case by the adjective high. She's living on 25 cents a day. Fruits and cereals and a cup of good coffee at 19 cents a pound (she knows where good coffee can be bought for that, apparently—I don't) form her breakfast. A cake of milk chocolate, a banana, or some oatmeal with raisins in it she finds a satisfactory and nourishing luncheon. She doesn't confide the menu of her dinner, but it also is undoubtedly satisfying and nourishing to her, though to us it might seem a bit meager.

"Frank Danby" is seriously ill in her country home in England. The word came to me the other day as news of that sort has a way of coming—so unexpectedly that it didn't seem possibly true. Hers is such a virile pen that the quivering of the hand that held it seems incredible. At any moment other word may come, unwelcome to those many friends of hers who have come to care sincerely for what she has to say. One can but hope against the grave head shakings of the specialists who have said she cannot recover.

"The Propagation of Wild Birds" (Doubleday-Page) is the title of the splendid manual of applied ornithology which Herbert K. Job has compiled. Mr. Job, who is head of the department of applied ornithology of the National Association of Audubon Societies, has done much successful experimenting with the propagation of wild birds on private estates. In this volume he shows how to induce birds to become permanent residents of country homes, whether of many or few acres.

Those interested in Frederick W. Taylor's "Principles of Scientific Management" (Harpers) will be glad to know that a recent review in the London Spectator emphasized the value of Mr. Taylor's principles in connection with the industries supplying munitions to such an extent that a large demand has been created in England for the book. Likewise a factory in Switzerland is going at the installation of the Taylor system with ardor. Mr. Taylor's death not long ago was a blow to the efficiency devotees, but apparently the work to which he gave his life is to be a monument to him now.

Some people are always escaping things and yet ever missing fatalities. Elizabeth Dejeans, author of "The Life Builders" (Harpers), has a life like that. She was in the late Japanese rebellion. She and her mother barely escaped with their lives by a midnight flight on the river huddled in the bottom of a sampan with rice sacks piled upon them. She was in the St. Louis cyclone, the Galveston flood, and the San Francisco earthquake.

"War Brides" (Century) has caused more comment than any other war play which has been produced. Those who have seen it say that Mme. Nazimova is achieving her greatest dramatic success in it. Certain it is that the little play is exceedingly impressive, probably because its author, Marion Craig Wentworth, was very sincere in writing it. "It just had to be done," she said. How it came to force itself upon her as a necessary thing to do is interesting. She was in Nevada for her little boy's health when the war broke out. One day she read in the newspapers an account of the weddings of young women to men who were leaving for the front. "The war brides were cheered with enthusiasm and the churches were crowded when the wedding parties spoke the ceremony in concert," she read, and that was the tinder that kindled her flame against it all. When she was back at home in Santa Barbara the first thing she did was to write "War Brides."

JOSEPHINE DASKAM BACON

Edward Lyell Fox, who collaborated with Dr. Armgaard Karl Graves in the writing of "The Secrets of the German War Office" (McBride-Nast), has completed an account of the five months he spent as a correspondent with the kaiser's army in France, Belgium, Austria, Russia, and Germany. It is called "Behind the Scenes in Warring Germany" (McBride-Nast).

From all the reports that have come from "One Man" (Kennerley), Robert Steele has done in it something of import in the literary world. "One Man" is called a novel, but it is in reality the autobiography of a plain American up to the age of 35. J. B. Kerfoot, after reading it in manuscript and again in proof, says of it: "Thousands upon thousands of just such lives as this one man's are being lived here in America. The thing, indeed, is of the essence of America. And yet no one—perhaps because no one has dared, but much more likely because no one has seen 'anything in it'—no one has set it down. I have just read the proofs and I am even more impressed by the thing than when I read it in manuscript in the spring. My compliments to Mr. Steele." H. L. Mencken says: "I know of no book more persuasive save it be the autobiography of Benvenuto Cellini."

"The Art of the Exposition" (Elder) is the title of a book by Eugen Nauhaus which will find its way into the suit cases of those expositionists who want to get all they can out of the unusual beauty of the architecture, the color scheme, the flora, and the mural decorations of this year's Mecca. The author is instructor of art in the University of California, chair-vacation spent in South America. Prof. Ross went everywhere, met everybody, quizzed statesmen, educators, business men, diplomats, ecclesiastics, and merchants. He put down conversations word for word as they occurred, and the startling statements which he makes are factual, not fanciful. The South American is infinitely more candid in speech than in print, he avers, and for that reason he used the record system of preserving their opinions. Mr. Ross is professor of sociology in the University of Wisconsin, and he has written other books of importance. You undoubtedly remember "The Changing Chinese."

Montague Glass, whose "Potash and Perlmutter" and later "The Competitive Nephew" (Doubleday-Page) brought their author fame and much fine gold, says he isn't a realist. "A realist," he says, "is a writer who faithfully reproduces an atmosphere that already exists. He reports, records. One of his distinguishing characteristics must be his attention to detail. The romanticist is as truthful as the realist, but he deals with a few large truths rather than with many small facts. For instance, I do not think that my stories would gain vividness if I should put all of the dialogue into dialect. So I put down the dialogue phonetically and spell my words correctly. The romanticist, you see, uses his own imagination and expects imagination in his readers." If Mr. Glass prefers to be called a romanticist nobody'll care as long as he goes on writing such delightful realistic stuff

Those who think that "Ruggles of Red Gap" (Doubleday-Page) is too good to be true will be glad to know that Ruggles appeared in the flesh one afternoon last month. It was in honor of the book sellers' convention. The conventionists received this unusual invitation: "Mr. and Mrs. C. Belknap-Jackson of Boston and Red Gap request the pleasure of your company at the Country club, Red Gap, on Thursday, the 13th of May, to meet Col. Marmaduke Ruggles of the British army. Tea, 4 to 7." They thought that they were just going out to Garden City to accept the proverbial hospitality of the Doubleday-Page gardens. They found that Ruggles, Cousin Egbert, Mrs. Belknap "Hyphen" Jackson, and all the others had come to life to say how do you do to them and to give them tea after the most approved Red Gap manner.

Romain Rolland, author of "Jean Christoph" (Holt), is one of the founders of the Revue des Nations, which is soon to appear under the editorship of M. Haeberlein of the University of Berne. The new review is to contain articles in French, German, and English. Its avowed purpose is to provide a "neutral tribune in which intellectuals belonging to all nations actually at war can explain themselves and discuss one another." The founders declare that it is no part of their program to promote peace at present or to formulate its conditions. They accept the present situation, and their purpose is to arrive at objective truth by calm, positive, and sincere discussion without either sentimentalism or acrimony. They intend to hold their pages open to free discussion. One pauses to ponder whether or not freedom of thought will be able to live amid the unreasoning hatred that war times bring.

Edward A. Ross' "South of Panama" (Century) is the record of a sociologist's relief fund. Between times he is busy about a novel which he has promised the Appleton company for fall publication.

ART

By Annie Ellis.

OWING to the water color exhibit and its neighbor to the north, the works of Victor Salvatore have been crowded out of these columns, not, however, because they have not been noticed and appreciated. But Victor Salvatore can thank these exhibits for the many stray visitors who come to the institute only for the much heralded displays and who, wandering about, came upon his excellent bronzes and marbles, which must have wakened murmurings even in their mundane souls.

Mr. Salvatore has that rare quality, complete sympathy with childhood, that even artists sometimes lack. He has three busts of small children that show that he must have gained not only the complete confidence of his small sitters but also their undivided interest. Not that the expressions on the faces are forced or attentive—they are rather the unselfconscious and interesting looks that children wear with their parents. The portrait of Susanne Richardson is particularly interesting.

Mr. Salvatore's models are all rather strongly chosen; in "A Weird Sister" he even shows a tendency towards interest in the grotesque, such as Rodin shows. The "Portrait of an Old Lady" displays his skill in the modeling of contour. The falling away under the chin that occurs in a full throated person with encroaching age is remarkable and also beautifully displayed in this bust.

His statue of Lincoln, however, is not done with either the spirit or the fidelity of his other work. It is stiff and rather stingy looking. The head he aptly calls "Medusa" is a piquant and interesting study, but one that does flatter the character of the model.

Mr. Salvatore, I imagine, is one who admires strength above all qualities, and possesses above all others that greater one, comprehension.

Now More Than Ever Before Women Appreciate Good Corsets

Third Floor—Center

And so now more than ever before will thousands of women appreciate this once-a-year opportunity to secure Nemo corsets at $2. The Nemo "Vacation Special" corset, while it is made of lighter weight fabrics and intended for summer wear only, demonstrates many of the Nemo characteristic specialties which cannot be found in any other corset, and so yearly adds thousands of women to the list of those who wear Nemo corsets exclusively. We prefer to fit the Nemo "Vacation Special" just as we do every corset we sell, for then we know that you've secured the model your figure should have. Our corsetieres are all graduates of the Nemo Hygienic Fashion Institute and are the most skilled in Chicago. Still for this fitting service no extra charge is made.

Made in styles for slender, medium and stout figures, but it is not a self-reducing corset. Its mission is to be a light, comfortable corset for hot days—you will want several pairs at the mountains and seashore. Nemo corsets are always body trainers and never give one an uncorseted appearance. There is not that tired, worn look on the face of the woman who wears a Nemo corset because there is no undue pressure on the stomach and her abdomen is supported.

$2 She is lighter on her feet, she is less tired after a long tramp. That is why these "Vacation Special" corsets are so popular with women who have worn them before. This corset store is always at your service. We appreciate how annoying it is when a woman unpacks her trunk and gets into her outing togs to find the size wrong or the model not quite suited to her figure. If we fit you there will be no disappointment. Sizes to 30, at.............................. $2

News of the Religious World

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

A DESIRE to unite in one church body the more than 2,000,000 Lutherans of the United States will find expression at the forty-fifth annual convention of the Chicago synod of the Evangelical Lutheran church, which will meet at Maywood beginning next Friday and continuing to the following Wednesday.

Delegates are to be elected at the convention who will be pledged to bring to Chicago in 1917 the national meeting of the various branches of the Lutheran church.

The general synod already decided to meet here in 1917 and the general council, in which the Chicago synod has official representation, will be asked to meet here.

On May 5 three branches of the Lutheran church—the Norwegian Evangelical Lutheran synod of America, the Hauge Norwegian Lutheran synod, and the United Norwegian Lutheran church, representing 1,200 ministers, 3,000 churches, and 300,000 communicants, drew up articles of agreement to effect a union under the name of the Norwegian Lutheran Church in America. The proposed meeting in Chicago in 1917 is to further advance the plan of union.

The Lutheran Woman's league of Chicago, which more fully than any other of the church organizations expresses this desire for union, will hold their June meeting at the seminary in Maywood next Tuesday. The league meeting is not a part of the convention, but is in close affiliation with it.

All the Lutheran synods which have churches in Chicago are represented in the membership of the league. They are the Augustana, Chicago, Danish, United Danish, Hauge, Northern Illinois, Missouri, Norwegian, United Norwegian, and Wartburg synods. The membership is about 1,000 women. The address at the meeting will be made by Miss Jessie Brewer of Guntur, India.

An essential part of the convention will be the meeting of the Woman's Missionary society, which will be held next Wednesday and Thursday at the Holy Trinity Evangelical Lutheran church, Elgin, of which the Rev. B. F. Hoefer is pastor.

On Tuesday, June 15, a report of the Woman's Foreign Missionary society's convention will be made to the Chicago synod convention in Maywood. Delegates who attend the meeting in Elgin will also attend the meeting at Maywood.

The Chicago synod will have about ninety delegates in attendance. The sessions will be held in the Lutheran seminary, Maywood. A unique feature will be that the delegates will live there during the entire convention and will occupy the rooms usually occupied by the theological students. Meals will be furnished by the various Chicago churches, who will contribute proportionately towards the expense.

The Rev. Elmer F. Krauss, D. D., is the newly elected president of the Maywood seminary. He became acting president at the death of the Rev. Dr. R. F. Weidner a few months ago.

The Rev. C. R. W. Kegley, pastor of the Epiphany church, South Sacramento boulevard and Lexington avenue, is president of the Northwestern conference, which comprises the churches of Chicago and the neighboring cities of Aurora, Elgin, and Woodstock.

Before coming to Chicago the Rev. Mr. Kegley was a home missionary. He built a church and parsonage each in Bluefield, West Va., and in Wilmington, N. C. He has purchased six lots in Chicago and has received an additional appropriation of $5,000 towards the erection of a church and parsonage to replace the temporary church building now occupied by the Epiphany congregation. The Rev. Mr. Kegley has traveled extensively in the United States and has twice visited the countries of Europe.

The Rev. Elmer F. Krauss is president-elect of the Lutheran seminary, Maywood, Ill., which will entertain the Chicago Lutheran synod June 11 to 16. The Rev. C. R. W. Kegley is pastor of Epiphany church, Chicago, and president of the Northwestern conference of the Chicago synod.

The Chicago convention will open Friday with a synodical sermon preached at 10 o'clock by the Rev. Benjamin F. Hoefer, Elgin, president of the synod.

Each morning at 8:45 o'clock the Rev. G. H. Gerberding, D. D., will lead devotional service. Saturday afternoon the subject, "Country Problems Confronting Our Church," will be presented by the Rev. C. L. Warstler of Whitestown, Ind. The following Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday afternoons the Rev. J. R. E. Hunt, pastor of the Church of the Redeemer, Chicago, will speak on "City Problems Confronting Our Church."

A memorial service in honor of the late President Weidner will be held Monday evening, June 14. The Rev. A. C. Anda, pastor of the Wicker Park church, who was the first graduate of the seminary, and the Rev. W. J. Seiberling, secretary of the synod, will make the addresses.

Money for the founding of a chair in the seminary in memory of Dr. Weidner is now being raised and it is expected that the observance of the memorial will give an added impetus to the effort.

Ministerial relief will be one of the subjects which will receive particular attenance. A fund of $1,000,000 is being raised by the general council, part of which is to be devoted to this purpose.

Next Sunday services will be held in the various churches, visiting ministers occupying the pulpits.

The following is the list already arranged for: Chicago, Holy Trinity, the Rev. Roy G. Catlin; Wicker Park, the Rev. M. L. Stirewalt; St. Luke's, the Rev. W. J. Seiberling; St. James', the Rev. C. L. Warstler; St. Peter's, the Rev. A. K. Walborn; Atonement, the Rev. C. S. Brewer; Epiphany, the Rev. F. L. Lineberger; St. Matthews, the Rev. R. E. M. Engers; Redeemer, the Rev. C. L. Hunt; Oak Park, Salem, the Rev. G. F. Dittmar; Maywood, St. John's, the Rev. A. H. Arbaugh; Aurora, Redeemer, the Rev. L. J. Smith; Elgin, Holy Trinity, the Rev. A. H. Keck.

At 4 o'clock there will be ordination services and a sermon by the Rev. M. E. Heberland. Reservations for entertainment at the convention are in charge of the Rev. H. B. Reed, 1600 South Eleventh avenue, Maywood.

The Rev. Oscar Homburger, rector of the Protestant Episcopal Church of the Advent, Logan boulevard and North Francisco avenue, will receive today the degree of doctor of civil laws from the Chicago Law school. The degree will be bestowed at 2 o'clock at the Cort theater.

Grace Protestant Episcopal church, Oak Park, will observe June 13 as the seven hundredth anniversary of the signing of the magna charta. Several British-American organizations will be present.

On Sunday, July 4, a citizens' day program will be held in the church at 11 o'clock. A brass band will play and patriotic hymns will be sung. The address of the rector, the Rev. F. R. Godolphin, will be on the subject "The Duties and Privileges of an American Citizen," and the offering will go to the Red Cross society. The men's club has arranged for the distribution of several thousand flags.

The annual ordination services of the diocese of Chicago of the Protestant Episcopal church will be held in the Cathedral of SS. Peter and Paul, Washington boulevard and Peoria street, at 11 o'clock today. Bishop Anderson will officiate.

The following graduates of the Western Theological seminary will be ordained: Clinton Bradshaw Cromwell, Wilbur Elliott, James Edward Foster and Hugh Millikin MacWhorter.

The Rev. Howard Adams Lepper, formerly of the Reformed Episcopal church, will receive deacon's orders and be ordained to the priesthood.

The Normal Park Methodist church, Seventy-first street and Union avenue, will celebrate today the third anniversary of the dedication of its church edifice.

The morning sermon will be preached by the Rev. Elbert Robb Zaring, editor of the Northwestern Christian Advocate. In the evening "The Holy City" will be rendered by a choir of thirty voices under the direction of R. Le Roy Gallaher.

$13.50 VACATION COMPLETE FRUITVALE MICHIGAN

We have our own cows. You can have all the fresh milk and cream you want. We raise our own vegetables—you can eat to your heart's content. We have our own Pigs and kill our own Cattle. We have 7,000 Chickens and you can eat all the fried chicken and have all the eggs you want. Home cooking.

We have spring beds and hair mattresses and they are new and clean. The blankets are new and everything is sanitary. Although we are up in the Big Woods, we have hot water baths and toilet facilities, just like in your own. No other Summer Resort has such comforts.

We have canoes and row boats and power boats. We own a trout stream eleven miles long—we have seven miles of river in front of our Hotel. We have nine lakes on our property. You can fish all day and night if you want. You can catch Bass, Trout and Perch.

You people who are tired and want to rest, come up here. The air is pure—it is laden with the scent of the woods. A week in this wild land will make you into a new person.

It is only a night's ride from Chicago and you can telephone from the Hotel to your family—yet you are in the midst of as wild woods as you have ever seen or heard of.

Mothers and Children can spend the Summer up here— Fathers and big Brothers can leave Saturday night and spend Sunday with the family and return to Chicago in time for 7 o'clock work on Monday morning.

Accommodations for only 200. You sleep in new sanitary bungalows. No big firetrap of a hotel, with all its dangers, no little stuffy, badly ventilated room to sleep in.

The air is fresh and pure at Fruitvale and you get plenty of it there, day or night. No liquor is sold on the premises; no veranda parades; no style shows by people who go to Summer resorts merely to put it over their neighbors.

You go to Fruitvale for rest and recreation. You wear your old clothes. You spend your days in the woods picking wild flowers, listening to the song birds, canoeing, rowing, hunting and fishing. At night you can join the throng around the campfire and sing or dance in the big dining room, or you can go to bed and sleep.

If you want to make this trip it is essential that you make your reservations now, today. You can make a deposit of $1.00 now and then if you don't go your dollar will be given back to you.

Remember, there are no ifs and ands about it. $13.50 includes everything. You can buy a ticket in Chicago for $13.50, which includes everything. You can go to Fruitvale, spend your vacation and get back to Chicago without spending another red cent. For further information and photographs, call or write

Mrs. J. J. Shubert Designs Costumes for Winter Garden.

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Until this year Melville Ellis, who will readily be recalled as an actor of parts and a player of pianos in several Shubert musical revues, was also a designer of stage costumes and color schemes than which, as the estimable B. L. T. might be induced to say, there was no than whicher.

But this season Mr. Ellis is ill, or was ill when it came time to stage "The Passing Show of 1915" at the Winter Garden. He may have been sulking in his suite, or it may be, as rumor will have it, that he has quarreled with his employers over money matters. However and whatever the cause, a substitute designer was called for, and who do you suppose responded? None other than Mrs. Jacob J. Shubert herself.

There was the manager of the Winter Garden with a designer right in his own family and he never knew a thing about it. Or pretended not to know. Mrs. Shubert volunteered to furnish costume plates for the entire Winter Garden spectacle, which is largely a matter of clothes and so well did she succeed with the job that the present production has more gay costumes to the girl than any of the former productions. And as for the color schemes, they are fairly riotous.

And yet the new designer has not been extravagant. She has saved more money on tights than Mr. Ellis ever did. Hardly any of the girls wear tights. Hardly any of the girls wear anything from trunklets to toes but a sprinkling of rice powder. And there is a new gown without any back to it that really is an economic wonder. A sort of silk breastplate in front, you understand, extending from the diaphragm to the shoulder dimples, and to points at either side just over the hips, with two bands of black velvet crossed over the shoulder blades to hold the breastplate in place. But beyond that, nix. Nix from the shoulders to the waist line. And when thirty of these barenesses are lined across the stage the effect is positively naked. You instinctively turn, expecting the gentleman in the next seat to ask if you would not like a salt rub. Instead of which he asks you for a match with which to relight his cigaret and remarks sapiently that it is some show. As though you could not see!

The new Winter Garden entertainment, which will continue through the summer, is much like those that have gone before. Its biggest pictorial feature is one in which an attack by Zeppelins is made upon an unnamed city. The air cruisers approach in a storm, the city is warned and turns out all its lights, and then the dropping of bombs and the play of searchlights begin. It is effective but depressing just at this time.

Granville Barker, touring the eastern college towns with two Greek plays, "Iphegenia in Tauris" and "The Trojan Women," brought his troupe back to New York this week, and at the invitation of the mayor helped dedicate a brand new concrete stadium given to the City college of the city of New York by Adolph Lewishon. The stadium itself is rather an impressive affair, topping Harlem Heights at One Hundred and Thirty-sixth and One Hundred and Thirty-eighth streets and Amsterdam avenue. It seats between 6,000 and 7,000 persons, and practically that number saw the first performance of "The Trojan Women" last Saturday. This week four public performances of the two plays have been given, and the financial intake has been considerable.

Some criticism has been leveled at Mr. Barker as an English invader of our artistic life. Why, if we must have the Greek drama revived, why could it not have been done by American actors, many of whom have the Grecian bend, as you might say, and all of whom, or nearly all, are eager to act. Why, demands one writer, himself a loyal English lad, why was Margaret Anglin not asked as an American to present her Greek répertoire at the Lewishon stadium, as she does at the Hearst stadium in California.

There has been a certain amount of sycophantic kowtowing to the Barkers since their arrival in America, but not a great deal. And the criticism of the English director's activities as they have been concerned with the Euripidean drama are a bit far fetched. He was invited by the various American colleges to play in their stadiums because he has been recognized for a number of years as something of an authority on such productions. And it was because he had the preparations for these revivals well in hand that he was asked to play at the dedication of the New York stdium. His company is mainly English because, quite naturally, he works best with English actors.

Aside from the fact that Miss Anglin was otherwise engaged, that there was no other company of American players schooled in the Greek drama available, that it had not occurred to the mayor of New York to have a Greek play produced at the local celebration until it was suggested to him by a friend of the Barkers and that Miss Anglin, having been born of English parents in Toronto, Canada, is herself an American only by courtesy of adoption, the criticism is quite reasonable.

There is a story floating about the actor clubs that these same English actors were frightfully annoyed during a special performance of "Iphegenia" given for charitable purposes at Piping Rock, a society rendezvous hardby. When they arrived they discovered that whereas arrangements had been made for Mr. and Mrs. Barker to have luncheon with the gentry, the supporting company, including Miss Chrystal Herne, Miss Edith Wynne Matthison, Miss Gladys Hanson, Miss Alma Kruger, Mr. Ian Maclaren, Mr. Phillip Merivale, and a numerous chorus of high born young ladies of church choir connections, were rather carelessly shunted to the only other tables available, which happened to be those of the maids and chauffeurs. My word! The comments of the players at being thus bestowed, it is said, were extremely caustic. I mean to say they were not at all what a Piping Rocker would expect to hear.

Summer News of the Theaters.

SAN FRANCISCO'S apathy toward all that is of the theater—even "The Follies" and "Potash & Perlmutter"—has been dissolved by Pavlowa, who was asked to make her engagement a month long, so large was the advance sale. She drew $23,000 in a week in Los Angeles. Her Midway Gardens engagement is now definitely scheduled to start on July 3. She will remain a month, and will in that time give the entire repertoire which has engaged her since, in 1909, she first came to the United States. The plans making for her next season have already had outline in this department of THE TRIBUNE.

"Peer Gynt" is the play in which Cyril Maude is to act for the films. This seems to be good judgment. Ibsen is dead, for one thing; for another, he did not, as the movies were unknown when he wrote the play, retain the camera rights. And while it is one of the world's great poetic dramas, Mr. Maude will not be compelled to undergo the task of learning the text, which is voluminous.

Kin Hubbard, in dialect, says: "One good thing about a movie actor—you never see him posin' in front o' th' the-ater."

Miss Valerie Bergere is to act a sketch called "War Babies" in the variety theaters.

Miss Gilda Varesi is the actress of Mme. Nazimova's part in "War Brides" on a minor circuit. This little play has been published.

Granville Barker's profits on his fourteen weeks in New York were $20,000. The sum does not concern his al fresco venture with Greek plays. His engagement in New York was underwritten by the Stage society. The best "card" in his repertoire proved to be Shaw's "Androcles," given in the same bill with Anatole France's "The Man Who Married a Dumb Wife." It is in this program he will send his wife, Lillah McCarthy, through the country next season. She may be recalled as one of four or five actresses who played the Christian maiden in the years when the American public regarded "The Sign of the Cross" as worth while.

Klaw & Erlanger are planning to restage some of their plays of other seasons, and send them through the country next season on the circuits where $1 is the high price of a ticket.

Miss Ina Claire has been added to the cast of "The Follies of 1915."

One of the incidents of "Maid in America" is a parade by eight women attired to indicate that their business of life is the performance of chores. Seven of the eight have the verisimilitude of actuality; that is to say, they suggest that they may have been taken from tasks of scrubbing and cleaning. The eighth, however, wins special attention by sprightliness, gayety, abandon, and song that are "professional." She is the mother of Miss Minerva Coverdale, the busiest and most nearly denuded member of the cast of the extravaganza, and was a generation or more ago, a popular actress in burlesque as Marie Richmond.

The White Rats have decided not to scamper Tuesday for the entertainment of this community. They are an organization of variety performers and have been of a mind to go through the country after the manner of the Lambs club when gamboling or the Friars when frolicking; that is, with an "all star" array, devoting a day to a city. However, they have not found easy work in the attempt to put together a program at all unusual, so far as its personnel is concerned. In wiring Thursday to ask the Auditorium management to cancel their contract for Tuesday they hint at a visit later in the summer and for more than a day.

"The Songs of Songs" is to be acted next season by three companies. Miss Irene Fenwick will be at the head of the one to give the play in Chicago. "Potash & Perlmutter" will be played by four companies. An American cast has started for Australia to play the latter piece.

The most costly theater in the world, the Century in New York, is to be made into a music hall. This is the house opened late in 1909 as the "New theater," with a propaganda having to do with a permanent company, a comprehensive repertoire, the futility of the "star" system," and the unselfish purpose of the founders to better the stage. The first performance was preceded by ceremonies which constituted a ritual as solemn and pompous as if the occasion were the installation of an English king or an exalted ruler of Elks. For example, Forbes-Robertson read Hamlet's advice to the players. Then, by way of showing the sincerity of the no star policy, Miss Julia Marlowe was engaged to head the company, with Mr. Sothern as her chief associate. When she and he walked out because of a dispute with the stage director regarding their right to the center of the stage without respect to the "dramatic truth" of their being just there, Miss Grace George was engaged.

The company visited Chicago at the end of its first season, and in a fortnight of repertoire in the Great Northern disclosed itself as an efficient ensemble. The founders tired of the losses after two seasons and turned the lovely edifice over to George C. Tyler, who staged there the gorgeous spectacle plays whose cost and upkeep were factors in "breaking" his concern, the Liebler company. Last season and part of this the theater was used for the "opera for the masses" venture by the company which sang last winter at the Auditorium. Now it passes to the management of Ned Wayburn, who is to stage there a revue called "Town Topics." It so happens that the decline of the theater as commerce began about the time the millionaire founders undertook to do something for the theater as art.

Miss Nora Bayes has again "made up" with Mr. Ziegfeld and will go tomorrow evening into his midnight entertainment in New York.

Mlle. Gaby Deslys and Harry Pilcer are reunited and are dancing in the London music halls.

"Just Outside the Door" is a new play by Jules Eckert Goodman, author of "Mother" and "The Silent Voice." Henry Miller is to produce it soon for tryout purposes.

Columbia university has made Sir Johnstone Forbes-Robertson a master of arts. The senior class of that institution has decided that Miss Elsie Ferguson is the foremost American actress. Two years ago the favorite was Miss Eva Tanguay.

Miss Dorothy Morton, a light opera star of twenty years ago, has been singing the title part in a New York revival of "Erminie."

John Galsworthy's most recent play is called "The Full Moon"—a title used by Lady Gregory for one of her short plays, a sequel to her "Hyacinth Halvey."

Sir Herbert Tree is to stage Edward Knoblauch's "Marie-Odile" in London. He will change the title. This is the play in which Miss Frances Starr has been acting in New York, and, from all accounts, successfully. In story, it has a faint suggestion of "The Conquerors," which, in turn, was Paul Potter's uncredited use of an old Sardou play, "Le Haine."

Ralph Herz is the selection for the title part of a play to be made from Harry Leon Wilson's "Ruggles of Red Gap." Harrison Rhodes is footlighting the tale.

Rennold Wolf and Channing Pollock, defending themselves against the charge of having stolen Philander Johnson's "Doctor Fakewell" and putting it forward as their own under the name of "The Beauty-Shop," said they found their story and plot in an old piece called "A Thumping Legacy." This was patent when Raymond Hitchcock gave "The Beauty-Shop" in 1913 in Chicago. As "A Corsican Legacy," "A Thumping Legacy" was last acted in this city by the late Rosina Vokes. It was one of the uncounted short farces turned out by the famous J. Madison Morton. The Messrs. Wolf and Pollock were acquitted. Mr. Johnson is the critic of the drama for the Washington Star; and in that position he was for a time the confrère of Mr. Pollock, who wrote about the stage for the Washington Times.

After reviewing the situation personally, Mr. Shubert has decided that Chicago's craving for summer musical shows will be satisfied by "The Lady in Red," "All Over Town," and "Maid in America." Hence the announced visit of Cecil Lean in "A Blue Paradise" will not be paid to the American Music hall.

Haddon Chambers, the English dramatist, writes to Alf Hayman the following letter concerning the details of the death of Charles Frohman:

"Since writing this morning I've seen Miss Rita Jolivet. It appears that she, C. F. and William Scott, who was on his way from Japan to enlist, and Miss Jolivet's brother-in-law, George Vernan, met in the companionway of deck A almost immediately after the explosion. Everyone was perfectly calm, C. F. particularly so.

"They discussed what effect the outrage would have in America. A man (William, the valet, I gathered from the description) kept coming along and advising C. F. to put on a life belt, which he was disinclined to do. Finally they all had life belts, however. Then C. F. said, as quoted in the papers: 'Why fear death? Death is only a beautiful adventure.' (These, Miss Jolivet says, were his exact words.) They all got out onto the promenade deck, which was then sloping so much that the others had to help C. F.

"There they stood together for a few moments, holding each other by the hand—Vernon, Rita, C. F., and Scott—in that order. Then a large wave, full of bodies and wreckage, came toward them. It was made by the vessel sinking by the prow. In looking toward it Rita saw C. F.'s face. He was smiling. The wave tore the four of them apart. Rita is the only one of them now alive. She was carried down a great way, but she held her breath, and when she came up she was immediately seized and dragged onto a raft."

The plans of Percival Chubb, president of the Drama league, for the Shakspeare tercentennial include the planting in parks, gardens, and school window boxes of the flowers mentioned in Shakspeare's plays. The celebration will last throughout the spring of 1916.

The Actors' equity association threatens to call a strike of its 2,500 members and the managers are said to featr that they will not do it.

Daniel Frohman and Isaac S. Marcosson are collaborating on a biography of Charles Frohman, to be published serially in the Cosmopolitan Magazine.

John Slavin, a well known figure in musical comedy, is in Chicago as an actor for the movies. He is being filmed in two of the earlier farces by the late Charles H. Hoyt—as Grimesey in "A Bunch of Keys," and Rats in "A Tin Soldier." These two parts were the media for James T. Powers' climb to popularity a generation ago.

The Frohman-Belasco revival of "A Celebrated Case" was withdrawn last evening. It had a fair run as to both length and popularity, but it is doubtful if it will be shown next season, although there is a tentative announcement that Otis Skinner may be sent out in it as co-star with Miss Ann Murdock.

Miss Rose Coghlan will in October next round out her fiftieth year as an actress, and her friends are talking about a golden jubilee by way of celebration. Most of her good acting was done before the day of the labeled star, although as the head of her own company she did many interesting things. Her 1892 revival of "Diplomacy" remains the criterion of that oft revived play, and she gave a fine cast to Oscar Wilde's "A Woman of No Importance" in 1893-94. She has of late weeks been acting the part of the concierge, Mme. Vinard, in the "Trilby" revival, the run of which ended last evening. A filming of "As You Like Iit," which was recently shown in the motion picture theaters without hurrah of any kind, had her as Rosalind.

A "tryout" last week in Atlantic City of a farce called "See My Lawyer" was sufficiently encouraging to warrant its producer to schedule it for New York in August. This is the play in which T. Roy Barnes is made a star. Miss Grace Valentine is the principal actress. She was the stenographer in the long Cort theater run of "Help Wanted."

Daniel Frohman, who is at the head of one of the most important of the photoplay concerns, says that he thinks that motion pictures "have reached their zenith." He does not explain, however, if he means that they are to decline, or simply that they have reached the ultimate of vogue, and will stick there. The 6,434,869 other men who make photo-plays for a living are a unit in saying that the movies are "still in their infancy."

A Patriotic Effort In Music on Coast.

George P. Upton, for years the reviewer of music for "The Tribune" and a veteran among American musicians, contributes the following concerning the musical development of this country:

By George P. Upton.

ON THE eve of his final departure from America, Anton Dvorák, the composer, said: "This country is full of melody, original, sympathetic and varying in mood, color and character to suit every phase of composition. It is a rich field. America can have noble and great music of her own, growing out of the very soil and partaking of its nature—the natural voice of a free and vigorous race. It now rests with the young musicians of this country and with the patrons of music to say how soon its American national school of music is to be developed."

It is to the credit of Los Angeles, the most musical city on the Pacific coast, that she has made the first national and thoroughly organized beginning for an American national school of music. In other cities individuals have worked courageously and patiently towards such an end, but in Los Angeles, from June 24 to July 3, ensuing, a national movement will be inaugurated. The biennial convention of musical clubs will then be in session and in connection with them, a congress for the encouragement of American music, as well as the American Opera association. This festival will be dominated by American music from beginning to end and all the artists participating will be Americans. During the festival American music will be played and sung in the American churches and public schools. In its congress such representative American musicians as Cadman, Busch, Chadwick, Farwell, Foote, Hadley, Leonard Liebling, Sonneck and others will take part in its discussions. In its concerts the composers themselves will conduct their own works and among the composers whose works will be performed are Borowski, Cadman, Chadwick, MacDowell, Mrs. Beach, Foote, Busch, Oldberg, Foerster, Kroeger, Spry and Delamarter. Original compositions will form a feature of the public school programs. Many trained American musicians have entered the National Federation contest of students and its twelve winners will appear in the concert.

An interesting feature of the festival will be the performance of the three successful compositions in the Federation competition—a song by Edith H. Rogers of Duluth, Minn., the symphony in C minor by Arne Oldberg of Evanston, Ill., and the grand opera, "Fairyland," by Horatio W. Parker, dean of the musical department at Yale university, which won the prize over fifty-six other operatic works. This opera, under the leadership of Herz, conductor of the Metropolitan, will close the festival, after three performances.

These are the bare outlines of this extraordinary festival. San Diego has its exposition of the products of the Pacific coast, San Francisco its international exposition to celebrate the opening of the Panama canal—Los Angeles will have its exposition of American music. The first two will have their day and soon be forgotten, but the Los Angeles exposition is the first step in a great musical scheme for this country which may have a far reaching influence in the future and make for the establishment of that American national school of music which Dvorák foresaw.

Adult Notions of Music for Children and About Them.

By Ronald Webster.

MISS SOPHIE BRASLAU, a dark beauty with a dark voice, sang a song by Mrs. Beach at the Evanston festival a week ago. This song, I must confess, gave me great pain and aroused certain diabolical emotions which I recognized as antedating the time when I covered up my shanks.

It was called "With Granny," and concerned itself with an elderly lady listening to the boasts of a prattling, laughing boy and a little girl similarly engaged. The boy declared for a field marshalship, the girl for a princely husband, predatory but polite. The grandmother smiled sardonically and indicated that although she was disillusioned she was still gentle. The audience was largely children.

Sung at any other gathering, I should have enjoyed the song. Among the children it rang false. It reminded me of the youthful suspicion whenever I was dragged to a "children's day" that I, with other youngsters, was to be used as a pretext for adult sentimentalization. My suspicion was invariably confirmed.

From the standpoint of the child, songs of this kind were almost wholly fallacious. He is not, as a rule, interested in his relations to adults. Parents are a necessary evil, convenient when suffering from mental or physical bruises, but otherwise just "Don't" personified. A grandmother is generally a milder form of the same—more tolerant and less agile, but to be avoided except for definite purposes.

These songs produce a warm protective glow in adults, especially in those whose love for children does not take the form of playing with them. They flatter themselves and there is no harm in that. But they should not inflict such stuff upon the children.

From observation of children and from inquiry among now grown friends, they like music, especially songs, and songs which start imaginings. "Onward, Christian Soldiers" is a universal favorite. It presents the basis for impersonation of soldier or knight; it suggests a glorified circus parade; a white, church-sanctioned militarism. They also like songs which are frankly silly, songs of achievement and agility, and grim songs of adventure, like "Il etait un petit navire," which relates an incident of near cannibalism.

It might be submitted as relevant that teachers in public schools are not aware of their power in making music appreciated. They are inclined to teach, besides a certain amount of English folkmusic, a number of patriotic songs, songs which I recognized as belonging to the same tepid sort as most of those sung at Sunday school.

Uninteresting songs or songs of disgusting sentiment (children are not sentimental) can do more damage to a potential love of music than any number of repetitions of "Tipperary." "Every Night I Bring Thee Roses"—or was it violets?—tainted "Annie Laurie" for me and for certain of my youthful comrades.

"The Walrus and the Carpenter," that difficult but inspired cantata of Fletcher, was not in existence at that time. I wish it had been. It might have saved many noble things from this dismal swamp of memory, watered insistently as it was with tearful sentiment about parents and respectable grown up human intercourse. With it I hope the age of "Rolloism" (what a pity Jacob Abbott did not write about Rollo at the singing school!) in music is ended.

The most interesting aspect of the subscription for next season's ten weeks of grand opera in the Auditorium is, acording to the new opera company's bureau of information, the large sale for the five Sunday afternoons of Wagner. The program-making for the five Sundays—the first five in the season, which will start on Monday, Nov. 15, a week earlier than heretofore—has already been explained in THE TRIBUNE. "The Ring of the Niebelung" will be given in its proper order, from "The Rhinegold" to "The Twilight of the Gods," covering four Sundays, and then "Parsifal." The subscription for these five special performances is carried as a separate unit in booking boxes and seats; but, the report says, more than 60 per cent of renewing subscribers have taken seats for the Sunday afternoons, as well, while new subscribers ask first for the Sunday possibilities and engage their places therefor before taking up the matter of prices and locations for the evening and Saturday afternoon performances.

This interest in Mr. Campanini's "Wagner wing" would seem, however, to be entirely explicable. Chicago has had comparatively little Wagner, as opera, in the last six or seven years. Mr. Campanini himself has in the seasons since he took charge, in 1910, staged "Parsifal," "Tristan and Isolde," "Die Walküre," and "Lohengrin," but always fugitively, in the sense of "occasional," and never as part of what might be called a "German scheme." It is because Mr. Campanini knows this, and because he believes that a Wagner series will mean a great deal commercially to the new season, that he is now in the throes of negotiation with not fewer than six Wagner conductors of recognized standing, in the belief that from the six he will draw one for Chicago.

The title of "Finella" appears in the list of works which Max Rabinoff, the manager of Pavlowa, announces for her new repertoire, to be put together for next season. It has already been explained in THE TRIBUNE that the dancer will be the star of a company proffering song as well as dance, and that her programs will consist largely of opera which lends itself to the purposes of ballet by herself and her Russian troupe.

"Finella" is a new title and may be searched for in vain among the works of Auber, whose name appears in Mr. Rabinoff's bulletin as the composer. Light is thrown on the matter, however, when it is explained that Finella is the name of the chief character in Auber's "The Mute of Portici," a work very popular a generation ago as "Masaniello," the title by which it has always been known in this country, where the tradition has always had to do with the part of the tenor, Masaniello, and not at all with the part of the dumb girl, Finella—a part played in pantomime, an art never popular, because never cultivated, on the American stage, save in its serio-comic manifestations by actors of pieces like "Humpty-Dumpty," "Jocko, the Brazilian Ape," etc.

Playbills of the Week.

Grand Opera house—"Beverly's Balance," in which Miss Margaret Anglin is again seen in her agreeable aspect as a comedienne. She, in this play, is a Virginian with a sense of humor [the fact that the play is comedy, skimming farce, gives license for this extravagance] and without a job at her vocation of singing. Desperate for money, she agrees to stand as co-respondent in order that a foolish wife may get a divorce from a complaisant and admiring husband. The audiences have been gracious. Miss Anglin's company is sufficient. Second week.

MISS RUTH RANDALL in "ALL OVER TOWN"

Palace Music hall—"Maid in America," from the New York Winter Garden, with the performers in summer garden attire. This is the best of the Winter Garden series to date, by far. By an ingenious arrangement of rows of chairs for the spectators and of trestles, elevated platforms, and runways for the players, the latter are able to give the performance, while the audience remains in the seats. The manner of the players makes for a high degree of intimacy with what one of them calls the "customes." Miss Rita Gould, Bert Clark, Mlle. Dazie, Miss Louise Mink, Miss Minerva Coverdale, and Miss Florence Moore head the big company. It may be added that the Palace, in use for the first time for this type of entertainment, is quite as successful as the show, itself. Second week.

MISS FLORENCE MOORE in "MAID IN AMERICA"

Garrick—"All Over Town," with Joseph Santley, who wrote it. As a librettist, he is one of the best of the young actors who dance; and it is worth the price of the best seat just to see him replace his hat on his head without unripping his coiffure. However, it is for things like this he is prosperous; so, he should display excessive perturbation! His comic associates are doing their part to make the "book" better, while his dancing girls have already done so. Roy Atwell, Walter Jones, Miss Ruth Randall, and Miss Beatrice Allen—she is like a vision from the paradise of the Turks—are capital. Second week.

La Salle Opera house—Miscellaneous entertainment of minor musical comedy, specialties, and movies. A new company starts tomorrow in "Fascinating Flora."

Olympic—"Along Came Ruth," a popular comedy, at popular prices, with Miss Florence Shirley and James Bradbury in the leading rôles.

Princess—"The Lady in Red," a musical comedy of the daintier sort, with pretty music, pretty dress, and the charming Valli Valli.

Cort—"Peg o' My Heart," in its thirty-first week with Peggy O'Neill as its ingratiating heroine.

VAUDEVILLE.

Great Northern—The Colonial Minstrel Maids, Aileen Stanley, William Morrow in "Happy's Millions," Jetter and Rodgers, comedy roller skaters, the Steiner trio, etc.

McVicker's—Hugo B. Koch in Ralph Kettering's "After Ten Years"; "The Sunny Side of Broadway," musical comedy, Olga De Baugh, prima donna; the Napoli duo, the Four Valentines, and many others.

Colonial—"The Birthday Party," musical comedy; Blanche Sloane, aerialist; Anita Primrose and company; Dan Belmont in "Via Express"; on Thursday, Etta Bryant and company in "A College Proposal."

Majestic—Nazimova will appear in Marion Craig Wentworth's "War Brides" as a young wife about to become a mother, who kills herself after a series of tragic happenings due to the war. Others are Chick Sales, in his "Country School Entertainment"; Miss Maizie King in toe dances, Alan Brooks in "Straightened Out," etc.

Vaudeville Wit.

M'VICKER'S.

Eldon and Clifton:

"Do you know the definition of a kiss?"

"The definition of a kiss? No."

"Here it is:

"It has no value for only one person.

"It is the expression of supreme happiness for two persons.

"The child gets it gratis.

"The young man steals it.

"The old man buys it.

"It is the right of children, the privilege of lovers, and the mask of hypocrites.

"For a young lady it represents faith, for the wife hope, and for the old maid charity."

MAJESTIC.

Stella Tracey and Victor Stone:

"I certainly envy the Goddess of Liberty."

"Why?"

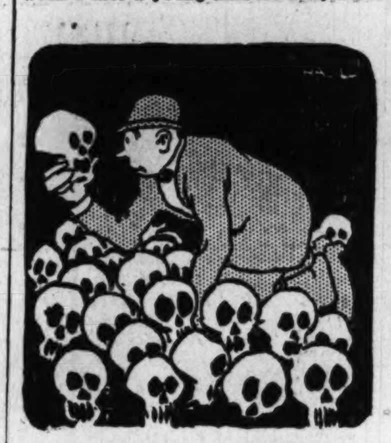
"She's some light housekeeper."

Why They Laugh in Vaudeville.

COLONIAL.

Anita Primrose:

What makes me mad is the way the men folks always run down the women. Last week I met a young man from my home town, so I says to him, "What are you doing now?" He says, "I've got a job in a medical museum, sorting skulls." I said, "That's a queer job." He said, "It's the easiest job I ever had. The doctor gives me a big box of skulls and all I have to do is to put the male skulls on this side, female skulls on that side, male skulls on this side, female skulls on that side [imitates business of sorting]. I says, "But tell me, how can you tell the male skull from the female skulls?" He said, "That's easy. I always allow four inches more jaw for the female skulls."



PALACE.

Greenwood and Grant:

"Do you speak French?"

"Fluently."

"Where did you learn?"

"Off the cologne bottles."

"Say, Letitia, I think an awful lot of you."

"There's an awful lot of me to think about."

"I know. I am also a believer in the theory of proper mating."

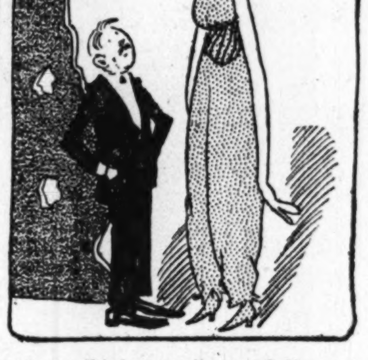
"Speak up, young man, what is it?"

"Well, if you're two-thirds feminine and one-third masculine, and I'm one-third feminine and two-thirds masculine, why, then, we're mates. And so, Letitia, I love you; we're mates."

"Wait a minute! I want to ask a question."

"What is it?"

"Are you two-thirds masculine?"



MAJESTIC.

Harry Holman & Co. (to chauffeur in street below):

"Hey, you! Up the alley with that! I won't have a —— standing in front of my office!"

[Turns to stenographer.]

"You're late again."

"Yes, sir. But only a few minutes. I could——"

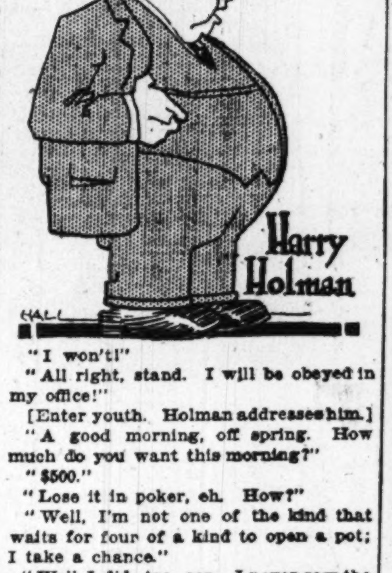
"Stop! The next time you're late you needn't come at all. Send your sister. I like her better anyway—she's fatter! Have you finished that letter?"

"Yes sir. Shall I sign your full name?"

"Certainly! It's just the same full or sober."

"Look here. Don't you be rude and peevish to me. I'm a lady and I won't stand for it."

"Say what's the matter? Has your mother been feeding you meat again? Now you listen to me. Sit down!"



"I won't!"

"All right, stand. I will be obeyed in my office!"

[Enter youth. Holman addresses him.]

"A good morning, off spring. How much do you want this morning?"

"$500."

"Lose it in poker, eh. How?"

"Well, I'm not one of the kind that waits for four of a kind to open a pot; I take a chance."

"Well I did, too, son. I never saw the time when I wouldn't open a pot if I had three aces. But your spendthrift ways make me sick! Why don't you brace up and be a man?"

"I wasn't brought up to be a man."

"Well I did the best I could with the material at hand. But I want you to cut out gambling."

"Lots of men have become rich at it."

"Did you ever see a man that became a multimillionaire by gambling? Did you ever see anybody that did see such a man? No, of course you didn't! Then there's a doubt. O why haven't you any brains!"

"Listen, father, I guess I've got as much brains as you have."

"You haven't any. I have. I don't have to prove it. I admit it."

"But father, did you ever see your brains?"

"Of course not."

"Did you ever see a man who did see your brains?"

"See here. What—"

"Then there's a doubt!"

It is customary on this occasion to throw English coppers into the Thames and let the urchins dive for them. LATEST NEWS FROM MOVIE LAND

by Mae Tinee

FAMOUS PLAYERS' NEW STARS.

THE Famous Players company has signed up Pauline Frederick for a period of several years. She will be seen in picturizations of Robert Hichens' play, "Bella Donna," in Henri Bernstein's drama, "Sold," and later in "Zaza." Sam Bernard is another F. P. acquisition.

Cyril Maude is the latest acquisition of the Oliver Morosco Photoplay company. And we think moving pictures have something to crow about!

Word comes from Lorino that the Italian company—famous as having produced "Cabiria," will produce in this country. The first picture will have as a hero the giant Maciste, who was the slave in "Cabiria."

James Cruze and Sidney Bracy are engaged in motoring to the exposition. They will stop at various theaters by the way.

Mary Pickford is in New York now. She will, however, return to California in the autumn.

Harry McRae Webster, general producing director for the United Photo-Play company, and fifteen members of his company, leave this week for Washington, D. C. They will use the White House, the Army and Navy club, and Washington "Lovers' Lane" as the background for a number of exterior scenes for a future feature release, "The Victory of Virtue," by Penelope Knapp, a Chicago writer. Gerda Holmes and Wilmuth Merkyl will play the leading roles in this production.

Rex Beach and Jack London will join Upton Sinclair in his affiliation with the Dixie Film company of Biloxi, Miss., which is preparing to produce at a point near the town.

Many letters have been received by Earle Williams and Anita Stewart, who portrayed the leading roles in "The Sins of the Mothers," a Vitagraph feature, taking up the technical points of the bridge game, which is shown during the action of the drama. The card game which shows the hands held by the various players is managed in such a way that the audience may follow the progress of the game, and has created a great deal of discussion. "The Sins of the Mothers" is the $1,000 prize photoplay which was selected by the judges of a contest held in one of the New York newspapers from over 4,000 scenarios that had been submitted.

Chester Conklin, who puts a great many of the laughs into Keystone productions, has been invited back into Ringling's circus, where he was once upon a time a clown. His contract keeps him Keystoning, however, and the general idea prevails that he prefers it to sawdusting.

The United Photoplays company finally has despaired of getting its sought for Greek garden scenes out in Highland Park after three futile attempts and has decided literally to wait for the clouds to roll by. In the waiting interval Director Harry McRea Webster has gone off to Washington to get some necessary scenes for "The Victory of Virtue" picture, taking along with him eleven actors, among them Gerda Holmes, Wilmuth Merkyl, Rapley Holmes, Marie Yould, and Bert Howard.

Film fun is a rare and golden quality. A lot of people aim at it and miss it; a few aim at it and hit it. Two of these few are Rosemary Theby and Harry Myers, Universalites, whose second comedy, "The House of a Thousand Relations," is even funnier than was "Baby." It contains such a good burlesque boarding house scene as has seldom been seen in pictures. And that wasn't done by the two stars, but by a clever little slavey person and a hatchet countenanced landlady who are competent comedians on their own hook.

It was the boarding episode that drove the young couple to housekeeping, and a fine time they had of it until they invited in their relations. It seemed they had armies of relations who kept sending in assisting relays until there were just about a thousand.

They were pleased and complimentary relations, but they didn't know enough to go home—so the host and hostess moved back to the house of prunes, the slavey, and the l. l.

Another attractive member of the week's comedy circle is the Majestic juvenile "Her Filmland Hero," in which the small person dozes over a picture magazine, in her dreaming bringing to life and strenuous melodramatic activities the group of clever child actors. The children prove themselves most competent little players, without any apparent effort. It is rather marvelous to watch them.

Beatriz Michelena of the California Motion Picture company is engaged in raffling off two hand embroidered silk pillow tops made by a resident of Montana state prison who enlisted her help in securing funds for use against his future release.

Cyril Maude, who has been so recently with us in his effective characterization of the sputtery old gentleman, "Grumpy," is yielding to the film's allure and has annexed his efforts to the Morosco-Bosworth organization. His vehicle has not yet been decided upon.

The Keystone plant in Los Angeles was held by all the Keystoners to be as perfect as such a thing could be, except that it wasn't large enough. So the block across the street was purchased and there is being built a garage and a stage 100x300 feet in dimensions. Keystoners rehearsing out in the street in front of the Edendale studio were such a common sight that they never made any one miss a jitney bus to watch the acting. All of the Keystone directors they have now are Del Henderson, Walter Wright, Dick Jones, Frank Griffin, Ford Sterling, Charlie Avery, Roscoe Arbuckle, and Mack Sennett.

George Kleine has completed his first American made drama, "The Spendthrift," featuring Irene Fenwick. The preceding ventures have been comedies, such as "Stop Thief," most satisfying examples of the possibilities of comedy subtleties in the celluloid.

Some of the players accomplished so much in them as to impress other shrewd producers, with the result that now Makoto Inokuchi, Harold Howard, and Harry Mestayer are figurative wearers of the Selig diamond and Howard Estabrook the World ensign.

Profiting by this experience, Mr. Kleine has attached Miss Fenwick by a long term contract, which does not interfere with her stage performance, but keeps her film service exclusively for her initial company.

Lewis J. Cody, a new Ince leading man, destined to make his debut in "The Mating" with Bessie Barriscale, has a sense of humor to lubricate his way through life. When he went to the station recently to claim his just-shipped-in-from-Detroit automobile a freakish, gunboat shaped, audibly yellow confection of mechanism, he was immediately spied by a policeman and placed under arrest for driving a car without a license. The policeman being a kindly minded person, however, hearkened to his plea, and merely served him with a summons to appear in court instead of taking him to the station right off the bat. He went on a block—and was stopped by another policeman. Explanations ensued and he was permitted to continue.

But the same interruption occurred the next block. Now, it is a long ways to Inceville, and, though the policemen were kind, Mr. Cody figured he was making slow time, so he hopped off at a print shop and procured this legend, which he hung on the front of his car: "Never mind, I've been pinched three times already."

Milton H. Fahrney, David Horsley's first director in the old days, has begun producing for him at the old Universal studios in Los Angeles, which are to be used until the new "pie shaped" stage at the zoo is ready for use. Goldie Colwell, George Ovie, Jefferson Cabourne, and Louis Fitzroy are some of the new players for the Mina brand.

The Reliance and Majestic folk have a canine friend whom they have labeled "Props." Props is distinctly a person of mongrel extraction, yellow of hue, lank of build, and kind of heart, who lingers around at all of the studio scenes, lunches off the studio neighbors, and rooms in the property stronghold. He is the freest lance about the place.

Feature Films of the Week.

"COHEN'S LUCK"—Edison four reel. You laugh and cry with the children of the Ghetto as pictured by Viola Dana and William Wadsworth.

"HER SHATTERED IDOL"—Mutual four reel. Mae Marsh and Bobby Harron provide clever entertainment.

"LOVE, SNOW, AND ICE"—Vitagraph three reel. Principally Wally Van, who wrote, produced, and acts in the picture. Jean and "Cutey" have a fierce time of it, but they finally win the race across the snow ridden prairies and beat dad to the preacher's. (Warranted not educational.)

"THE WAY OF THE TRANSGRESSOR"—Vitagraph three reel. To one who seeks the destruction of others comes his own—and he has it coming, too.

"THE WEB OF CRIME"—Selig two reel, featuring Jackie Saunders and all star cast. You see Miss Saunders as the beautiful daughter of a woman who conducts a thieves' den. Complications, of course, arise and are overcome nicely.

"THE HAUNTING FEAR"—Kalem three reel. Featuring Alice Hollister and Harry Millarde. From country girl to nun. It's a long, hard road—and makes an interesting picture.

"THE DAWN OF A TOMORROW"—Famous Players five reel, featuring Mary Pickford in Frances Hodgson Burnett's drama of indomitable faith and love triumphant.

"THE GREATER COURAGE"—Essanay three reel. Moral or physical courage—which is most to be desired? Bryant Washburn and Edna Mayo do their best to answer the question for you.

"THE ALIEN"—Thomas Ince picturization of "The Sign of the Rose," featuring George Beban.

"THE RIGHT TO HAPPINESS"—American two reel. Features Vivian Rich, Joe Galbraith, Jack Richardson, and Louise Lester. The story of a wife's distrust and a wife's devotion, makes quite a picture.

"THE LIVING DEATH"—Majestic two reel. Features Billie West and F. A. Turner. A jealous father's almost fatal deception to prevent his daughter's marriage forms the basic idea. Not quite probable, but possible.

"HER OWN WAY"—Metro drama taken from unique play by Clyde Fitch. Features Florence Reed.

"PALS IN BLUE"—Selig 3 reel. A wild west picture in which Tom Mix makes himself vurr' busy in the typical Tom Mix manner.

STATIONARY PHOTOPLAYS.

FINE ARTS—"The Heart of Maryland." Mrs. Leslie Carter in the picturization of Belasco's dramatic success.

ORCHESTRA HALL—"The Dawn of a Tomorrow." Mary Pickford in the picturization of Frances Hodgson Burnett's charming play.

STUDEBAKER—Dorsey expedition in China.

ZIEGFELD—"The Island of Regeneration." An all star cast presents Cyrus Townsend Brady's unique romance.

Music Notes.

Much misinformation apparently is being circulated about M. Armand Crabbe, the Belgian baritone. M. Crabbe was reported last week in London, incensed over the failure of the authorities to transfer his very considerable savings to London. Many singers remarked bitterly that he had deserted the Belgian cause. As a matter of fact Crabbe served as an interpreter early in the war, after the authorities had refused him as an enlisted man. His heart was weak and a blood vessel in his left forearm was ruptured. He was discharged and has since given concerts in London for the benefit of the Belgian cause.

Gabrilowitsch, the pianist, will give six historical recitals in Chicago next season, the first devoted to compositions of the sixteenth, seventeenth, and eighteenth centuries; second to Beethoven; third to Weber, Mendelssohn, Schubert, and Schumann; fourth to Chopin; fifth to Liszt and Brahms; and the last to moderns of all nations.

Mabel Sharp Herdien, the soprano, will be heard at Orchestra hall this week as a feature of the Strand theater program.

De Palma's Injured Car May Keep Him Out of Chicago Races; Auto Notes.

By Reed L. Parker.

GRAVE fears are being entertained by racing enthusiasts here that Ralph De Palma, despite his wonderful engineering skill and general ability, will be unable to get his car in the best kind of condition for the 500 mile race to be held here on June 19. He has fourteen days in which he must practically rebuild the car.

It was severely damaged in the 500 mile race at Indianapolis last Monday. The exact amount of damage done probably never will be known by others than those intimately connected with the Italian's racing camp. Never loquacious, De Palma is most modest in discussing disabilities of his cars. It has been pretty well established, however, that one cylinder, a piston, a connecting rod, and the crank case were ruined.

Under ordinary conditions this would take a month to repair. De Palma, however, has the decided advantage of possessing warm friends among the officials of the Packard Motor Car company, who will extend every effort to get his car ready for him. It will be disappointing if the car is not in perfect condition, as De Palma, with his superior driving ability, wonderful courage, and keen brain would give the spectators at Chicago's first 500 mile race thrills that would have satisfied Nero.

We are not robbing De Palma of one iota of the credit due him for winning the Indianapolis race at a speed of nearly ninety miles an hour when we say that part of the glory should go to J. G. Vincent, chief engineer of the Packard company, who unselfishly, modestly, and intelligently gave the Italian priceless advice and aid. We'd give much to see that same Mr. Vincent design a few cars of his own for future races.

Harley-Davidson motorcycles were successful in winning two of the greatest races of Memorial day. Joe Wolters of Chicago took a 200 mile race at Phoenix and Weishaar finished first in a 100 mile race at Topeka, Kas. Other members of the Harley-Davidson team finished second in both events.

Members of the Chicago Automobile club will act as officials at the 100 mile race to be run at Galesburg on Wednesday. Clifford Ireland has been selected as referee, while his usual position as representative will be filled by W. C. Barnes of Peoria. Fred J. Wagner will act as starter and will have E. J. Turner as his assistant. L. A. Hillman will have charge of the scoring and timing, and Harry A. Tarantous will head the technical committee. The board of judges includes Fred W. Jencks, Darwin S. Hatch, Frank B. Wood, J. E. Duffield, and E. H. Engle. Richard Kennerdell, chairman of the A. A. A. contest committee, has accepted an invitation to attend the race. John G. De Long, director of the contest, has announced the following list of entries:

Car.	Driver.
Stutz	Burt
Duesenberg	Alley
Duesenberg	O'Donnell
Duesenberg	Chandler
Sebring	Cooper
Du Chesneau	Brown
Apperson	Ostewig
Crown Special	Doughty
Buick	Ball
Balcar	Hill
Mais	Mais

Although it wasn't particularly necessary to encourage King dealers in this vicinity, the officers from the home office spent Thursday and money for a luncheon in this city for the purpose of celebrating the arrival of a second trainload of cars to Chicago. Among those present were the executive officers of the company. Chief Engineer Rocap explained the various advantages of the eight cylinder motor.

According to a statement made recently by W. G. Pancoast, sales manager of the Rauch & Lang company of Cleveland, Europe is just awakening to the practicability and importance of the electric vehicle. The practice of the belligerent governments in commandeering all gas propelled vehicles for war purposes has forced the European public to seek other means of transportation. The ultimate result is a lively and ever growing demand for electric machines abroad.

Detroit last week was a Mecca of Hupmobile dealers. On Monday agents of this company from all over the United States assembled at the home office to be in attendance at their annual convention. Plans for the year were discussed. The principal feature of the convention was a voyage by boat to Mackinac Island and return. The new 1916 Hup was on board the boat. The new model is equipped with all the latest improvements and sells for $1,085.

The Packard Motor Car company announces the election of Alvan Macauley, vice president and general manager, to the board of directors. Mr. Macauley succeeds J. W. Packard of Warren, O., inventor of the first car of that name. While Mr. Packard retains his financial interest in the company, he retires from the directorate to devote more time to other pursuits. Those familiar with present day conditions are predicting that the season just launched will bring forth many important developments. It is said that in the production of the twin six, recently announced, the enormous resources of the Packard company are to be utilized on a scale never before approached by that successful concern. Cash on hand in the treasury is said to total over $6,000,000, so there will be no lack of finances for carrying out plans for a largely increased production under the most advanced methods.

On Tuesday, June 1, Paul Smith, who is perhaps as widely known to the motor car dealers as any automobile man in the country, was added to the Chalmers organization in the capacity of sales manager. Percy Owen, who has held this position for some years, was promoted on the same date to the newly created office of general sales manager. Mr. Owen will coöperate with Lee Olwell, first vice president, and Mr. Smith, in forming the Chalmers council of war. Mr. Owen, in addition to helping direct sales policies of the company, will have sole charge of foreign sales, and will supervise the Chalmers service department, directing its development in accordance with a broader policy which has just been decided upon.

In entering their sixteenth year of motor building, the National Motor company of Indianapolis announce that its new series of cars will be caled the "High-new series of cars will be called the "Highway models are built in six cylinder and twelve cylinder cars, the first of which were shown to the 500 mile race visitors at the Indianapolis speedway. The National Highway twelve, which is, in fact, a double six, has twelve cylinders each 2¾x4¾. The price of the twelve cylinder car is $1,990.

The Waverley company, electric vehicle manufacturer of Indianapolis, has announced the retirement of President William B. Cooley and the elevation to the presidency of Herbert H. Rice, former vice president.

Word has just been received by the Hupp Motor Car company that a shipment of Hupmobiles consigned to the Hupp garage at Pretoria, the Transvaal, South Africa, has been siezed by the British government. These Hupmobiles will be used for military purposes.

The Autocar company of Ardmore, Pa., recently received an order from the Adams Express company for ten more one and a half ton delivery trucks. This order brings the Adams Express Autocar fleet up to 291—the largest number of one make trucks owned by any single concern.

MAJESTIC.

Bert Swor:

They asked me to join the army the other day. Me join the army? Not me! I got married and I'm going to do my fighting in the house.

Just let me tell you about this female dreadnought of mine. Last night she and her kin folks were mobilizin' at my house, and I didn't come home till late. I came right up to the door, but this wife of mine she was mobilizin' behind the door, and when I came in she just naturally hit me over the head with a sock.

There was a flatiron in it. And say, my wife can put more English on a flatiron than any woman I ever saw! It did hurt powerful and I beat a retreat.

I retreated toward a saloon, and kept retreating and retreating all night. Pretty soon I found myself leaning against a door, and I was just leaning there, pleasant like, when it opened in, and I was certainly surprised to find myself in a barroom. I picked myself up and tried to get the dirt off my clothes. I couldn't, so I asked the bartender for a drink of gin, a towel, and a broom. He brought them.

"You'll have to mix it yourself," he said. "I never heard of one of them drinks."

That wasn't the only new drink I had that night. I had a Billy Sunday highball—a glass of water with a dollar in it.

Anyway, after all this drinking, I was powerful sick. When I got to the room I saw all the animals in the world. Land! There was certainly some animals! I went to the doctor for an explanation of this, and the only explanation he could give was that maybe I had eaten animal crackers in youth and they had been paralyzed all this time and were just comin' to life because I quit drinking.

Burglars have been around our neighborhood. I was speaking to my wife the other night, and she told me that the bathtub was gone. I asked her how long it had been gone, and she said several weeks. I never missed it until today. I know positively that I saw it there last August.

A burglar busted into our place again last week. Sam was asking me about it.

"Did he get anything?" says he.

"I should say he did," I told him. "He's in the hospital now. My wife thought it was me coming home."

COLONIAL.

Allen and Francis: "I'm thinking of going into business, and I'd like to handle something there's a big demand for."

"Why don't you handle gosh?"

"Gosh? Say, what is gosh, anyhow?"

"I don't know, but every second person I meet says 'Buy gosh.'"

"I'm something of a pugilist, too."

"Indeed! And where did you ever learn boxing?"

"In a correspondence school."

"But how did you get any practice?"

"Licking postage stamps."

HOW TO BOX IN TEN LESSONS

"How many children are there in your family?"

"Four children. My sister, Kate, is the oldest."

"Who comes after her?"

"No one yet, but the first fellow that does can have her. But, tell me, are you married?"

"No, but I'm engaged, and that's as good as being married."

"It's a sight better."

'll own the harps—and charge them rent."

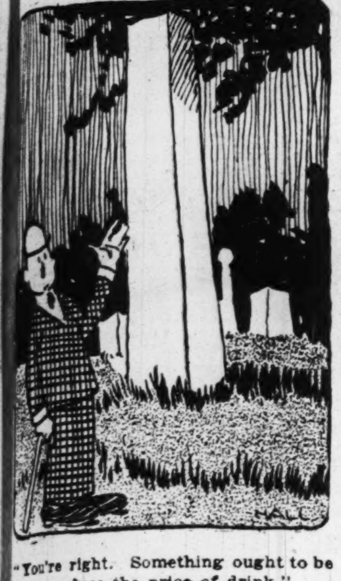
"Do you know that last year in this untry over sixteen hundred million dolrs was spent for liquor? That's terri-e."



"You're right. Something ought to be one to reduce the price of drink."

"Is there a single thing you can say n favor of liquor?"

"Yes, they say a glass of whisky will reak up a cold."

"Yes, and six glasses will break up a ome."

"I haven't got a home; I'm a widower."

"You ought to get married again."

"No, thanks; it's cheaper to have my cks darned at the laundry."

"Perhaps you don't know that I'm a vorced woman. Half the managers on roadway owe me money."

"Back salary or alimony?"

"Don't jest."

"Did your husband leave you much?"

"About twice a week."

"No, no; I mean, did he leave you any roperty?"

"Nothing but a pair of suspenders."

COLONIAL.

"I've been more than a friend to you. When you first came to this country alone and penniless, who stood by you? I did."

"Yes, and last night when I missed my diamond scarf pin who stood by me? You did."

"Do you mean to imply that I stole your scarf pin?"

"Certainly not; only if you hadn't stood by me perhaps I wouldn't have lost it."

"How much was the pin worth?"

"I don't know; how much did you get on it?"

"Please understand once and for all that I haven't got your pin."

"Well, give me the ticket and we'll call it square."

"O, come now, there no sense in two old friends like us fighting."

"Well, I guess you're right. But say, I hardly expected to see you today."

"Why, how's that?"

"Somebody told me you had been gored to death by a mad bull."

"No; that was my brother."

"Well, I'm sorry to hear that."

PALACE.

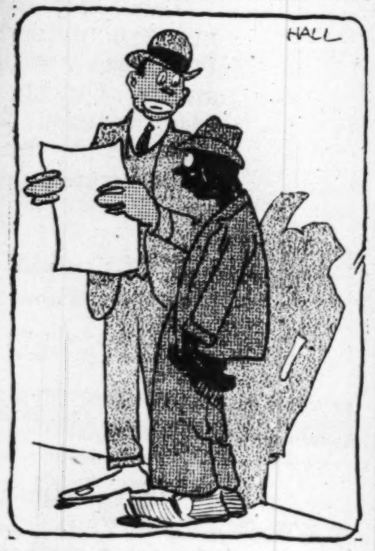
Conroy and Lemaire:

"So this is your life insurance policy?"

"Yes."

"Well, it's no good."

"No good?"



"No; I don't get a cent out of it. Have you ever been sick?"

"No, I've never been sick."

"Never in your career?"

"No, not there, either."

"Tell me how much do you pay on this policy?"

"One and a quarter a week."

"Pro rata?"

"I think that was his name."

Life Is a Series of Setbacks and Getbacks.

By HERBERT KAUFMAN.

[Copyright: 1915: By Herbert Kaufman.]

Say, you back there in the corner—what are you moping about? We can all see the dejection in your face and it invites rejection of your case.

How can we believe in a man who doesn't believe in himself? If you won't fight your own battles, we can't rely upon you to strike hard in a stranger's cause.

Where necessity has failed to rouse, mere wages can never stimulate ability.

You've been passing through one of the most valuable periods in your career, and you haven't capitalized it.

Force of circumstance has made you pause for readjustment. You've had time to think calmly—to take stock—to cross examine yourself thoroughly upon your resources.

But instead of learning the new-fangled notions and the very latest tangents of trade, you keep recalling the yesterdays which demonstrated a lack of something in your nature which has left you stranded today.

When you set out on your journey to success you selected an old fashioned route. There weren't nearly so many roads to achievement.

You plodded along until you reached the jumping off place and you haven't yet awakened to the fact that before you are stretching a hundred untrampled highways, any of which leads to a bigger future than the goal upon which you originally fixed.

At this particular moment when we are inaugurating a horde of industries to supply ourselves with products that Europe can no longer supply, with every paper announcing the organization of companies to exploit a range of inventions, the manufacture and marketing of which will call for a legion of specialists and experts and workers, you, blinded by doubt and cowardice, nurse your yellow streak and display in attitude and tone all the shameful weakness of the self-whipped man.

You're as good as you ever were—as competent now as when you held a job.

You can do as much, deliver the same degree of efficient service; nothing is missing but your nerve, and until you find that you'll find us incredulous and uninterested.

You're not despised—it isn't illegal to lose a position.

You're behaving as though you'd committed a crime and apply for consideration with the diffidence and humility of a mendicant.

It is no favor that you seek. Employers give no more than they receive when they hire skilled and reliable men.

Drop that bearing of apology and go out and get what belongs to you.

Quit brooding and get into a normal frame of mind.

There's nothing wrong with you.

You're undergoing an experience which all of us have encountered. Life is a series of setbacks and getbacks.

Fortune plays ball with us from time to time, for our ultimate good.

She gives an occasional hard slam to send us bounding on to higher and bigger things.

MOTOR ROUTE MAP AND LOG TO GALESBURG.

By L. M. Steffens.

THE skeleton chart, which is the wirdup of the maps covering the middle west, gives the trunk line routes and mileages to and from all of the route centers. Looking at this map one will see that Chicago serves as a hub for all of the important routes traversing the United States east and west.

Although the Lincoln highway does not invade the city, the greater percentage of transcontinental travel will stop in Chicago and then go west to De Kalb, Ill., where it will meet the Lincoln highway again.

A new highway has been recently promoted from Chicago to Chattanooga, Tenn., via Danville, Ill.; Crawfordsville, Ind., Indianapolis, Columbus, Louisville, Ky., and Nashville, Tenn. This trail will be one of the most important highways running north and south in the country.

The route, which is known as the Dixie highway, will be marked on all telephone poles all the way and the motorist will not have an arduous time in keeping on the road. It will also no doubt promote the building of some good roads in the southeastern part of the state, for Illinois wanted the Dixie highway to go south from Danville, Ill., through Chrisman, Paris, and Terre Haute, Ind., but this route was objected to by the Dixie highway promoters.

The Illinois highway department has given the cost of twenty-three roads averaging 24.1 miles. Four of these roads are to be of a brick construction and nineteen are to be of concrete. The brick roads will cost approximately $13,030. The concrete roads range from a minimum cost of $9,000 to $17,000 per mile. The general average based upon twenty-three sections will cost $10,400 per mile.

An excellent feature of the Illinois state aid system is that as soon as the state has accepted the task of building a road the duty of maintaining it forever afterward rests entirely upon the state.

Illinois will have two interesting races this month. The Galesburg race, which is the first on the list, will be held on Wednesday, and the Maywood race will take place on Saturday, June 19.

The Galesburg century will have as its attractions several of the drivers who competed in the recent 500 mile race at Indianapolis, as well as a number who could not get their cars tuned up in time for the Hoosier classic.

Ten entries have been filed to date and others are expected before the list closes. The Duesenberg team shows strong with three cars, two of which got well inside the prize money at Indianapolis. The team includes Eddie O'Donnell, Tom Alley, and Bill Chandler. O'Donnell won fifth place in the 500 mile race with an average of 81.47 miles an hour, while his teammate Alley finished eighth with an average of close to eighty miles an hour. Chandler, who had retired from the racing game, has agreed to come back for the Galesburg race and will make an effort to lower Mulford's great record made in last year's event. Chandler appeared in the 500 mile race as relief driver on two of the cars.

Among the other entries are Joe Cooper with the Sebring, W. W. Brown with the Du Chesneau, Andy Burt with the Stutz, S. Ostewig with an Apperson special, and Jack Doughty with a Crown special.

Ralph De Palma, winner of the last 500 mile race, who competed at Galesburg last year, has agreed to enter the coming event provided he can complete repairs on his Mercedes in time to reach the course. The entries of Bob Burman with his Peugeot and John De Palma with his Delage also are expected.

The following route log to Galesburg is over gravel road practically all the way, except for a stretch of road between Galva and Galesburg, which is dirt:

"Will you please inform me as to the advisability of selecting the National Old Trail route to California, leaving Illinois about June 15? We have thought we would like to take that way out and the Lincoln highway returning. Some have advised us against this plan on account of probable extreme heat at this time of the year, but we much prefer this way if not too hazardous. We would appreciate an early reply from you so that we can complete our plans.
"J. L. TAYLOR, Chicago.

The National Old Trail route is a southern route, passing through the following states: Southern Illinois, Missouri, Kansas, Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona, and California. Not all good cars are as yet covered with Pantasote tops—but you can always take Genuine
Pantasote
as the sure sign of a good car

It shows that the maker of the car is giving full value. It shows that the present price cutting competition in the automobile industry has not turned that maker toward a less expensive and less durable top material.

Genuine Pantasote is the top material that is recognized as without a peer—for perfect shelter, perfect appearance, longest wear and ability to withstand all weather conditions, folding and misuse.

In buying a big thing like a car, the top material may be considered an unimportant little detail, but just think about this for a minute. Consider that the top is chiefly responsible for the trim, new and stay-new appearance of your car and your personal comfort in bad weather.

The Defense of America

OUR NAVY

Magnificent Pictures of Uncle Sam's Men-o'-War

FREE TO YOU

Beginning With Next Sunday's Tribune

At this critical period in our country the American people place their greatest faith for continued defense in the United States Navy.

Admittedly there are defects in our navy. We need more superdreadnaughts, submarines, destroyers and battle cruisers. But the big fighters that we already have are big fighters.

We haven't the largest armada in the world. And there are four or five European ships that shoot a little farther. But we lead in marksmanship. According to our experts, our ships' guns shoot faster and truer and throw a larger amount of destruction in a given time than any other ships' guns.

We believe our gunners are the best of any gunners in any navy of the seven seas. They can hit pretty nearly anything ten miles away, whether it be standing still, speeding or bobbing up and down. So we think our navy could be relied upon to give a good account of itself should occasion demand.

To give Tribune readers a better knowledge of this bulwark of national defense

The Sunday Tribune Beginning Next Sunday

will print a series of photographs of the capital ships of the United States Navy. These photographs will be furnished free as a supplement with The Sunday Tribune. They will be printed by The Tribune's rotogravure process, in sepia tinted ink, on substantial paper.

They will be 8x11 inches in size and will be

ALL READY TO FRAME

The first picture to be printed will be that of the United States Battleship Arizona

The superdreadnaught Arizona, Battleship 39, will be launched on June 19. It was built at the Navy Yard in New York and the limit placed by Congress on its cost was $7,425,000. Its displacement is 31,400 tons, its speed 21 knots, its length 600 feet, its breadth 97½ feet. Its armament consists of twelve 14-inch 45 caliber guns, twenty-two 5-inch 51 caliber guns, four 3 pounder saluting guns and four 21-inch submerged torpedo tubes. It carries 915 officers and men.

FURNITURE ODDS AND ENDS

About 1,400 pieces have been greatly reduced in price, as we want to clear them all out this week. Many of these reduced selling prices represent less than our actual cost; others are priced at less than manufacturer's cost.

We cannot furnish duplicates or matched pieces in the majority of cases. For instance, we may have rockers, but no chairs, or chairs without rockers to match. While you will find dressers in almost every conceivable size, style, wood, and finish, we cannot furnish chiffoniers, dressing tables, or other pieces which exactly match.

If you want to save a surprising amount of money come out this week sure. Any South Side or through route street car line will transfer you on 35th-st. direct to our door. Everything brand new, priced in plain figures.

A REBUILT CADILLAC

It's a Safe Used Car to Buy

SPECIAL VALUES NOW.

A rebuilt Cadillac is superior to any new car at the same price. They are the truest values on the street. By rebuilt we mean that the cars have been taken entirely apart, each part examined, and, if necessary, replaced by a new part made at the Cadillac factory; the entire car repainted and refinished like new; all equipment put in first class condition—the whole car, in fact, carefully reconstructed until it is good as new in every detail.

We offer Cadillacs exclusively, as we do not accept other makes in trade. Consequently we are as interested in the performances of these rebuilt cars as we are in new Cadillacs. In actual service values these cars are worth a great deal more than we ask for them, and we usually have a variety of body styles to select from. See them before you buy.

The Patriot

Mlle. Marthe Chenal is the inspiration of all France. She has made a life long reputation by her singing of "The Marseillaise." Whenever there is a matinee for the wounded, whenever patriots gather for courage, Chenal is there inspiring them. They say she is ruining her voice; the part demands so much and she does it about fifteen times a week. She electrifies her audiences, lifts them up, carries them away. Miss Carolyn Wilson, our staff correspondent in Paris, says that even a neutral American is moved to tears at the sight of the patriotic enthusiasm Chenal awakens.

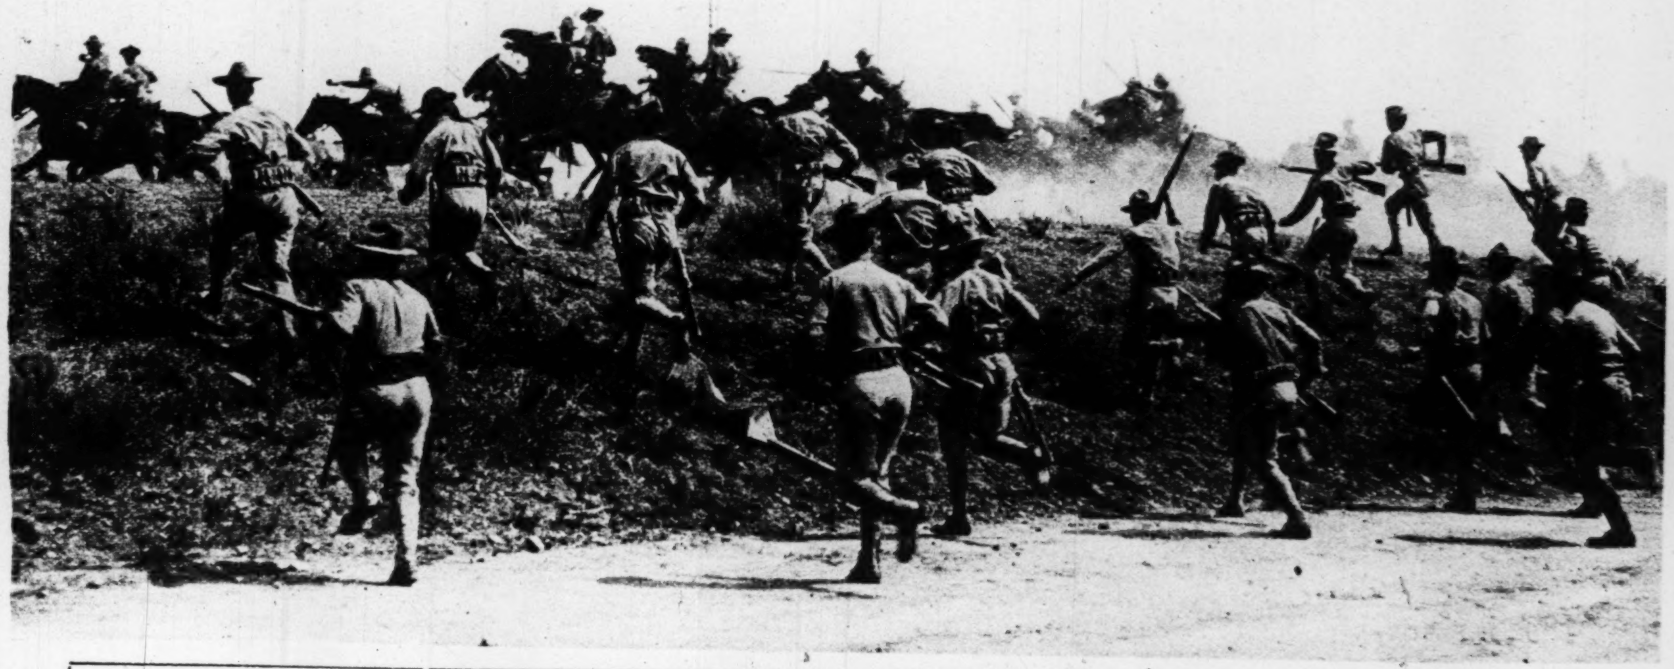
A view of the sanctuary in Santa Brigida church in the heart of the City of Mexico. This is the church of the rich retired planters of Mexico who have taken up their residence in the nation's capital. The picture shows how the church has suffered in the fortunes of war.



UNITED STATES MARINES AT MAKE-BELIEVE WAR.

This shows the fighters of the Second battalion, Fourth regiment, United States Marine corps, in sham battle action at San Diego, Cal. The battalion consists of three companies of 100 men each. The Second battalion is one of the "crack" organizations of the marine corps. Many of the men were enlisted in Chicago. The marines are the "sea soldiers" of our armament. They are always first to feel the brunt of oversea war if expeditionary forces are to be landed. The picture below shows the marines charging in an advance screened by cavalry, a rather unusual military scene.

WHERE THE GENERAL SLEEPS.

This photograph of Grant's tomb was taken through a gun port on the U. S. S. Kansas in the Hudson river, New York. Tapering away in gray silhouette one sees the steel barrel of a five inch rifle. Aside from its artistic merit the picture suggests what might happen to the palaces of Riverside drive and New York generally if an enemy's fleet ever battered past the harbor defenses.

GERMANY STILL EATS

The allies' announced plan for the starvation of Germany—the announcement to which Germany retaliated with its undersea campaign—has resulted in the sending of these pictures to America.

These views, obviously taken with the approval of the German government, show scenes of plenty about the food depots, some of the sources of food and the movement for the conservation of the food supply.

The spade and the ploughshare have indeed been made implements of war by the Germans. Learned chemists and the highest scientific authorities of the empire are the advisers of the government and the people in the administration and distribution of the food. Germany is taking every precaution against getting hungry.

Pictures may be submitted in prints on any photographic medium and in any size. However, contrasty gloss finished paper is to be preferred and the standard size is 8 by 10 inches.
